GOV. ROOSEVELT BEGINS HIS RACE FOR PRESIDENCY

Talks of Tariff and Liquor Issue.

The full text of Gov. Roosevelt's opening campaign speech appears on page 6.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Albany, N. Y., July 30.—[Special.]—The gospel of Democracy was preached tonight by Franklin D. Roosevelt in his first campaign address to the nation.

The Democratic candidate for President sat comfortably in his study at the governor's mansion in Albany before a radio microphone through which his speech was broadcast. "In his own home," as he put it, under a reign of quiet and of "common sense and friendliness," he read and commented on the full text of his party's platform.

The governor says he is proud of that document and as he read it through he interpolated now and then to tell why he thought it was sound and progressive and pointed a course out of the nation's economic wilderness.

Condemns G. O. P. Deficits.

Gov. Roosevelt charged the Hoover administration with extravagance and pointed to deficits it had piled upon the taxpayers. He assailed as unsound the inflation schemes of the administration, and said they were undermining government credit.

"Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits," he declared. "Stop the deficits. Let us have equal courage to reverse the policy of the Republican leaders and insist on a sound currency."

He called for a downward revision of the tariff, which he said would settle the question of international debts by giving foreign governments the financial ability to pay the debts.

Repeal Plank Has "Meaning."

Going through the issues of finance, the governor paused toward the close and then dropped a few pearls which might have been cast before the Democratic members of the present congress.

"Now we come," said the governor, his voice taking on fresh vigor, "to the famous repeal plank. It is simple and it has meaning."

And he read the plank voicing the demand of the Democratic party that congress "immediately" move to the repeal of the 18th amendment and that pending repeal congress "should modify the Volstead act to legalize beer."

"Nothing needs to be added to that," declared Gov. Roosevelt, "except——" and in the candidate's exception lie the pearls for the present members of congress.

Speed Repeal, He Urges.

"Nothing needs to be added to that," said the governor, "except that if the present congress takes no action I shall urge the new congress to carry out these provisions."

Thus the candidate himself has shown the way to the Democratic congressmen who in the session just closed opposed measures for repeal introduced after the platform had been adopted at Chicago and who will meet again next December in the short session of congress.

Mr. Roosevelt offered proposals for the relief of the nation and in general consigned the G. O. P. administration to oblivion. He attacked the fiscal policy of the Hoover leadership and charged the present economic plight of the nation and the world to Republican bungling.

Joins Tariff and War Debts.

Perhaps the most significant utterance the governor made was in his joining of the issues on the tariff and the war debts. Democratic leaders have detected a tendency of the Hoover government toward cancellation of the foreign debts. Gov. Roosevelt in effect swept aside the debts issue by saying that with a revision of the tariff rates America's foreign debtors will be financially able to pay the debts.

The tariff wall raised by the Republicans against foreign trade is so high, the governor said, that industry both here and abroad has been unable to scale it to regain prosperity. He declared the tariff should not be lowered to a point where it brings peasant labor abroad into competition with Americans on a higher scale of living, but that the rates can be adjusted within sound reason. The result will be, Gov. Roosevelt said, a lowering of costs to American consumers and resumption of trade with other nations. He repeated his belief that tariff rates can be adjusted by an "across-the-table" negotiation with foreign governments.

REPUBLIC GOES TO POLLS TODAY; 5 DIE IN RIOTS

Chancellor Makes Final Appeal.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, July 30.—Thirty-seven million German voters will go to the polls tomorrow to end the most violently waged election campaign in the thirteen years of the republic's existence.

Twenty-one parties, listing 8,000 candidates, are fighting for 600 seats in the German reichstag. The parties are lined up either for or against the republic. That is the issue which has precipitated political clashes resulting in more than 100 deaths and 1,200 injuries in the last month of the campaign, resulting in a military dictatorship for Prussia, Germany's biggest and most powerful state.

Five Slain in Clashes.

Five more deaths were added to the campaign toll in clashes today. Two members of the Republican reichsbanner organization were shot to death when a group came into conflict with Nazi "storm troopers" near Koenigsberg in East Prussia. The Nazis suffered five wounded. At Esslingen in Wuerttemberg police killed two communists and wounded one. Two police officers were wounded in this clash. A communist was slain by police at Hindenburg.

[A United Press dispatch from Munich said assassins last night attempted the life of Julius Streicher, Munich leader of the Hitlerites. Their bullets went wild and Streicher was uninjured. He was riding in the automobile usually used by Adolph Hitler, en route to Nuremburg.]

Another death occurred in Berlin when a plane crashed while dropping political leaflets over the city. Gerhard Zjganke, general secretary of the Centrist party, was the victim.

300 Jailed in Berlin.

Political brawls featured the closing hours of the campaign. Police arrested 300 persons in the capital alone for taking part in street fights. The entire Berlin police force of 20,000 men has been on duty since 10 o'clock this morning. They will be on the streets until Monday morning.

Police cars, mounted with machine guns, and motorcycle police are patrolling the streets. The army stands ready to act in case of major disorders.

President Paul von Hindenburg's ten day election truce goes into effect at midnight, prohibiting all political gatherings.

Two bitter political enemies shared the government's radio tonight in final appeals to the voters. One was Chancellor Franz von Papen, who defended the aristocratic and military government he heads. The other was Karl Severing, whom Von Papen ousted as Prussian minister of the interior.

Independent of Parties.

"The government for the first time since the revolution stands in a campaign independent of the parties," Chancellor von Papen said. "We are called the cabinet of barons, as though we favored a certain small class. The names of the men chosen by President Paul von Hindenburg are unimportant. But if among those whom the president called there are a number of bearers of old names, these men know doubly well that the tradition which they must continue will stand or fall with their devotion to and their responsibility for the people and the nation."

The chancellor's voice rang with an iron determination to retain the power he now holds "to rebuild more firmly a new, a greater Germany."

Referring to the economic situation, Von Papen incorporated the principles Adolf Hitler, the former Austrian corporal and paperhanger, has been preaching in the name of National Socialism for years.

Refers to Economic Situation.

"The fundamental question of reorganizing the economic system must be decided in this election," the chancellor continued. "Some one must have the courage to surmount and alter economic conditions. We must end the old and barren discussion of capitalism and socialism, and we must return to the old principle that the common weal ranks with self-interest."

He then hinted at revision of the constitution.

"Tomorrow will be a decisive day for the country's future," he said. "The German people long have comprehended that the emergency structure of Weimar [meaning the republican constitution] does not afford pos-

COUNT KILLS SELF IN DIVORCE ROW; "WIFE A 'HELLCAT,'" NOTE SAYS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Cuba, July 30.—José Rafael de Santovenia, 65, count of Villareal, a prominent representative of the old Spanish aristocracy here, committed suicide today after a Supreme court verdict pronounced him guilty of abusing his wife, Countess Maria Herminia Sotolero de Santovenia, who had sued him for divorce.

The countess had charged the count with having intimate relations with an 18 year old stenographer. The count left the following letter:

"My wife is a hellcat who ruined my life through continuous jealousy. I was proud of my Spanish blue blood and aristocratic descent and was unable to stand my wife. She discarded traditional noble social rules and engaged in a most disgraceful love affair with a prominent wealthy Cuban bachelor.

"Later my wife sued for divorce because I had a little entertainment of my own to sweeten my last years. I stood all bravely except the court decision that I was guilty of abusing her. Rather than abide by the divorce solution, and rather than to have the scandal go on forever, I have decided to take my life."

WIFE DISARMS BANDIT; HUSBAND KNOCKS HIM OUT

The quick action of Mrs. William Pallowick, 845 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park, led to the capture of a bandit last night. The robber, who refused to give his name, was pummeled so severely by her husband that he was taken to the West Suburban hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Pallowick were driving their car into the garage in the rear of their home when the robber confronted them. After Pallowick had alighted, the gunman ordered his wife to step down also. As she alighted, she slapped the gun from his hand.

At the same time Pallowick punched the astonished bandit. Mrs. Pallowick picked up the weapon and fired six times into the air to attract help. Policeman John Pickett of the Oak Park force, who was off duty and in the neighborhood, ran to the scene as did Village Trustee Lawrence Rice of 929 Mapleton avenue.

Reports $104 Stolen from Cradle, Foundling Home

Mrs. Katherine Slade, director of The Cradle, foundling home at 2039 Ridge avenue, Evanston, yesterday reported to police that $104 had been stolen from the safe in the office of the institution. The money was taken between 6 o'clock Thursday night and 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, she said.

Gronau Forced Down; May Fly In Tomorrow

Detroit, Mich., July 30.—[Special.]—The trans-Atlantic flying boat Groenland Wal, in which Capt. Wolfgang von Gronau and his crew of three were flying to Chicago from Ottawa, Ont., was forced down on Lake St. Clair this afternoon because of a broken water line in the forward motor. A preliminary examination of the damaged motor, which is in tandem with a second motor, indicated that the German flyers will not be able to take off for Chicago again until Monday.

Mechanics started to overhaul the damaged motor as soon as the Groenland Wal was docked at the amphibian ramp in the Detroit river an hour after it was forced down. Capt. von Gronau thought a bearing had been burned out when the water line broke, and if that proves to be true the repairs cannot be completed until Monday, the mechanics said.

When he landed in Lake St. Clair Capt. von Gronau hailed a passing motor boat which towed the plane to the dock. The flyers accepted an invitation to be the guests in Detroit of R. C. Marshall, president of Trans-American Air lines.

10,000 WAIT IN VAIN.

Ten thousand Chicagoans awaited the arrival of Capt. von Gronau on his third annual visit to the city at the ramp in Grant park for two hours yesterday afternoon. A majority of the crowd had gathered by 3 o'clock. When the rumor that the Groenland Wal had been forced down at Detroit was verified the crowds began to disperse about 5 o'clock.

The program for the reception was postponed indefinitely, to be revived and carried out as planned when the repairs on the damaged motor are completed and Capt. von Gronau takes off from Detroit for Chicago. Capt. George H. Weideling, chairman of the reception committee, advised the members of his committee to await the announcement of the start of the German flyers for Chicago in newspapers and by radio stations.

Committee at the Ramp.

Among those who waited at the ramp with Capt. Weideling were Dr. George Schaller, acting German consul general; City Greeter Gaw and Mrs. Gaw, Postmaster and Mrs. Arthur C. Lueder, Ernst Kreutgen, vice president of the board of local improvements, representing Mayor Cermak; Congressman Fred Britten, Capt. C. W. Connell of the army air corps, representing the war department; and Capt. Herbert L. Kumpfer of the air corps, representing Maj. Gen. Frank Parker, commander of the sixth corps area.

The reception planned for Capt. von Gronau and his crew when they reach the city includes a visit to the city hall, to be welcomed by a representative of Mayor Cermak, a large reception by Chicagoans of German descent at the Lincoln Turner hall, and other affairs in the hands of his agent, Mrs. Arthur Packard. He is to address the Rotary club at luncheon in the Hotel Sherman on Tuesday.

BEACH BATHERS REVEL TOO LATE; FIFTY ARRESTED

Fifty young men and women were arrested this morning at the Ardmore avenue beach on complaints of residents in the vicinity that their revelry disturbed them. The bathers were first told to leave because it was after midnight, and when they refused they were taken to the Summerdale station by Policemen Thomas Cleary and Melvin Johnson.

Mrs. Eva L. White, whose home at 5815 Sheridan road, is adjacent to the beach, signed disorderly conduct complaints against each of the bathers.

Police System Reorganized; Pick 8 Chiefs

Chicago's police department was given a new structural organization in an order issued late yesterday by Commissioner James P. Allman. It takes effect at midnight tonight.

Most important of the changes was the separation of the uniformed force from all other units and a thorough revamping of the methods of doing its work. This service will have a general supervisor, Capt. Matthew Zimmer, noted as a disciplinarian, whose new title will be chief of the uniformed force.

Assistant Commissioner.

From the outline of his duties it appears that he will have the powers of an assistant police commissioner.

Under Chief Zimmer will be six divisional supervisors chosen from the department's captains. Each will be in charge of a territory comprising six or seven of the present police districts, the commanders of which will be directly responsible to the supervisor. Chief Zimmer's pay is raised to $5,500 and that of the division supervisors to $5,000 each. Hitherto all have been drawing the captain's rate of $4,000.

Supervising captains are Ira McDowell, who takes over the loop and the near south side; Thomas C. Wolfe, far south side; John C. Prendergast, southwest side; John Stege, west side; Daniel A. Gilbert, northwest side, and Thomas Condon, north side.

Creates Traffic Bureau.

Scarcely less interesting was the creation of a traffic bureau and the appointment of Capt. John Horan, who has been in command of the central station, to command it. His title will be chief of traffic.

The detective bureau remains as it was before, a separate entity, but the stolen automobile section which has operated independently is added to it. Chief of Detectives William Schoemaker remains in command. Acting Lieut. Walter Storms, who has been acting deputy chief in this department, is given the title of deputy chief of detectives and his salary increased from $3,900 to $5,500.

None of the pay figures take into account the seventy-eight days' pay deducted from city pay rolls as a concession to the depression and slow tax intake.

Bruce Smith's Plan.

All the changes had been recommended in a plan worked out by Bruce Smith, police expert, who was brought here by the Association of Commerce to survey the department. In his report Mr. Smith pointed out that there was a broad gap between the district commanders and the commissioner of police and little direct supervision of the districts by higher authority than their captains.

Theoretically the divisional supervisors will be able to keep direct contacts with all districts under them, while the commissioner and the uniformed police chief can maintain close relationships with the six supervisors.

Many years ago similar contacts were made between the chief, or commissioner, and the district captains through inspectors. Their office was abolished. From about 1925 to 1929 deputy commissioners performed the same function.

Eight Major Divisions.

Commissioner Allman's order divided the entire police organization into eight major services. They are the uniformed force, the detective bureau, the traffic bureau, bureau of department records and property, bureau of criminal information and statistics, personal bureau, crime prevention division and morals division.

Chief of Traffic Horan will have

BUSINESS MEN AT JOHNSTOWN FEAR CLASHES

Mayor Alone Urges Army to Stay.

Johnstown, Pa., July 30.—[Special.]—Gov. Pinchot today was requested to send state troopers "to protect the city" as the encampment of bonus army marchers, set up in Ideal park here, swelled rapidly. Tonight more than 2,000 were in the camp.

Informed that 5,000 men, women, and children might be bivouaced on the city's outskirts by Monday, Cambria county officials announced they would "invite" the army to leave at once.

"We want to deal with these veterans as decently as possible, but they will have to leave," declared Sheriff Homer George. "We're hard pressed now to care for our own unemployed."

McCloskey Holds Out.

Mayor Eddie McCloskey, redheaded former pugilist, who invited the army's staff to settle here, replied to the growing opposition of his townspeople by saying:

"To hell with everybody—let 'em come and let 'em stay."

Fearing trouble between the townspeople and the veterans, Chief of Police C. E. Briney recalled to duty 25 city patrolmen who had been furloughed in the city's economy program. The problems which Chief Briney and Sheriff George face is complicated by the fact that the main camp of the veterans, while only four miles from Johnstown, is across the Somerset county line.

Capt. Doak A. Carter, chief of staff of the bonus army, declared that "if any trouble starts here it won't be started by the army's members."

Leaders Oust Communists.

Carter, as the protests of citizens and officials against the veterans' presence mounted steadily, telephoned to Walter W. Waters, commander of the veterans during the sojourn in Washington, and urged him to come here to control the situation. It was announced Waters would arrive in Johnstown tomorrow morning.

Meanwhile Carter issued orders to remove three known communists from the camp and personally led the search for them.

"We will have none of them among our men," he asserted.

Mayor McCloskey apparently was the only city official in favor of the bonus army's coming here and he appeared to have little support from the townspeople.

Business Men Ask Help.

The request for state troopers was sent to Gov. Pinchot through Maj. Lynn Adams, superintendent of state police, by the board of directors of the Johnstown Chamber of Commerce. Its message closed with the statement:

"Cannot care for own needy and situation here is serious."

Upon learning of this appeal Mayor McCloskey angrily sent a 128 word telegram to state police headquarters. It was wired collect and urged Maj. Adams to "Please pay no attention to Chamber of Commerce resolution," adding that "I'll take care of Johnstown."

A delegation, numbering at least 1,600, marched into camp from Jennerstown, 30 miles away, late today, and another group was reported en route from Boswell. Both contingents abandoned state owned trucks which were carrying them across the state.

TROOPS LEAVE CAPITAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 30.—[Special.]—War department orders today cleared Washington of all regular army troops, completely restoring civil government after two days of virtual martial law in the national capital.

The evacuation order was signed by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, army chief of staff, effective at 1 o'clock this afternoon, after the district commissioners had assured President Hoover through Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley that the police had the situation in hand and no longer needed army reinforcements.

Thus ended the two day military occupation of Washington, the first since 1919, when marines were called into action to help the police quell serious race riots.

Guard Roads to Capital.

Immediately after the departure of the troops the district commissioners banned the entrance of any organized body which could not prove its mission here was a lawful one. Strong police guards were posted at every roadhead into the city, with instructions to enforce the order rigidly and indiscriminately. The order was wired to the governors of Maryland and Virginia.

The district government's request that the military occupation be raised came after a series of early morning raids by police, which routed some 500 veterans from grassy billets under park trees. After immigration authorities and secret service operatives had weeded out several suspected communists for further investigation the remainder were marched to the Maryland line, put aboard trucks, and started for the Pennsylvania line. Police planned a roundup of vagrants each night to prevent the bonus seekers from drifting back.

Later in the morning the Oregon delegation, the first to arrive and the last to leave, marched out, with flags flying and drums playing, headed by a lone motorcycle policeman for an escort.

New Camp Near Capital.

Late tonight Walter W. Waters, commander in chief of the bonus army, announced that he had acquired control of a 25 acre tract of land, within 20 miles of Washington, in Maryland in the direction of Baltimore, of which he expects to establish a camp for the veterans driven from Washington. He declined to say whether he had bought the land or it had been given to him, but insisted the tract had been deeded to him personally.

Waters plans, which he said he would disclose to his men at Johnstown tomorrow, apparently are to make the tract a headquarters for a "nonpartisan political organization" [the khaki shirts]. Meanwhile Waters said he would ask Johnstown to "bear with the veterans until they can come to this property and establish their homes."

The tract is timbered and Waters indicated he expected veterans invited to make their homes there to cut the timber on a profit sharing basis and perhaps build log cabin homes.

Some 300 veterans began to retrace their steps to the city this morning but they were stopped by Maryland state police and about faced several blocks short of the district line. Word came back that several hundred more were scattered in the nearby woods, waiting to come back as soon as the regular army troops were evacuated. The last departing veterans were given a curt warning that if they returned they would face imprisonment and were advised to pass the word along to unconvinced buddies.

Communist Candidate Freed.

David Levison, Philadelphia, attorney for 15 alleged communists detained yesterday with John Ford, Negro communist candidate for Vice President, today obtained a writ of habeas corpus from Justice Oscar Luhring. The order directs Secretary of Labor Doak and district authorities to produce the men in court Tuesday to test the legality of their detention. The department of justice said six had been proved to have police records.

Ford was released early today and put on a train for New York. He pleaded with police not to send him back to his home in Alabama, where, he said, he feared he would be lynched.

Investigation will begin Monday seeking to place responsibility for the killing of William Hushka, Chicago veteran, who was shot fatally by a policeman in Thursday's rioting.

MEN HELD ARE REDS

Through the red Ex-service Men's league, Chicago communists concentrated on the bonus march in and out of Washington to spread their gospel of discontent under the guise of solicitude for war veterans, according to Lieut. Make Mills, veteran head of the industrial squad and authority on radical activity in this area. Three of the six Chicago men arrested in Washington on Friday by Federal agents for inciting the recent riots are widely known communist agitators, he said.

Harrison Reeves, Cedor Laschuk, and Erskine Brown, colored, have long been known in Chicago, according to Lieut. Mills, as agitators and trouble makers. Other local red leaders are known to have joined the bonus army a month ago, he said, among them George Repressas.

Two Graves Await Veteran.

Two graves yesterday awaited the body of William Hushka, 2316 West 23d place, war veteran who was killed in the riot of bonus marchers in Washington on Thursday. The body remained at the District of Columbia morgue pending the inquest tomorrow.

With a coffin and a plot of ground donated, preparations were being made by the Adjust the Bonus league for a military funeral in Chicago, according to Frank Bracciaventi, 845 Milton avenue. From Washington came word that leaders of the bonus invasion were considering plans for burial of the body in Arlington National cemetery.

Chinese Consuls to View Lotus Beds at Grass Lake

Dr. Koliang Yia, Chinese consul; his wife, Jennie, and Guey Hsing Wang, vice consul, will inspect the lotus beds at Grass lake today to determine whether the growths are similar to the Egyptian and Chinese lilies. Residents of Grass lake say the beds are the only ones of their kind in America. Prof. Ernest Ford, of the botany department of Northwestern university, has pronounced them to be ordinary water lilies. The Chinese officials will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn W. Beman, of Libertyville.

DEATH FOLLOWS RECEIVER PROBE; NEW QUIZ BEGUN

Widow of Witness Asks Coroner's Inquiry.

Alfred Nelson, 42 years old, janitor of the Fairfax Apartment hotel, 1369 Hyde Park boulevard, died at the Augustana hospital on Friday night as a result of a heart attack suffered last Tuesday.

It was learned yesterday that on Tuesday Nelson appeared before Master in Chancery Wirt E. Humphrey to testify in proceedings brought to remove the receiver from control of the hotel. He was a witness for a group of bondholders who charged that the receiver, Ald. Irving J. Schreiber of the 5th ward, who was appointed by Superior Judge Robert E. Gentzel on Oct. 19, was milking the property.

Widow Asks Investigation.

Yesterday Nelson's widow asked Coroner Walsh to investigate her husband's death. She said she believed that the strain to which he was subjected at the receivership hearing had been a contributing cause of his fatal illness.

Mrs. Nelson said that her husband testified to alleged graft when he was before Master in Chancery Humphrey. She said he told of needless decoration and redecoration of apartments durng only a few months. He also told of the reupholstering of furniture several times during the same period, she declared.

When the hearing was adjourned for luncheon on Tuesday, Mrs. Nelson said, her husband was met by one of Ald. Schreiber's lawyers in the hall.

Tells of Dismissal Threat.

"You are going to get a permanent vacation for this," she quoted the attorney as telling her husband. "Your testimony is going to get you a job in the Michigan mines where you worked before, because you won't be able to keep on working for us."

Coroner Walsh began an examination of the records of the case yesterday. It was disclosed that the Fairfax corporation had been owned by Paul Anderson when the $1,000,000 hotel was constructed seven years ago. At that time a $675,000 bond issue was floated with Wollenberger & Co. as trustee.

The receiver was appointed at the request of bondholders who charged that the 197 year lease upon the land was jeopardized because the 1928 and 1929 taxes amounting to approximately $50,000 were unpaid. Within a few days after the receiver was appointed Wollenberger & Co. went into bankruptcy.

Master in Chancery Humphrey said yesterday he recalled that during the morning session of Tuesday's hearing Nelson had testified to acts of alleged malfeasance on the part of the receiver. During the afternoon, however, Nelson repudiated most of his testimony, Master Humphrey said.

"I could see that the man was ill during the afternoon," he said. "I noticed it because he didn't appear to be in bad health during the morning. They told me they wanted to bring him back the next day but it was obvious that he was in no condition to come." Nelson was taken to the hospital the next morning.

Judge Gentzel said he recalled the appointment of Ald. Schreiber as receiver but did not remember anything further about the case. An examination of his court docket showed that the motion for the removal of the receiver had been continued until the fall term of court.

Ald. Schreiber could not be reached last evening. Newspaper files show that involuntary bankruptcy proceedings were filed against him in the federal court only a week ago.

A MARYLAND WOMAN GIVES 25 ACRES FOR BONUS ARMY CAMP

Baltimore, Md., July 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Maud Edgell of Catonsville, Md., tonight donated 25 acres of land in Anne Arundel county, midway between Baltimore and Washington, for the establishment of a permanent camp for the bonus expeditionary forces in Maryland.

Mrs. Edgell, in announcing the donation to Walter W. Waters, leader of the veteran force, said she had been moved to make the offer by the plight of the veterans after they had been driven from the capital.

The land is located near Waterbury station on the Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis railroad, about 20 miles from Baltimore and the same distance from Washington.

Mrs. Edgell said although she has not been active in helping the bonus seekers, she witnessed the movement of troops upon them in Washington and her sympathies were aroused to the point that she decided to give them the land.

FOUND ON 'L' STRUCTURE; DIES.

William Petryna, 56 years old, 2021 Rice street, who was found unconscious on the elevated railroad right of way just south of Dempster street in Evanston early yesterday, died in the late afternoon at St. Francis hospital. The police assumed he had been struck by a train.

REALTOR HUNTS CANARY; TAKEN FOR A BURGLAR

Police of the Hyde Park station were sent to 5236 Harper avenue last night after a report came in that a burglar was crawling over the roof there.

They discovered that the climber was not a burglar. He was Frank E. Olson, 30 years old, head of a real estate firm at 1525 East 53rd street, and he was looking for a canary.

"You see," explained Mr. Olson, "I have a great affection for my canary. His name is Peter. Tonight I went to my office just to hear him sing. He flew away and up on this building. I climbed after him."

FALL OF INSULL LEAVES ITS MARK ON VAST ESTATE

Baronial Seat May Be Cut Into Small Farms.

BY CHESLY MANLY.

The town of Libertyville, where the residents lament "the passing of Mr. Insull," has an official population of 3,873, but, in the words of Frank Rose, one of the chief mourners, it was a one man town.

Samuel Insull has gone to Europe, presumably to stay, and will no longer dominate the material and spiritual welfare of Libertyville. He is living on a pension in France now, but planning to take a little place in England for the remainder of his days. Frank Rose, for twenty years superintendent of the private grounds on Hawthorn farm, will not receive the pension on which he had depended for his security in retirement, nor will the other veteran employés on the vast estate.

"Where Is It Coming From?"

Mr. Rose, who was born in the "ould country," does not feel that they took away his pension, but asks, "Where's the money to come from?"

Hawthorn farm, pride and joy of Mr. Rose and sixty or more other employés for so many years, and the great baronial seat of the departed utility magnate, is now a problem on the hands of his creditors. Like all the other properties held by Mr. Insull, it has been turned over to his creditors.

Mr. Insull put up Hawthorn farm as security for loans in his desperate struggle to avert the collapse of his holding companies and investment trusts last April. The crash swept away his personal fortune, once estimated at $100,000,000, and the investments of thousands of persons aggregating upwards of three-quarters of a billion dollars.

Acquired 29 Years Ago.

The 4,300 acre place probably will be cut into small farms and disposed of to the best interest of the creditors, all of which are banks. Real estate experts say there is no hope of selling such a tract of land in one piece for anything like its real value.

Hawthorn farm, which Mr. Insull began acquiring 29 years ago with the purchase of the old Barr farm, stretches three miles along the west side of Milwaukee avenue, just south of Libertyville and about 35 miles northwest of Chicago. Great trees push out over the iron, spiked fence that surrounds it and all that can be seen from the road is an occasional glimpse of grain in the shock. Gates marked "Private" guard the entrances.

Sheltered Residence.

The main residence sets back from the road, near the northeast corner of the farm, sheltered from profane eyes by trees and shrubs that dot the 101 acres of beautified grounds. It is said that Mr. Insull planned to extend the landscape grounds over the farm.

The $125,000 house, of Italian Riviera architecture, was constructed 16 years ago but is in sound condition today, needing only minor external refurbishing. It is of stucco plastered with a caen stone composition which is washed with milk.

A spacious lawn leads to the trees and evergreens in front of the house, but to the rear is a vast expanse of sunken gardens, flower beds, bird sanctuaries, and long isles between rows of luxuriant evergreens. A stranger on the grounds has difficulty finding his way if he wanders too far.

Immense Swimming Pool.

There is an immense swimming pool just back of the house and at the end of the open space beyond it is a gateway formed by two white marble Corinthian columns. Farther on is an arbor 100 yards long supported by Doric columns and overhung with grape and ornamental vines.

To the south of the house are three artificial lagoons with stone viaducts connecting them. Stately swans patrol the lagoons and the belligerent cobs spread their wings and threaten any intruder who might molest their young. Goldfish a foot long may be seen idling in the green moss.

North of the house is the lodge, a greenhouse that would suffice for a good sized town, an office, and the only postoffice in the country operated by the government on a private farm. Northwest is a nursery, as large as the average commercial nursery, with many thousands of shrubs.

All this represents years of expert toil by the 15 employés who have kept the grounds in a state of artificial perfection. But the absence of the hand of Insull is plainly visible now. The house is boarded up. The shutters on the windows are badly in need of paint. Sparrows infest the eaves. The grass is cut, but it is ragged at the edges around the walks.

Mrs. Insull was a lover of birds. Besides the two sanctuaries, with their fruit trees and berry bushes, there are dozens of elaborate bird houses that once attracted martins, blue birds, and wrens. Now the note of a song bird is rarely heard. The sparrows keep up their incessant chatter and crows scream mockingly as they fly overhead. That is all.

Furnishings Moved Out.

The house was not opened this summer, and the furnishings, which belonged to Mrs. Insull, were moved out long ago. Only five employés, besides the farmers, remain to attend to the grounds, just enough to keep the place from going to seed. Formerly there were 62 employés, including 16 on the grounds, 14 household servants, and 32 men and women who worked on the farms.

This year the farmers are working for the first time on the share system. Formerly they were paid in cash, and their weekly pay checks, along with the other employés, meant an average of $2,500 for the town of Libertyville.

Mr. Insull's farming always resulted in a loss, often of many thousands of dollars for a year, exclusive of taxes and interest. But he kept the farm because, born in England, he was a lover of land and fine live stock. He developed the finest herd of Brown Swiss cattle in the country and raised blooded Suffolk Punch draft horses. He also kept a stable of thoroughbreds for riding. The draft horses and some of the cattle are still on the farm.

Mr. Insull was a heavy contributor to each new church that went up in the Libertyville community and took an active interest in the schools. He erected an $18,000 model school on part of his land for the children of Hawthorn farm and others in the district. He was for years the principal supporter of the Continental Memorial hospital.

Born in Insull Hospital.

Thus many of the residents used Insull light and gas, sent their children who were born in an Insull hospital to an Insull school. They rode into Chicago on an Insull electric line, to work, if they happened to be executives or employés, for an Insull company, or to attend the Insull Chicago Civic opera. They banked at an Insull bank, the Libertyville Trust and Savings; played golf at Countryside, an Insull course; purchased a lot and erected a new home on an Insull development. Mr. Insull once owned 75 per cent of the stock in the Libertyville Trust and Savings bank, a going institution, but held much less when the crash came.

The Countryside development west of Mundelein consists of 2,000 acres, and its conceivers, of whom Samuel Insull was the moving spirit, contemplated a colony for millionaires. Mr. Insull was interested only in the Lake County Land association, which had a 495 acre tract cornering on Countryside lake. But this gave the privileges of the lake to all who built on the tract. Samuel Insull Jr. erected a $50,000 summer house on an island in the lake. The younger Insull's other home was the old John R. Thompson place, which became a part of Hawthorn farm.

Mellody Farms Property.

Another property equity forfeited by Mr. Insull to his creditors was the Mellody Farms Country club, an ambitious project undertaken by a syndicate of 26 millionaires. The 846 acre farm west of Lake Forest was purchased from the widow of J. Ogden Armour in 1928, the consideration being reported as $2,500,000. There is still a mortgage of $1,000,000 on the property. The proposed club was to have been a paradise for millionaires. The great Italian villa of the Armours was to have been made into a club house. A locker house, to cost $100,000 and to connect with the mansion by a pergola, was partly constructed. One of the finest golf courses in the west was laid out. There was some talk recently of operating it as a public fee course, but this plan was abandoned.

A banker predicted that not a game of golf would ever be played at Mellody Farms. Another made the observation that sheep may be grazing on it soon. Like Countryside, but on a much larger scale, Mellody Farms was nipped in the bud by the depression.

Mr. Rose and other former employés on the Insull estate, many of whom lost their savings through investments in Insull companies, accept their fate uncomplainingly. They feel Mr. Insull did all he could in sacrificing his own fortune.

"We all esteemed him highly," one of them said.

TOUCHES MATCH TO A NAPHTHA BARREL; KILLED

Andrew Czanik, 16 years old, 506 151st street, East Chicago, was killed yesterday afternoon by an explosion of naphtha in a steel drum.

The accident occurred at 504 151st street. The drum, which contained only a small amount of fluid, had been rolled into the yard there by 16 year old Frank Kownach, who had found it on the railroad tracks nearby.

Andrew, to prove his daring, unscrewed the cap on the barrel and touched a lighted match to the hole. The blast followed. He was hurried to St. Catherine's hospital in East Chicago, but died soon after his arrival there.

MAYOR RADIOS THAT HEALTH IS IMPROVING

Mayor Cermak yesterday announced an improvement in his physical condition in a radio message sent to THE TRIBUNE from the liner Bremen, on which he is bound for Europe. He expressed the hope that his trip would increase European interest in the World's Fair of 1933.

The south side school teachers' organization, through its secretary, Robert Russell, radioed a plea to the mayor to help them get their overdue salaries. The message said: "Despite a salary reduction, promised pay withheld. Deputy City Controller Petterson refuses action. South Side teachers solicit your immediate aid."

ROBBERY NEAR POLICE STATION.

SYRACUSE ENDS 'DOLE' SYSTEM; MEN WORK NOW

Syracuse, N. Y., July 30.—[U. P.]—Syracuse abandoned the "dole" system of caring for its destitute today and supplied work for 6,600 unemployed, able bodied men receiving municipal aid.

Mayor Rolland B. Marvin, prominently mentioned for the Republican gubernatorial candidacy, ordered the men put to work on Syracuse's parks, streets, and in every other possible way, to bolster the men's confidence in themselves and to maintain their morale.

"Practically every able bodied citizen of Syracuse who is forced to seek relief shortly will be given work for wages rather than relief in the form of groceries and rent," Welfare Commissioner Frederick I. Daniels announced, speaking for the mayor.

"The men will not work full weeks, but only for as many days as it is necessary to earn the equivalent of what they have been receiving from the city. In this way it will be possible to employ several shifts of men on the same job during a single week."

Music Festival to Surpass Spectacles of Former Years

Chicagoland's Music Festival, excelling in scope, quality of entertainment, and splendor the colossal festivals of 1930 and 1931 that together thrilled 275,000 persons, will be held Saturday night, Aug. 20, in Soldiers' field.

A greater number of better trained musicians—10,000 are rehearsing now—more bands, more choruses, an amplification system that approaches perfection, and spectacular additions to the program are some of the reasons why the 1932 festival, sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will excel the great shows of the last two years.

Newspapers Backing Event.

Leading newspapers throughout Chicagoland, comprising the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, and Michigan, again are coöperating with THE TRIBUNE in preparing for the musical event that will bring more than 100,000 persons to Soldiers' field. The festival will be heard throughout the world over the radio. New talent is being discovered and trained along with that which was brought forth in the previous festivals in preliminary contests in all the Chicagoland states.

Two Chicago electrical engineers, Thomas P. Gibbs and Milton A. Boom, announced yesterday that after a year's research and experimentation they had perfected a system of amplification hitherto unequaled for a big outdoor broadcast. The amplifiers will have twice the power and much wider frequency range than the system used last year.

Messrs. Gibbs and Boom have experienced much difficulty in amplifying music in the stadium so that listeners at either end could hear without distortion of the music. But the new system, according to the engineers, will expand and make audible the most delicate nuances.

Besides retaining the features of the other festivals, the program this year will be augmented by a "battle of songs" between two choruses, the Rotarians and the Kiwanians. One thousand girls will participate in a Grecian dance. A magnificent fireworks display, synchronized to music, is another program supplement.

Community Singing by 100,000.

The community singing, with more than 100,000 participating, will be repeated, with batons in the hands of Frank Bennett, Carl Craven, and Edward Clissold. Two thousand colored singers, under the direction of five choral leaders, will repeat the famed spirituals that brought encore after encore in the previous festivals. The conductors, J. Wesley Jones, Edward H. Boatner, Elmer Simpson, and William Myrick, declare they are training the greatest colored chorus ever organized. John Burdette, the former elevator boy, whose singing of "Old Man River" in the 1930 festival brought him international fame, will be there again, singing also "River Stay Way from My Door" and "That's Why Darkies Are Born."

All of this entertainment, the net proceeds of which go to charity, will be provided for 25 cents. There will be no reserved seats. Tickets will go on sale this week at a date to be announced in a later issue of THE TRIBUNE.

U. S. SEIZES TWO STILLS, ONE DOG AND 14 HORSES

One Plant Has Capacity of 100,000 Gallons.

Prohibition agents yesterday wrecked two liquor manufacturing plants in separate raids. One was a huge plant with an output of 100,000 gallons of alcohol a day. The other was masquerading as the Blue Island Riding academy at 2027 West 120th street, Blue Island.

The mash vats in the riding academy were under the horses' stalls. The still was hidden in an adjoining garage and a pipe line connected the cooking and fermenting departments. A police dog guarded the stables.

The academy was without human attendance and the agents started operations by overpowering the dog. They turned fourteen horses out to graze and searched through the stalls. Vats lay under ten of them.

Find Gas Masks.

With the 500 gallon still in the garage were sixty 5 gallon cans of alcohol. Hidden in a corner were a dozen or more gas masks. The agents theorized that the operators wore these when they visited the underground vats.

Papers found by the raiders indicated that Clarence Wilson was one of the owners of the place. Two automobiles bearing license plates that had been issued to Anthony Reed, 10934 Prospect avenue, and Roy S. Brown, 1414 Pratt boulevard, also were discovered.

The horses and the dog were confiscated and were turned over to the Illinois Humane society.

Largest Seen Here.

The 100,000 gallon still was in a six story building at 2631 Arthington street. It was declared by the agents to be the largest ever found in Chicago. It occupied four floors and its capacity was estimated to be sufficient to give every inhabitant of Chicago two drams of alcohol a day.

Sergt. John R. Wall of the Chicago police was credited with gathering the original information about it. Attendants are believed to have escaped from the distillery over roofs as the raiders were forcing their way in with crowbars and axes.

The agents said the still was of type known as a "St. Louis," and large enough to supply bootleggers with 100,000 gallons of alcohol every twenty-four hours. There were two columns 45 feet high and 7 to 8 feet in diameter. The largest still seized up to this time has measured only 28 feet high, the agents said. There were five vats, 28 feet high and 8 feet in diameter, and nine tanks, 35 feet by 8 feet.

A railroad track runs alongside the building and on it were three carloads of sugar which the government seized. The agents learned that Charles N. Johnson is manager of the building, which is leased to the Chapin-Rivers Terminal company.

CALLES, 'STRONG MAN' OF MEXICO, QUITS CABINET

MEXICO CITY, July 30.—(AP)—Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, "strong man of Mexico," resigned tonight as secretary of war, and President Ortiz Rubio accepted his resignation. Gen. Calles resigned, he said, to care for his personal affairs. He did not mention his wife's illness, which recently took the couple to Boston for a delicate brain operation, but the wording of the resignation indicated this was a prime motive.

The retiring secretary pledged his support to the administration and said he considered the work which he was called upon to do last October in a reorganized cabinet, had been completed.

The president assured Gen. Calles that his work in the war ministry had been deeply appreciated and that the federal government felt free to call upon him at any future time his services might be needed.

2 Accused Gang Killers Enter Not Guilty Pleas

St. Paul, Minn., July 30.—(AP)—Two men charged with first degree murder for two gang killings here pleaded not guilty in Municipal court today. Preliminary hearings were set for next Tuesday.

They are Albert I. Silverberg and John Newman, charged with shooting Al Gordon of St. Paul and Robert Silverstine of New York. The latter was known here as Abie Loeb.

Police said Silverberg and Newman are wanted also for the slaying of an Elizabeth, N. J., prohibition agent.

ACTRESS SLAYS HER ROOMMATE AFTER GIN PARTY

Strangles Friend with Towel in Quarrel.

New York, July 30.—[Special.]—A drinking bout followed by the flaring up of an old quarrel resulted in the strangling to death early today of Florence Miller, 32, once a burlesque actress, by her roommate, Jean White, 28.

The confessed slayer, whose stage name is June Martin, was arrested on a homicide charge in a rooming house, where she had gone after the killing.

According to the police, the quarrel flared when Miss White came in late, but they settled their differences and pledged renewed friendship in gin. Later they quarreled again and hotel authorities called in a patrolman who quieted them.

Miss Miller, who in her burlesque days was known as Babe Raymond, had left a call for 9 a. m. to go to her job as a food checker in a restaurant. When the phone operator received no answer from the room a bellboy, Frank Ritzo, was sent.

When Ritzo entered the room with a pass key he saw Miss Miller's body lying on the bed, a towel around the throat. The arms and shoulders were bruised.

Police traced Miss White to the rooming house by means of a telephone call she had made.

When a policeman arrived her first question was "How's Babe?"

It developed she had told the other three young women that she had killed her roommate, but they had judged it merely a drunken fancy.

Miss White broke down and cried bitterly, but had no hesitation in telling her story. Her roommate, she said, struck her several times during their quarrel and then fell over on the bed.

At this, she said, she looped a towel about Miss Miller's neck and pulled it tight.

"I had a good reason," the police quoted her as saying. "It was all a personal matter."

Gerard Swope's Eldest Son Weds Divorcee in Maine

Salem, Mass., July 30.—(AP)—Mrs. Elizabeth Hanson Burr of Presque Isle, Me., and Isaac Gerson Swope, eldest son of Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company, were married here today. The bride and L. Gynne Burr Jr. of New York were divorced last January.

16 ARE KILLED IN NEW YORK BY POISON LIQUOR

Victims Struck Blind by "Smoke" Potions.

New York, July 30.—[Special.]—Sixteen men have been killed by drinking wood alcohol in the latest poison liquor outbreak on the lower east side starting last Wednesday and taking four lives today. The police and prohibition authorities are making a hurried but careful search of the area for the source of the poison.

While members of the police homicide squad were making their investigation a policeman who was not working on the poison liquor mystery entered an alleged speakeasy on Division street, arrested George Goldberg, the alleged proprietor, seized 96 half pints, 99 pints, one gallon, and one-half gallon jugs of liquor which he decided was alcohol, and which he sent for analysis to the city laboratories.

React to Poison Tests.

Meanwhile Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, reported that in fifteen of the poison liquor cases tests for wood alcohol made on the brains and viscera of the victims had been positive.

Dr. Norris expressed the belief that the victims had obtained the liquor from a common source.

"The outbreak centers in a comparatively small area around Chrystie and Hester streets," said Dr. Norris. "I believe that most of the victims went into a speakeasy and bought drinks because as far as I have been able to learn no flasks were found on the dead."

Similar to 1930 Outbreak.

Dr. Norris said that the outbreak was of the same kind as that in June, 1930, when thirty were killed. At that time the government was adulterating industrial alcohol to make it unfit for beverage purposes, and was using wood alcohol.

Deaths from methanol or wool alcohol poisoning from all over the country were so numerous that the government in December of the same year adopted a new denaturing element, alcotate, a petroleum product derived from oil in the cracking process.

Five of the poison liquor victims were found dead on the streets. The others died after they had been taken to the hospital.

Victims Struck Blind.

Dr. Norris explained that in all cases of those removed to hospital death had been preceded by blindness and symptoms of wood alcohol poisoning. He believed that those who had died on the streets or in parks had been similarly affected.

"This is the annual celebration of the noble experiment which is helping to reduce the number of the unemployed," declared Dr. Norris, who frequently has denounced prohibition as the cause of the increased consumption of poison liquor.

The victims of the poison liquor epidemic were either pronounced dead upon arrival at the hospital or died soon after they were admitted.

"They did not live longer than two hours," Dr. Norris said.

Carol Opens New Rumania Diet; Spurned by Liberals

BUCHAREST, Rumania, July 30.—(AP)—King Carol opened the new Rumanian parliament today with a speech from the throne. The defeated Liberal party boycotted the session. In a separate meeting they assailed the manner in which the previous parliament was dissolved and the government intrusted to the National Peasant party.

DR. WILSON DEMANDS U. S. INDICT CITIZENS OF TOWN AFTER DRY RIOT

Washington, D. C., July 30.—(AP)—Immediate indictment of Alexandria Bay, N. Y., citizens who they said "assaulted government agents, destroyed government property, and interfered with the administration of government authority" there July 12 during dry raids was demanded today by Secretaries Clarence True Wilson and Deets Pickett of the Methodist board of temperance, prohibition, and public morals.

The secretaries' statement, contained in the board's "Clipsheet," was made public after Amos W. W. Woodcock, federal prohibition director, had upheld the action of the raiding agents except in their "unnecessary damage to property," which they will be required to repair at their own expense.

The assaulted federal agents were described by the Methodist board officials as "custodians of the dignity and prestige of the federal government."

"A blow against them was a blow against the interest and safety of every patriotic citizen in the country and should be so regarded by federal authorities," the secretaries [illegible].

GRETA GARBO SAILS SECRETLY FOR HER SWEDEN

New York, July 30.—[Special.]—With all the unostentation that a detective agency and a corps of ship stewards could furnish, Greta Garbo sailed for that dear native Sweden today on the Gripsholm.

"She's not aboard," said the captain.

"Not aboard," echoed the purser.

"Not aboard," re-echoed the private detective standing on guard at a stateroom door.

A steward added his bit.

"Garbo?" he repeated. Ah! I have orders!"

He drew a forefinger across his throat and rolled his eyes.

After the ship had pulled out, officials of the line admitted that the Miss Garbo was indeed a passenger. But she had requested a certain privacy. A privacy was not to be intruded upon. A privacy which necessitated a certain deception of newspapermen who might desire to talk with her.

However, it is permitted to publish that passage was booked a few days ago, that Miss Garbo boarded the vessel at midnight and had her breakfast in her stateroom.

DEMAND $20,000 OF N. Y. PRIEST ON THREAT OF DEATH

New York, July 30.—[Special.]—Repeated threats to put him "on the spot like Vannie Higgins" have caused the Rev. Father Gervase Kubec, pastor of St. Casimir's Roman Catholic church in Brooklyn to appeal to the police for protection.

The priest says the terrorists are demanding a payment of $20,000 of him. He received the first demand on July 9, he said. The letter instructed him to wrap $15,000 in a bundle and place it at a designated spot on Manhattan beach. Instead of complying Father Kubec went to the nearest police station and turned the letter over to detectives. A bundle of paper was placed at the spot specified but no one appeared to claim it.

Later the demand was increased to $20,000.

These twa Scotties were sketched as they listened in at 8:45 in the morning, Chicago Daylight Saving Time, over one of the stations of the National Broadcasting Company.

Their Scotch natures and canine instincts made them so interested in economy and something good to eat that they couldn't wait for the second broadcast at 9:30.

TWO ARE SLAIN, THIRD SHOT AT CHICK MEETING

President of Association First Victim.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 30.—[Special.]—Gunplay broke up a directors' court of the International Baby Chick association in the Auditorium here today. One man was shot and killed, another was critically wounded, and a third, responsible for the shooting, ended his own life.

The shooting occurred when C. A. Norman of Knoxville, Tenn., wealthy poultry farmer and former president of the association, heard himself read out of the organization for one year for unethical conduct. Deliberately he drew a gun and opened fire. Charles L. Sawyer of Hoytville, O., president, was killed; Reese V. Hicks of Kansas City, Mo., secretary and general manager, was wounded. Still deliberate, Norman then shot himself. He died several hours later.

Son Witnesses Tragedy.

Norman's son, George Norman, 18 years old, a Knoxville High school football player, witnessed the tragedy. The shooting contained the elements of a mountain feud, for Norman and Hicks were reared but 40 miles from one another in the Tennessee mountains, and Hicks was Norman's chief accuser at the directors' court.

Norman was placed on trial before the directors' court yesterday; the hearing continued today. Charges against him were that he advertised blood tested chicks for sale, but actually delivered chicks not answering that specification. Hicks, as general manager, investigated the accusations, and he did this thoroughly, friends later pointed out, although he had been an old friend of the accused man.

Directors' Verdict Read.

Shortly before noon today the hearing was concluded, and the twenty directors, including one woman, Mrs. Alvina Berard of Jefferson, S. D., retired for deliberations. Norman and Hicks were excluded. The completed vote showed 15 directors favoring suspension, two opposing it, and three not voting. Norman and Hicks were summoned back into the room. Young Norman followed his father. Hicks mounted the platform, alongside President Sawyer. Le Roy Jones of Lafayette, Ind., acting secretary, read the verdict.

"Read it again," directed Norman quietly. Jones complied.

"Well, that ends it," responded Norman. "That's all I have to say."

President Dies a Hero.

As he spoke, however, he whipped out a revolver. President Sawyer saw and leaped forward, his body shielding Hicks. Apparently, witnesses said, he suspected that Norman would fire at the secretary. Even as he advanced, Norman shouted: "This will settle the whole thing." and commenced firing. President Sawyer fell, dead. Hicks next dropped, with two bullets hitting him, one in the left side.

Most of the directors broke for cover as Norman stood still, holding the gun. C. I. Bashore of Silver Lake, Ind., started toward the Tennesseean. Norman waved him and several others back. "Stay away, if you want to live," he warned them calmly. Then, before either they or his terrified son could interfere, he fired a bullet into his own head.

Hicks May Recover.

Police arrived a few minutes later, and questioned all the directors. They took all three gun victims to the County Emergency hospital. Late tonight physicians said Hicks might recover. He is said to be a brother of Herbert E. Hicks, Tennessee attorney who participated with William Jennings Bryan in the famous Scopes case a few years ago.

The wives of Norman, Sawyer, and Hicks were in town at the time of the shooting. Officials said tonight that despite the tragedy, the Chick convention will open Monday as scheduled. More than 2,500 members are expected to attend.

N. Y. PILOTS REFUSE TO TAKE FORGETFUL VISITORS OFF LINERS

New York, July 30.—[Special.]—The Sandy Hook pilots have served notice on steamship companies that they will no longer take the responsibility of caring for visitors at sailings who "forget" to leave ship before it sails, it became known today.

For years each steamship company has had the problem of forgetful visitors, persons who go aboard ships to see their friends off and then stay aboard after the liner sails. Officials are convinced that the majority of these mistakes are wilful.

Pier visitors say to their friends, "Let's stay on board and get off with the pilot," and in the last year an increasing number have been doing it, particularly in the case of midnight sailings, the pilots declare.

SPRINT RECORD SET IN TURTLE OLYMPIC GAMES

Crown Point, Ind., July 30.—(AP)—Indiana turtles had their own Olympiad tonight and records were broken amid cheers and charges of foul play.

Myrtle, a blonde girl turtle with green eyes, won the main event, a 68-yard sprint. She covered the distance in five minutes 14 seconds, running southeast. Bobtail, an elderly male turtle, was second. He ran north by northwest. It made no difference, since the finish line was a circle and the center was the starting point.

A. A. Bibler, Crown Point newspaper editor, charged that some one put chewing gum on the feet of his turtle.

GUN WIDOW GETS READY FOR SLAIN HUSBAND'S RITES

Confers with Mother on What She'll Wear.

Her costume at the funeral tomorrow of the husband she shot appeared of more interest yesterday to Mrs. Dorothy Pollak than her defense for the shooting. W. W. O'Brien, her attorney, was concerning himself about the legal aspects of the case. Her mother, Mrs. Marie Mysza, went into conference with the prisoner, held without bail in the county jail, over her costume worries.

While O'Brien informed reporters that he intends to seek letters of administration to discover if possible, where the $100,000 reputedly possessed by the slain husband, Joseph Pollak, may be cached, his client was incommunicado to the press. Her interviews so far, it was intimated in Mrs. Pollak's refusal to be quoted further, have not helped her case and on advice of counsel, it is believed they have been terminated.

Plans Garb with Mother.

Mrs. Pollak held a long conversation with her mother over the details of her widow's weeds, to be prepared for tomorrow's rites. Permission for her to attend the service was given by Judge John Sbarbaro. In the black ensemble ordered through Mrs. Mysza, the attractive widow, who shot her husband Wednesday night in their home at 1936 Garfield boulevard, will be accompanied to his funeral by Mrs. Mary Kennedy, policewoman.

The funeral will be tomorrow afternoon in the chapel at 4605 South Hermitage avenue. Burial will be in the Bohemian National cemetery.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Julia Cebulski, who was injected into the case as "the other woman" by Mrs. Pollak, remained in her home at 1512 West 47th street, and listened to her husband, Frank, defend her. Mrs. Pollak has told police that she suspected her husband of having had an affair with Mrs. Cubulski. At the time she remarked: "I wouldn't have minded so much if she was pretty."

Cebulski Defends Wife.

"Let me say this," said Cebulski yesterday. "I'll stack my wife against Mrs. Pollak for good looks any day. My wife wasn't a back number for looks when we were married. And she's still good to look at, even if she has been married over ten years and has three children."

Mrs. Cebulski smiled appreciatively and ventured the remark that Mrs. Pollak really is pretty. "But she never won a beauty prize," she added. Her husband took this point up with an emphatic: "I should say not!"

Cebulski touched upon Mrs. Pollak's charges that her husband and his wife had been to friendly. He had known for some time, he said, of Mrs. Pollak's suspicions. Those suspicions, he asserted, were not founded on fact.

Pollak a Friend, He Says.

"Joseph Pollak was a friend of mine," said Cebulski. "I'm not foolish; I'd have known it if a friend of mine had been playing to my wife. I know my wife, and I knew Pollak. He was my friend for nine years, and he wasn't the kind to fool with a friend's wife. I worked for him for two years as his chauffeur."

Mrs. Cebulski had previously told the police that her husband had delivered alcohol for Pollak.

Indications are that the Cebulskis might be used as state witnesses at the trial of Mrs. Pollak.

"GOOD SAMARITAN" FINED.

Scott Clark, 211 East 45th street, a Negro, yesterday told Judge James F. Fardy that he was arrested while taking two hot water bottles to "a sick friend." He was fined $25 when police testified the bottles were filled with liquor.

Wife Acquitted of "Slipper Beating"

Mrs. Adelaide H. Putnam of Wheaton, who was freed yesterday on charge of assault and battery, and her husband Byron, who preferred charge, saying his wife beat him with slipper.

Man and Wife Get 15 Year Terms in Separate Prisons

Oklahoma City, Okla., July 20.—(AP)—Fifteen years from now an Oklahoma City wife will walk out of an Iowa reformatory at about the same time her husband is freed from the McAlester penitentiary in Oklahoma.

Edwin and James Smith, brothers, today were ordered to serve 15 years at McAlester on each of two robbery counts. Edwin is the husband of Arvetta Smith, who will serve a 15 year sentence in the Iowa prison.

JURORS ACQUIT WIFE WHO HIT MATE WITH SHOE

Caused by His Playing of Cornet, Court Told.

Mrs. Adelaide H. Putnam, 31 years old, sighed with relief, smiled, and then hurried across the stuffy office of Justice of the Peace Bertram Rathje in Wheaton yesterday afternoon to extend her hands in thanks to six men.

Her smile, sigh, and appreciative handclasps were offered because the six as a jury had found her not guilty of assault and battery as charged by her husband, Byron, an electrical engineer employed by the Commonwealth Edison company in Wheaton. He had alleged that she cut his head one Sunday morning last June when she rapped him with the heel of a dancing slipper.

Husband Seeking Divorce.

The victory for Mrs. Putman came in round three of the couple's marital difficulties, which have held the interest of the whole town. Her husband's divorce bill still is pending in the Circuit court. On Friday Mrs. Putman obtained an injunction to prevent him from disturbing her in their home at 814 Ellis avenue, Wheaton, where they occupy separate bedrooms. She also obtained $10 a week temporary alimony.

Putman, who is president of the Men's Federation of Bible Classes in Wheaton, was the first witness.

"I arose on the morning of June 26," he said, "got my own breakfast and went to the parlor to practice 'The Sweet By and By' on my cornet. I was playing it with variations and fantasies when my wife entered the room. First she drummed on the piano, then she turned on the radio full blast. And finally she flounced her skirts at me and said, 'That's what I think of you.'

"When I smacked her on the hip with my hand she stepped out of a slipper and pounded my head with the heel. I ran next door and had a neighbor take a photograph of the cut."

Wife Takes Witness Stand.

The snapshots were shown to the magistrate and jury. Then Mrs. Putman took the witness stand.

"My husband wasn't playing anything at all," she said. "He had just been holding one single note for fifteen minutes. I tried to harmonize with him on the piano, but you can't harmonize with a single note.

"So I turned on the radio and then I started out of the room. He struck me on the hip and tried to embrace me. I struck him in self-defense. I just wanted to dissuade him."

The jury remained out only 20 minutes. Several hundred Wheatonians who jammed the courtroom and the corridors of the building heard the verdict. Putman hurried from the room as it was announced.

Mrs. Putman declared after the case was over: "I am going to proceed with that divorce on Monday. I'm going to answer my husband's bill with a cross bill."

TWIN GIRLS ARE BORN THREE DAYS APART TO WOMAN IN NEW YORK

New York, July 30.—(AP)—Three days after Mrs. Harold E. Brown gave birth to a daughter in Wadsworth hospital a second daughter arrived.

The first baby, born Monday morning, weighed 5 pounds and 10 ounces and had black hair. The second, arriving Thursday morning, had red hair and weighed 6 pounds and 12 ounces.

Aside from the hair and features, which also were dissimilar, physicians pronounced them a normal set of twins.

MILLS BLAMES DEMOCRATS FOR DROP IN REVENUE

'Fantastic Schemes' Hurt Business, He Insists.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 30.—[Special.] — Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills today issued a statement charging that the delay in the passage of tax legislation and the "fantastic economic proposals" emanating from the Democratic house had caused a decline in business last spring which had reduced anticipated treasury revenues.

Mills asserted that the tax delay and the Democratic proposals had kept the business world in such a state of uncertainty and apprehension that "instead of the business resumption upon which the treasury had counted, and which at one time seemed in sight, we witnessed a further decline in business and were compelled to revise our estimates downward."

Reply to Harrison Attack.

The Mills statement was made in reply to an attack on the Hoover administration and policies delivered last night by Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.], one of the campaign orators for the national Democratic ticket of Roosevelt and Garner. Specifically, Harrison charged that from December to June the treasury revised its estimates of anticipated revenue. He asserted also that Secretary Mills had opposed economies in general and curtailment of federal building construction in particular.

The senator charges that "from December to June the treasury revised its estimates of anticipated revenue," said Secretary Mills. "Of course it did. It had to. The unpardonable delay in enactment of needed tax legislation and the fantastic economic proposals emanating from the Democratic house of representatives kept the business world and the country in such a state of uncertainty and apprehension that instead of the business resumption upon which the treasury had counted, and which at one time seemed in sight, we witnessed further declines in business and were compelled to revise our estimates downward."

On Government Economy.

Mr. Mills then attacked Senator Harrison for his statement that the treasury head was opposed to a policy of government economy and particularly to a curtailment of government construction work.

"In so far as public building expenditures," said Mr. Mills, "are concerned, far from opposing the slowing up of public building expenditures, I actually recommended it. In my letter to the chairman of the subcommittee in charge of the treasury appropriation bill I stated:

"'I recommend that for the year 1933 the contracts covering certain building projects be not let, as indicated in my letter of March 29.'

Democrats to Blame, He Says.

"I then went on to say:

"'It is pertinent to observe that if towns and cities throughout the country have gotten along with their existing postoffice facilities up to the present time they surely can during these trying days wait a year or two longer for a new building of a monumental character. What is sacred about a new postoffice in times like these?'

"There can then be no question as to my position. It was the senate that specifically excluded the treasury building program from any reduction. It was the Democratic house of representatives, backed by the Democratic senators, that insisted on unbalancing the budget by increasing the public works program."

Chides Senator on Tariff.

The treasury head ridiculed Senator Harrison's attack on the Republican tariff policy in view of the Mississippian's "gallant and successful fight to impose high duties on long staple cotton."

"I had hoped," said Secretary Mills, "that we might get through the campaign without the usual tariff humbug. Certainly such Democratic leaders as Senator Harrison with his long staple cotton, Senator Barkley with his coal, Senator Connally with his oil, and Senator Walsh of Montana with his copper are foreclosed by their official acts from complaining about tariff interference with foreign trade."

LASKER GUEST OF HOOVER AT CAMP IN HILLS

Washington, D. C., July 30.—[Special.]—Albert D. Lasker, Chicago advertising man and former chairman of the United States shipping board, was among the guests taken by President Hoover to his Rapidan fishing camp today. The President left for his mountain retreat at 3 o'clock after spending a quiet day at his office.

The other guests were Mrs. Lasker, the postmaster general and Mrs. Walter F. Brown, J. W. Pole, controller of the currency, and Mrs. Pole, and Henry M. Robinson of Los Angeles. Politics and the business situation were on the cards for discussion.

North Carolina Governor Ends Hosiery Mills Strike

High Point, N. C., July 30.—[U. P.]—The controversy over wage scales in High Point's 22 strike-idle hosiery mills was anded late today through the efforts of Gov. O. Max Gardner. He won agreements from both groups that the mills would resume operations Monday on a wage basis agreed upon in an arbitration conference between the workers and manufacturers' representatives over which Gov. Gardner presided. The settlement will send back to their jobs all but 600 of the 6,000 textile workers who walked out of the mills two weeks ago.

'Lame Duck' Amendment Ratified by West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., July 30.—(AP)—The "lame duck" amendment to the United States constitution was ratified by the West Virginia legislature today. Under the amendment the President and Vice President would take office on Jan. 20 instead of March 4, and terms of members of congress would be started on Jan. 3.

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

ALBANY, N. Y., July 30.—(AP)—Following are some of the high points made by Mr. Roosevelt in his first appeal to the electorate:

The main issue of this campaign is our present economic condition.

The Democratic platform is 80 per cent constructive, only 20 per cent critical.

If the present congress takes no action on modification and ultimate repeal of the prohibition law, I shall urge the new congress to carry out these provisions.

To meet a staggering deficit, the administration has resorted to the type of inflation which has weakened public confidence in our government credit both at home and abroad.

The United States could well afford to take the lead in asking for a general conference to establish less changeable fiscal relationships and to determine what can be done to restore the purchasing power of that half of the world's inhabitants who are on a silver basis. Nothing could do more to create stable relations in which trade could once more be resumed.

Great Britain, France, and Germany have at last agreed among themselves concerning reparations. The danger now is that they may turn a united front against us. This comes not so much from the debts they owe us, as from our barriers against their trade.

The debts will not be a problem—we shall not have to cancel them. . . . Our policy (the Democratic) declares for payment, but at the same time for lowered tariffs, and a resumption of trade which opens the way for payment.

Let us have the courage to reverse the policies of the Republican leaders and insist on a sound currency.

This (the Democratic tax plank) is a declaration in favor of graduated income, inheritance and profits taxes, and against taxes of food and clothing. . . .

Tariffs should be high enough to maintain living standards which we set for ourselves. But if they are higher they become a particularly vicious kind of direct tax which is laid doubly on the consumer.

It has been the theory of Republican leaders that relief is a local responsibility. . . . The Democratic platform was framed with an eye to actual human needs. . . . "Continuous responsibility of the government (meaning the federal government) for human welfare, especially for the protection of children."

Roosevelt Opens Campaign; Talks of Repeal and Tariff

Democratic platform, Gov. Roosevelt read slowly and effectively the cardinal principles advanced by the party, its declarations for a balanced budget and a sound currency, for work for all and happiness and prosperity for business, agriculture, and domesticity.

Then the governor, describing as disastrous the fiscal policy of the Republican party, pointed out three consequences of that policy, as follows:

"1. In highly prosperous times, when taxes were easy to obtain, it repealed taxes on abnormal profits and incomes, with the result that the war debt was not drastically reduced.

"2. When the depression began the administration, instead of reducing annual expenses to meet decreasing revenues, became sponsor for deficits which at the end of this fiscal year will have added five billion dollars to the national debt.

"3. To meet this staggering deficit the administration has resorted to the type of inflation which has weakened public confidence in our government credit both at home and abroad.

"High sounding, newly invented phrases cannot sugarcoat the pill," the governor continued.

"Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits. Stop the deficits. Let us have equal courage to reverse the policy of the Republican leaders and insist on a sound currency.

"Our party says clearly that not only must government income meet prospective expenditures but this income must be obtained on the principle of ability to pay. This is a declaration in favor of graduated income, inheritance and profits taxes and against taxes on food and clothing, whose burden is actually shifted to the consumers of these necessities of life on a per capita basis rather than on the basis of the relative size of personal incomes."

The governor did no more than read the party declarations on unemployment—holding for extension of federal credits to states for relief, for an extension of "necessary and useful" public construction, for the spread of employment by reduced working hours and a shorter work week. Mr. Roosevelt has said that in future speeches he will go at length into this.

DICKINSON OPENS MIDWEST DRIVE ON DEMOCRATS

Attacks Rivals as Demagogic.

Senator L. J. [Hell Raising Dick] Dickinson of Iowa came to Chicago yesterday to open the 1932 Republican campaign in the middle west. He immediately ripped into the Democratic record on farm relief, the tariff, government economy, and the party's platform of "vague generalities."

Senator Dickinson, who was keynoter at the Republican national convention, is chairman of the midwest division of the party's senatorial committee, which is fighting for twelve seats in the upper house. He will be one of the most aggressive campaigners in this part of the country.

Assails Foes as Demagogues.

The gray maned Iowan chided Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee for president, for his promise of "a new deal" and challenged him to lay the cards on the table face up. Senator Dickinson adopted Al Smith's line of attack with reference to Roosevelt's "forgotten man" speech, and charged that the Democrats are "relying upon demagogic appeals to fan the flames of discontent."

"Demagogic appeals," said Senator Dickinson, "are not going to satisfy the American people in this campaign. Arraying class against class has and never can win a war against depression."

Senator Dickinson recalled that in his speech of acceptance Gov. Roosevelt spoke of his three year fight for government economy. He mentioned the Democratic platform declaration for a 25 per cent reduction in the costs of government.

"What did Gov. Roosevelt do about economy in his own state?" asked the senator. "He became governor in 1929. In the first year of his administration the cost of state government increased 32 millions of dollars. In the second year it increased 51 millions. In the third year it increased 13 millions."

Raps Democrats on Tariff.

The Democratic opposition to the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill was cited by Senator Dickinson as one of their breaches of faith with the American farmer. The tariff, he said, materially increased duties on meat, cream, milk, cattle, wool, and other farm commodities and cut down imports, creating a market for home producers.

Senator Dickinson scoffed at the Democratic proposal of "constitutional measures that will aid the farmers to receive for their basic commodities prices in excess of cost" and called it another vague generality. The federal farm board, he said, has made "very substantial progress and much more progress will be made" toward relieving the American farmer.

Yesterday afternoon Senator Dickinson addressed the farmers of the country on a national radio hookup. He left last night for his home, but will return to carry on the campaign in earnest after the notification ceremonies for Vice President Curtis on Aug. 18.

SAYS ROOSEVELT IS MADE TARGET OF 'WHISPERERS'

J. A. Farley Assails Republicans.

New York, July 30.—(AP)—A "hateful" whispering campaign about Gov. Roosevelt's physical and mental health was charged tonight to Republicans by James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman.

He compared it to the "whispering campaign they made four years ago against Gov. Alfred E. Smith, in which every undercover insinuation possible was employed to keep a great Democrat out of the White House."

In vigorous language Farley said the lameness of the New York governor, who 11 years ago suffered an attack of infantile paralysis, has no more effect on his general condition "than if he had a glass eye or were prematurely bald."

Fears No Comparison.

"Gov. Roosevelt might be handicaped in a foot race," he continued, "but in no other way do I think he need fear comparison with his adversary in the pending campaign."

As he talked of "libels," of "poison propaganda," and of "downright falsehoods," Farley charged that the "perverted slush fund" which financed the 1928 whispering had its origin "in the Republican war chest."

He said the Democrats must now count each of the hundreds of thousands of federal employés as "a propaganda fountain in behalf of President Hoover."

The charges he fired, the Democratic chieftain said, were a "partial answer" to accusations that the Democrats "are unfairly smearing the President."

Knows of No Assault.

"Part of the Republican strategy," he continued, "appears to be to make it appear that the Democrats are viciously and wildly assailing the President personally. I know of no Democratic assault on his official acts.

"We cannot, of course, be responsible for what Vice President Curtis, Senatorial Leader Watson, Congressional Campaign Committee Chairman Wood, and various others high in the Republican hierarchy said about him in the past.

"We have not questioned and will not question his integrity or morality, but we will not soften our criticism of his inefficiency, his faulty judgment, and uncertainty."

Hoover Is Denounced.

The Democratic campaign manager concentrated most of his fire on the opposition's standard bearer.

He denounced President Hoover for his "Pollyana thoughts," "his reckless campaign promises in 1928," and "his complete bewilderment during the last three years."

He hazarded the prediction that "if the election were to be held tomorrow it would result in a Democratic landslide of greater proportions than has resulted from any election since the civil war."

TEXT OF SPEECH DELIVERED BY GOV. ROOSEVELT

Candidate Makes First Campaign Appeal.

I hope during this campaign to use the radio frequently to speak to you about important things that concern us all.

In the olden days campaigns were conducted amid surroundings of brass bands and red lights. Oratory was an appeal primarily to the emotions and sometimes to the passions. It always has been my feeling that with the spread of education, with the wider reading of newspapers and especially with the advent of the radio, mere oratory and mere emotion are having less to do with the determination of public questions under our representative system of government. Today common sense plays the greater part and final opinions are arrived at in the quiet of the home.

Points to His Experience.

In this quiet of common sense and friendliness, I want you to hear me tonight as I sit here in my own home, away from the excitement of the campaign. I am weighing all the things which I have learned in all my years in public service—First in Albany 21 years ago, then during eight busy years in Washington interspersed with visits into all the states of the union and, during and after the war, to the nations of Europe; then in these latter years in my tasks as governor of New York.

In order that the way may be clear for the more detailed discussion and debate which will come as the campaign proceeds, I propose tonight to state the broad policies of my party—to sketch the first outline of the final picture.

Calls Platform Promise.

Where do we look for this? In the platform, of course. A platform is a proposal and at the same time a promise binding on the party and its candidates.

Now even the partisan opposition press has found it hard to criticize the Democratic platform this year. It is brief, only one-fifth of the length of the Republican platform, and easily understood. Eighty per cent of it is constructive; only 20 per cent critical. Moreover, it is forthright and genuine—honest to the core.

The entire platform needs to be read in the light of its short preamble. This indicates that our present economic condition, how it came, what it is, and how it can be remedied, is the main issue of this campaign. I can do no better than to read it exactly as it stands.

Policies Termed Disastrous.

"In this time of unprecedented economic and social distress, the Democratic party declares its conviction that the chief causes of this condition were the disastrous policies pursued by our government since the world war, of economic isolation fostering the merger of competitive businesses into monopolies and encouraging the indefensible expansion and contraction of credit for private profit at the expense of the public.

"Those who were responsible for these policies have abandoned the ideals on which the war was won, and thrown away the fruits of victory, thus rejecting the greatest opportunity in history to bring peace, prosperity, and happiness to our people and to the world. They have ruined our foreign trade, destroyed the values of our commodities and products, crippled our banking system, robbed millions of our people of their life savings and thrown millions more out of work, produced widespread poverty and brought the government to a state of financial distress unprecedented in times of peace.

Favors Drastic Change.

"The only hope for improving present conditions, restoring employment, affording permanent relief to the people and bringing the nation back to its former proud position of domestic happiness and of financial, industrial, agricultural and commercial leadership in the world lies in a drastic change in economic and governmental policies.

"Believing that a party platform is a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with power and that the people are entitled to know in plain words the terms of the contract to which they are asked to subscribe, we hereby declare this to be the platform of the Democratic party.

"The Democratic party solemnly promises by appropriate action to put into effect the principles, policies and reforms herein advocated and to eradicate the policies, methods and practices herein condemned."

Points to Declaration.

Immediately after this statement of principles, there follow three important declarations:

"An immediate and drastic reduction of governmental expenditures by abolishing useless commissions and offices, consolidating departments and bureaus, and eliminating extravagance to accomplish a saving of not less than 25 per cent in the cost of federal government, and we call upon the Democratic party in the states to make a zealous effort to achieve a proportionate result.

"Maintenance of the national credit by a federal budget annually balanced on the basis of accurate executive estimates within revenues raised by a system of taxation levied on the principle of ability to pay.

"A sound currency to be preserved at all hazards, and an international monetary conference called on the invitation of our government to consider the rehabilitation of silver and related questions."

Fiscal Policy Assailed.

With these declarations—for a balanced budget and for a sound currency—the Democratic party sets its face against the time serving and disastrous fiscal policy of recent years.

What did that policy do?

1. In highly prosperous times, when taxes were easy to obtain, it repealed taxes on abnormal profits and incomes, with the result that the war debt was not drastically reduced.

2. When the depression began, the administration, instead of reducing annual expenses to meet decreasing revenues became sponsor for deficits which at the end of this fiscal year will have added five billion dollars to the national debt.

3. To meet this staggering deficit the administration has resorted to the type of inflation which has weakened public confidence in our government credit both at home and abroad.

High sounding, newly invented phrases cannot sugar coat the pill.

Would Stop Borrowing.

Let us have the courage to stop borrowing to meet continuing deficits. Stop the deficits. Let us have equal courage to reverse the policy of the Republican leaders and insist on a sound currency.

Our party says clearly that not only must government income meet prospective expenditures, but this income must be secured on the principle of ability to pay. This is a declaration in favor of graduated income, inheritance and profits taxes, and against taxes on food and clothing, whose burden is actually shifted to the consumers of these necessities of life on a per capita basis, rather than on the basis of the relative size of personal incomes.

Something more is needed than a domestic balanced budget and a just revenue system. Muddled government finance creates a general uncertainty concerning the value of national currencies; this uncertainty has a way of spreading from country to country. The world is tormented with it now. The United States could well afford to take the lead in asking for a general conference to establish less changeable fiscal relationships and to determine what can be done to restore the purchasing power of that half of the world's inhabitants who are on a silver basis, and to exchange views regarding governmental finance.

Sound Money Needed.

It is obvious that sound money is an international necessity not a domestic consideration for one nation alone. Nothing is more needed than such an exchange of opinion; nothing could do more to create stable conditions in which trade could once more be resumed.

We face a condition which at first seems to involve either an unbalanced budget and an unsound currency or else failure of the government to assume its just duties—the relief of distress and protection against loss of savings built up through many years by numberless small investors. This concerns you, my friends, who managed to lay aside a few dollars for a rainy day.

This dilemma can be met by saving in one place what we would spend in others; or, by acquiring the necessary revenue through taxation. Revenues must cover expenditures by one means or another. Any government, like any family, can for a year, spend a little more than it earns. But you and I know that a continuation of that habit means the poorhouse.

Heavy Burden Necessary.

At best, the federal government will necessarily bear a heavy burden. It has been the theory of Republican leaders that relief is a local responsibility, a theory stated repeatedly and modified only with the greatest reluctance. The Democratic platform was framed with an eye to actual human needs. What could be finer than that bold and humanitarian statement pledging "continuous responsibility of the government [meaning the federal government] for human welfare, especially for the protection of children."

In view of this statement, the plank concerning relief for the unemployed becomes significant:

"We advocate extension of federal credit to the States to provide unemployment relief wherever the diminishing resources of the States make it impossible for them to provide for the needy; expansion of the federal program of necessary and useful construction affected with a public interest, such as flood control and waterways, including the St. Lawrence. Great Lakes Deep waterways; the spread of employment by a substantial reduction in the hours of labor, the encouragement of the shorter week by applying that principle in government service; advance planning of public work."

Following this there is the party declaration concerning agriculture:

"We advocate, for the restoration of agriculture, the nation's basic industry, better financing of farm mortgages through reorganized farm bank agencies, at low rates of interest, on an amortization plan, giving preference to credits for the redemption of farms and homes sold under foreclosure; extension and development of the farm coöperative movement, and effective control of crop surpluses so that our farmers may have the full benefit of the domestic market.

"Enactment of every constitutional measure that will aid the farmer to receive for basic farm commodities prices in excess of cost of production.

Farm Board Assailed.

"We condemn: The extravagance of the farm board, its disastrous action which made the government a speculator in farm products, and the unsound policy of restricting agricultural products to the demands of domestic markets."

The platform contains admirable statements about a group of subjects which logically go together—the tariff and foreign policy. The tariff plank reads as follows:

"We advocate:

"A competitive tariff for revenue, with a fact finding tariff commission free from executive interference; reciprocal tariff agreements with other nations, and an international economic conference designed to restore international trade and facilitate exchange.

Tariff Law Condemned.

"We condemn:

"The Hawley-Smoot tariff law, the prohibitive rates of which have resulted in retaliatory action by more than forty countries, created international economic hostilities, destroyed international trade, driven our factories into foreign countries, robbed the American farmer of his foreign markets and increased his cost of production."

A tariff is a tax laid on certain goods passing from the producer to the consumer. It is laid on these goods, rather than other similar ones, because they originate abroad. This is obviously protection for the producers of competing goods at home. Peasants who live at lower levels than our farmers, workers who are sweated to reduce costs, ought not to determine prices for American made goods. There are standards which we desire to set for ourselves. Tariffs should be high enough to maintain living standards which we set for ourselves. But if they are higher they become a particularly vicious kind of direct tax which is laid doubly on the consumer. Not only are the prices of foreign goods raised but those of domestic goods also.

Facts Speak for Selves.

It is a difficult and highly technical matter to determine standards and costs of production abroad and at home. A commission of experts can be trusted to find such facts, but not to dictate policies. The facts should be left to speak for themselves, free from presidential intereference.

One of the great needs of the world is to set international trade flowing again. The proper procedure is to ascertain all the pertinent facts, to publish them widely and then to negotiate with each country affected. Trade barriers of all kinds ought to be lowered—not by rule of thumb, but with due regard to safety and justice—lowered, nevertheless, as quickly and as definitely as possible. Policy needs to be dominated by the realities we discover and by the national purposes we seek.

Plank on Foreign Policy.

This tariff policy, however, cannot be separated from our other relations with foreign countries: the whole thing ties in together. The platform is explicit here also:

"We advocate:

"A firm foreign policy, including peace with all the world and the settlement of international disputes by arbitration; no interference in the internal affairs of other nations; the sanctity of treaties and the maintenance of good faith and of good will in financial obligations; adherence to the world court with the pending reservations; the pact of Paris, abolishing war as an instrument of national policy, to be made effective by provisions for consultation and conference in case of threatened violation of treaties; international agreement for reduction of armaments; and coöperation with nations of the western hemisphere to maintain the spirit of the Monroe Doctrine. We oppose cancellation of the debts owing to the United States by foreign nations."

Debts Problem Complex.

This problem of the debts is complex. Its solution has, however, been brought measurably nearer by the recent results at Lausanne. Great Britain, France, and Germany have at last agreed among themselves concerning reparations. The danger now is that they may turn a united front against us. This comes, I am convinced, not so much from the debts they owe us as from our barriers against their trade which make the problem so difficult. The debts will not be a problem—we shall not have to cancel them—if we are realistic about providing ways in which payment is possible through the profits arising from the rehabilitation of trade.

The Republican platform said nothing at all about this, but their position has been the absurd one of demanding payment and at the same time making payment impossible. This policy finally forced a moratorium, as it was bound to do. Our policy declares for payment, but, at the same time, for lowered tariffs and resumption of trade which open the way for payment.

Would Avoid Repetition.

Up to this point, you and I have been considering both the immediate relief for the present emergency and also the immediate initiating of plans to bring us back to a more normal economic condition. At the same time it is equally our duty to guard against repetition of the evils and errors which have cost us so much. It is not enough to say that when prosperity is restored we shall then consider how to avoid repeating all the old errors. Today we recognize these errors. Today they should be outlawed for all time to come.

It must be made more difficult for a depression to happen in the future; it must be made impossible for its indefensible features to show themselves again. Concerning the necessary revision of some of our institutions for this purpose, I shall have more to say later. At present I read you the party's stand.

It advocates:

"Strict and impartial enforcement of anti-trust laws to prevent monopoly and unfair trade practices, and revision thereof for the better protection of labor and the small producer and distributor; conservation, development and use of the nation's water power in the public interest.

"Protection of the investing public by requiring to be filed with the government and carried in advertisements of all offerings of foreign and domestic stocks and bonds true information as to bonuses, commissions, principal invested, and interests of sellers. Regulation to the full extent of federal power of:

"Holding companies which sell securities in interstate commerce;

"Rates of utility companies operating across state lines;

"Exchanges trading in securities and commodities.

Aid for Suspended Banks.

"Quicker methods of realizing on assets for the relief of depositors of suspended banks and a more rigid supervision of national banks for the protection of depositors and the prevention of the use of their moneys in speculation to the detriment of local credits.

"The severance of affiliated securities companies and the divorce of underwriting schemes from commercial banks; and further restriction of federal reserve banks in permitting the use of federal reserve facilities for speculative purposes."

"It condemns:

"Action and utterances of high public officials designed to influence stock exchange prices.

"The usurpation of power by the state department in assuming to pass upon foreign securities offered by international bankers, as a result of which billions of dollars in questionable bonds have been sold to the public upon the implied approval of the federal government."

Quotes Repeal Plank.

Now we come to the famous repeal plank. It is simple and it has meaning:

"We favor the repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

"To effect such repeal we demand that the congress immediately propose a constitutional amendment to truly representative conventions in the states called to act solely on that proposal.

"We urge the enactment of such measures by the several states as will actually promote temperance, effectively prevent the return of the saloon and bring the liquor traffic into the open under complete supervision and control by the states.

"We demand that the federal government effectively exercise its power to enable the states to protect themselves against importation of intoxicating liquors in violation of their laws.

"Pending repeal, we favor immediate modification of the Volstead act to legalize the manufacture and sale of beer and other beverages of such alcoholic content as is permissible under the constitution and to provide therefrom a proper and needed revenue."

Says He'll Urge Action.

Nothing needs to be added to that, except that if the present congress takes no action I shall urge the new congress to carry out these provisions.

There are a number of other planks of importance, but less in need of elaboration, which, because my time is so short, I shall only read to you.

They are as follows:

"We advocate a navy and an army adequate for national defense, based on a survey of all facts affecting the existing establishments, that the people in time of peace may not be burdened by an expenditure fast approaching one billion dollars annually.

"The fullest measure of justice and generosity for all war veterans who have suffered disability or distress caused by or resulting from actual service in time of war and for their dependents.

Old Age Insurance.

"Unemployment and old age insurance, under state laws.

"Independence for the Philippines; ultimate statehood for Porto Rico; the employment of American citizens in the operation of the Panama canal.

"Simplification of legal procedure and reorganization of the judicial system to make the attainment of justice speedy, certain and at less cost.

"Continuous publicity of political contributions and expenditures, strengthening of the corrupt practices act and severe penalties for misappropriation of campaign funds.

"We condemn the improper and excessive use of money in political activities.

"Paid lobbies of special interests to influence members of congress and other public servants by personal contacts.

"The open and covert resistance of administrative officials to every effort made by congressional committees to curtail the extravagant expenditures of the government ,and to revoke improvident subsidies granted to favored interests."

Nominess Are Pledged.

"And now, my friends, I close my talk with you tonight with this concluding declaration:

"To accomplish these purposes and to recover economic liberty we pledge the nominees of this convention, and the best effort of a great party whose founder announced the doctrine which guides us now, in the hour of our country's need, 'equal rights to all, special privileges to none.'"

LONG TO CAMPAIGN FOR MRS. CARAWAY IN SENATE CONTEST

Little Rock, Ark., July 30.—(AP)—Bringing his own trucks equipped with amplifiers to carry his booming oratory to the crowds, Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana sets out Monday with the first elected woman senator, Hattie W. Caraway, on a speaking tour of Arkansas to give a spectacular finish to her campaign for renomination.

Dashing from one place to another in speeding cars and as many as a half dozen speeches a day, the "Kingfish" will enter every section of the state during the last week of the campaign to get Mrs. Caraway's record "before the people." He will use four trucks, so that one will be set up ready for him at each place.

The first speech will be at Magnolia in southeast Arkansas at 9 a. m. Monday. Mrs. Caraway will join him there. The Democratic primary is a week from next Tuesday. Mrs. Caraway has six opponents.

HOOVER PLAN TO CUT DEFENSE COMPONENTS OF ARMY CRITICIZED

Williamstown, Mass., July 30.—[Special.]—Serious objections to President Hoover's proposal to reduce "defense" components of armies by one-third and criticism of the national defense act of 1920 were voiced at the Institute of Politics today by officers of the Foreign Policy association.

Raymond Buell, research director of the association, chairman at the second general conference on arms limitation, declared that the Hoover proposal, which would allow every country to retain an army for "police" purposes, based on the size of the Germany army of 100,000 men, would mean that the American army might be increased from 135,000 to 2000,000 men. This increase, he said, would be "entirely unwarranted."

The Hoover proposal, argued Mr. Buell, overlooked the existence of strong auxiliary forces such as the National Guard in this country with 190,000 officers and men; the Fascist militia in Italy and the semi-military organizations of Germany. He felt that it was doubtful whether any international agreement limiting land armies could be secured until the continental nations of Europe adopted some form of the Swiss militia system.

CHICAGO SUBURB CUTS ITS SCHOOL BUDGET BY 43%

Western Springs Shows How to Economize.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The suburb of Western Springs supplies a vivid illustration of drastic retrenchment in school expenditures. This village needed $22,000 last January to keep its schools open. Its residents dug up the cash.

In the last school year ending in June Western Springs spent $78,897 on its schools. For the coming year beginning in September it plans to spend only $44,940—a cut of 43 per cent.

The village plans, according to E. P. McClure, president of the school board, to give as much education as it can pay for—and no more. At the same time the board believes it can give as much and as good education next year for $44,940 as it gave last year for $78,897, except for kindergarten pupils.

Reduce Few Salaries.

That feature of the village schools will be eliminated. This is to be accomplished without shortening the school year or reducing salaries, except those of the superintendent and one or two other higher priced instructors.

The Western Springs school board welcomed the aid and advice of its public spirited residents. Three of these private citizens, H. A. Parks, H. B. Noyes, and R. B. James canvassed the situation and decided the residents could pay $44,940 for their schools, and then made a budget for the school board accordingly.

It is to be a cash transaction. The people will be asked to pay their 1932 school taxes in installments, as school expenditures require it, beginning in September. Members of the subscription committee include John R. Kneebone, A. W. Goodwin, and H. R. Smith, all private citizens.

The method by which the school expenses are to be cut 43 per cent may be summarized as follows: The suburb has been operating three school buildings. Two of them are to be eliminated, and all of the children instructed in the largest building, which has eleven rooms. This permits the cost of operating buildings to be reduced from $10,272 last year to $5,050 next, with no cut in salaries.

8 Hour School Day.

The suburb is able to put all of its approximately 720 pupils in one building by making it do 60 per cent more duty. Instead of having a school day of five hours the day will be lengthened to eight hours. Half the pupils will attend school four hours in the morning and the other half in the afternoon, reversing the order each month.

By that process the village will reduce the number of teachers from 28 to 14 and the expenses for teachers' salaries and supplies from $48,375 last year to $22,150 for next year. The teachers' salaries, with exceptions referred to, will not be decreased, but their hours of labor will be increased 60 per cent.

If the Western Springs plan of two shifts in the elementary schools were applied to Chicago, it would make 3,490 elementary teachers unnecessary, according to the last official report of the teachers in the grades from one to eight. These teachers' salaries, at that time—which was last October—averaged $2,340.62 a year. The Western Springs two shift plan would involve a saving of $8,169,489 on elementary teachers eliminated.

MEDICAL SOCIETY TO PROTEST U. S. COMPETITION

Kansas City, Mo., July 30.—(AP)—Spokesmen for the American Medical association and the American Society of Civil Engineers will complain against government competition when the Shannon house committee resumes hearings here Thursday.

The Medical Association contends disabled World War veterans could be treated more efficiently and at a great saving of money by physicians outside government employ. The organization's complaint will be voiced by Dr. E. H. Skinner. The Society of Civil Engineers will be represented by A. E. Everingham.

Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Legion and the Disabled American Veterans, presumably advocates of the present system of hospitalization for service men, will be given the opportunity of replying to Dr. Skinner Friday.

Thereafter, the hearing, which already has found its way from Kansas City to Leavenworth, Kas., and St. Louis, will venture far afield.

Army Engineers' Steamer, the Peary, Visits Chicago

A famous vessel, the steamship Peary, one of the two ships used by the MacMillan arctic expedition, which carried three navy planes to within eleven degrees of the north pole in 1925, cast anchor in the yacht harbor off Grant park yesterday afternoon. The Peary is now owned by the United States army engineer corps. This is its first visit to Chicago. Two Chicagoans, Commander Eugene F. McDonald and Kenenth Rawson, then 16 years old, accompanied the expedition to the arctic.

ONLY TOP NOTCH SNEEZES WANTED FOR CLINIC TEST

Hay Fever Sufferers Start Applying.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

The hay fever season officially begins on Aug. 15. Already, however, sneezes are beginning in Chicago. The heat has brought the hay fever season on early, as testified by the sneezing sufferers who yesterday applied at the University of Illinois Research hospital, 1817 Polk street, as volunteer subjects for a hay fever experiment.

Applications were slow yesterday, the first day they were received. They will continue until Aug. 10, by which time Dr. Ben Z. Rappaport, who, with Dr. Tell Nelson, is conducting the experiment, hopes to have 100 good cases of hay fever and seasonal asthma to work on.

For Only Severe Cases.

Nothing but severe cases will be considered. A person must not only sneeze, he must sneeze continually, if he hopes to enter this select group of patients.

The experiment will begin on Aug. 15, when 12 volunteer patients will enter two wards of the hospital, where air is filtered and virtually pollen free. This group will stay a few days, then another group of 12 will be admitted. This routine will be followed until Oct. 1, the end of the season. Through their tests the experimenters hope to perfect a system of air filtering which will be useful in relieving individual hay fever sufferers.

"We want only intelligent patients," said Dr. Rappaport. "They must be able to describe intelligently their reactions in passing from the ward to the outside pollen filled air and back again."

They Don't Have to Pay.

A college pofessor, a well to do engineer and other business and professional men and women were among the volunteer patients who submitted to the experiment last year, largely in the hope of getting sleep at nights. Since the hospital is not for profit, the hay fever patients are not permitted to pay. On the other hand, they do not have to be unable to pay, as is required of clinic patients.

Among those who hope to be experimental subjects this year are Betty Smith, 9156 Oglesby avenue, who has had hay fever for years; and Eileen Kelly, 6053 North Albany avenue. Miss Smith said it had been found that she was sensitive to feathers, dust, corn, roses, four varieties of rag weed, peonies and other things, about 30 in all. She sleeps on a pillow of pine needles in the summer, as does Miss Kelly.

Hopes to Try It Again.

Miss Kelly was a subject for the air filter experiment last year, and hopes she will begin sneezing hard enough to allow her to qualify again this year. "However, I've been having treatments all year, and I'm afraid I'm too far cured to be admitted this time," she said.

Anna Rosen, 3021 Ainslee street, 18 years old, who has had asthma since she was 5 years old, hopes to be allowed to sleep in the pollen free wards and get a few nights' rest.

Dr. Rappaport, himself a victim of hay fever, has cured himself through all year around treatments, or injections, and so far this season has not sneezed once, he said.

2,000 GIVEN FIRST DRILL AT CITIZENS' TRAINING CAMP

A two hour drill yesterday featured the Citizens' Military Training camp at Fort Sheridan as 2,000 citizen soldiers were given physical examinations and mustered in for a month of instruction. The entire camp will be given the oath of allegiance today by the camp commander, Brig. Gen. Frank C. Bolles.

Five special days have been listed for the camp, which will terminate on Aug. 27. On Aug. 6 governor's day will be celebrated with attendance by governors of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan, the states from which the camp recruits are drawn.

The American Legion will have a special day on Aug. 11, and Aug. 16 will be Patten day, in honor of Mrs. James A. Patten, who gave the camp and athletic filed. The final special ceremony will be held on Aug. 20, which will be Visitors day.

Regular routine of the camp will be started tomorrow morning with a four hour drill session in the morning and supervised athletics in the afternoon between 1 and 4 o'clock.

Purser on Liner Kills Himself Over Reprimand

Jersey City, N. J., July 30.—[U. P.]—The death of Charles A. Goff, 23, purser on the Dollar liner President Coolidge, has been listed by police as a suicide. Goff, police say, shot himself through the head in his office on the liner after he had been reprimanded by a superior officer for drinking.

TEACHERS' PAY SEEMS AS FAR AWAY AS EVER

Lawmakers Cool to Idea of Special Session.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The payment of $20,700,000 in back salaries to the teachers and other school employés through action by a special session of the state legislature does not appear promising at present. Some of the teachers are advocating that plan.

Nor was there any indication that the payment of a half month's compensation, totaling $2,245,000—which Mayor Cermak promised for last Friday before he sailed for Europe—will be made this week.

The outlook for the payment was even more cloudy yesterday than it was on Friday. No public official or banker could be found who would predict when the $2,245,000 would be made available.

One city official remarked, "They may have to wait until Mayor Cermak returns about Labor day, although I hope not."

Teachers Seek Repeal.

The purpose of calling a special session of the general assembly would be to get it to repeal the teachers' order law—the "N. S. F. checks" act—so far as it relates to Chicago. Then it is presumed by the representatives of the teachers that the bankers would buy sufficient school tax anticipation warrants to pay back salaries. The bankers have held that the present law weakens the security of tax warrants as a lien on taxes.

Legislators of experience were asked their views on a special session. Because they claimed to have many school teachers as constituents, each legislator insisted that his name be not printed before expressing himself.

One of them said that to get emergency action, which is the only thing that will help the teachers, it would be necessary to get 102 votes in the lower house of the legislature. He thought it would take considerable "education" of the legislators to get that number to the state capitol for a special session.

Gives Banker's Viewpoint.

"I have just been talking with a banker about that subject," said another lawmaker. "He thought that the school board has not really trimmed its annual recurring expenses by stopping all building and thereby saving $13,000,000 this year. Some of that will be tacked on the bills next year.

"He wants taxes down to a point where property owners will pay, so that if the bankers lend money on tax anticipation warrants they will be sure of getting it back within a year. So I don't think the banks will lend much money even if the 'N. S. F. check law' is repealed."

Another legislator said it takes a large amount of pressure to get a special session and that members do not care for one just before an election.

Sees Chance for Politics.

A fourth one said he would be "for a special session if the teachers really want it," but added that downstate legislators, if a special session were held, would probably start a barrage of talk against Democratic rule in Chicago which might be detrimental to Democratic state candidates downstate. He said he did not expect that a special session would be called.

A resolution requesting Gov. Emmerson to call a special session may be presented to the school board tomorrow.

KEEP ME FROM POORHOUSE! IS BRITAIN'S PLEA

But Dominions Are Out to Get What They Can.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30.—The British imperial conference has dispersed for a long week-end. Monday is a public holiday throughout Canada and from noon today until Tuesday morning there will be no "official" work by the delegates.

Most of the delegates attended the garden party of Lord Bessborough, Canada's governor general, this afternoon. Later they went to lakes and mountains. While it is possible there may be many private talks in the sylvan surroundings, the outside world will know nothing about the results until the delegates return to Ottawa.

Heads of the delegations met this morning and discussed the advisability of publishing the statement made to the committee on economic and financial questions a few days ago by Neville Chamberlain, British chancellor of the exchequer. This statement, it is understood, covered not only the present economic situation of Great Britain, but also reviewed that of the empire and the world at large.

Hold Back Statement.

It is alleged that it has caused considerable controversy on account of its pessimistic outlook, and it was decided that it should not be published even in a modified form for the present at least. This also led to the temporary withdrawal of the South African statement on the currency problem, which was to have been published today.

The leaders occupied the rest of their time discussing the machinery of the committee on economics and finance and the selection of members of the various subcommittees which will be appointed.

So far, THE TRIBUNE has been assured that the financial committee and the various spokesmen have not had before them in concrete form any proposals for the reform of the empire financial system and have only considered factual statements of the situation in the various nations of the commonwealth. They have, however, heard the pleas of Australia and New Zealand to do something about their depreciated currency and of Canada to help stabilize its dollar against both the pound sterling and the American dollar.

Would Establish Fund.

One suggestion is the establishment of a fund in London similar to that established by the present British government to stabilize sterling exchange. The controllers of this fund would buy Canadian dollars when they began to slip off to keep values intact and sell them if they seemed to be going too high.

Conference members expect to register real progress next week. The first ten days of the conference have been occupied in ascertaining facts. Now the delegations know what every one else wants. But it is not so certain what any one is willing to give in return and on the basis of the information acquired real bargaining will begin next Tuesday.

So far reports of agreements on various articles refer only to agreements among the dominions on what they will demand from Britain, and the conference has finally shaped itself into a poker game with Britain against all the rest. Although the rest are by no means a band of brothers, they are united in the determination to get all they can from the mother country, while "mother" is certain that it is high time for her "children" to club together to keep her from the poor house.

Britain Hides Hand.

Britain has not disclosed her hand. There has been considerable talk over the acceptance by the British delegation of the principle of the taxation of foreign food imported into Britain in order to give a preference to the dominions, but an acceptance of a principle is a long way from detailed concessions.

The talk of a four or five cents tariff on wheat and two to four cents on meat with higher ad valorem taxes on dairy products represents simply what the dominions have agreed to ask and not what Britain has promised. Individual British delegates have expressed opinions favorable or unfavorable to various items in the demands but until the whole picture is fitted together by the experts none can tell what Britain will do or what she will demand.

Only in one respect is the Britain clear. She has made it perfectly plain that she will not be content if the dominions only add another row or two of bricks to the tariff wall against foreign nations while leaving it at the same height for Britain. She insists it is already entirely too high and that a preference on a tariff, which already excludes her, will not interest her.

IRISH PAY $15 FOR ENGLISH HATS FOR 'KING'S PARTY'

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., July 30.—All delegates to the British imperial conference who had or could obtain a top hat and a morning coat attended the garden party of Lord Bessborough, the governor general, at Rideau hall this afternoon and bowed to King George's representative. Even the Irish delegates appeared in top hats.

One of President Eamon de Valera's complaints against the William T. Cosgrave government was that its members wore top hats. The ministers in Dublin now appear at public functions in soft felt hats and business suits. The Irish delegates therefore came without top hats, but, determined to uphold the honor of their country, they acquired them.

They learned that the only top hat seller in Ottawa is an Irishman by the name of Devlin. They rejoiced when they read on his windows in Gaelic "Ceaed Mille Fail," which means "a hundred thousand welcomes." Their hearts fell, however, when they discovered the price was $15 a hat and that the hats were made in England. They felt somewhat better when they were told that Lord Hailsham, British secretary of war, was forced to pay an Irishman $15 for an English hat.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 30.—The Independent Labor [left wing] group of the official Labor party formed a new party today by voting to cut its ties to the parent organization in a meeting at Bradford. James Maxton, member of parliament from Bridgeton, led the separation movement.

Maxton said he plans to gain the support of the more radical following in the regular Labor party which was broken by the coalition movement last fall and to fuse them with the moderates among the communists in Great Britain.

The Independent Laborites have operated independently for some time, refusing to vote as ordered by official Labor leaders. They fought the MacDonald Labor government before it fell. Maxton has only four followers in parliament at present, but, believing the old Labor party to be dead, wished to break completely with them.

5 MAJOR PARTIES EMERGE IN REICH'S DRIVE FOR VOTES

BERLIN, July 30.—(AP)—Five groups are likely to emerge as major parties from tomorrow's German elections. They are:

The National Socialists of Hitler, who wish to establish an "authority" state along Fascist lines.

The Social Democrats, whose socialism since the revolution has become so pink that the party is a petty bourgeois movement, having abandoned its revolutionary character and evolved into a mainstay of the republican system.

The Centrists of former Chancellor Bruening, who are tied together by their Catholicism and who offer themselves to the voters at large as a middle of the road party of toleration and Republicanism.

The communists, disciples of Moscow, who receive their program and instructions from the Third Internationale.

And the German Nationalists, exponents of conservatism and nationalism, who wish to see the monarchy reëstablished.

Closely allied with the Centrists is the Bavarian People's party, which also is Catholic.

For reichstag elections, the country is divided into 35 districts. Each voter must decide for which ticket he wishes to vote, and each party determines the order of its candidates on its ticket. Thus, if in a Saxon district 190,000 votes are cast for the "X" party, the first three names on that party's list are declared elected, as for every 60,000 votes cast one seat in the reichstag is allotted.

In addition to the lists for the 35 districts, there is a so-called federal list. All supernumerary votes from the districts are counted in favor of this federal list.

FATE OF GERMAN REPUBLIC IS UP TO VOTERS TODAY

Von Papen's Junker Rule Confident; 5 Slain.

sibilities for unfolding their rich powers.

"They must decide organically what and by the methods provided therein to expand their constitution. If this election has meaning it is to reconstruct and solidify the German reich. In achieving this aim the reich government desires to be the leader."

Von Papen concluded by describing the progress his cabinet has made in cleaning up the debris left by his predecessors.

Severing Takes Exception.

Severing in his address took exception to that particular remark, pointing to the work the republicans accomplished after the war.

"When the masses were starved and their nerves shattered we republicans saved Germany," he said. "We then rebuilt the state and in long years of hard work reconquered the friendship of other nations.

"Tomorrow's issue is slavery or freedom, dictatorship or democracy, absolutism or democracy, fascism or democracy. Democracy is the safest and most worthy form of government for a grownup people.

On the eve of the most important election in the republic's history. Chancellor von Papen is relying on its secret pact with Hitler to share the power, regardless of the outcome.

The chancellor and his colleagues are looking forward to the election with a supreme calm rarely seen in governmental quarters in Germany in the last decade.

The Von Papen cabinet is confident its friends, the "national front," including the Hitlerites, Dr. Alfred Hugenberg's Nationalists, and the smaller parties of farmers and Protestants—the government allies—will win 47 per cent of the votes. The government does not believe that this combination will become strong enough, however, to step out independently without the guidance of the cabinet.

Official circles expect that the new reichstag will total 600 deputies. Under the constitution one deputy is chosen for every 60,000 votes cast. It is predicted that Hitler's Nazis will win 240 seats, and that other members of the "national front" will add close to sixty deputies.

Monarchists See Gain.

Dr. Hugenberg, the Nationalist leader and close friend of former Kaiser Wilhelm, is more optimistic. He hopes to increase his power so much that the Nationalists together with the Hitlerites and other small nationalist groups, will be able to control the reichstag. Von Papen's friends, however, do not share Hugenberg's optimism.

They believe that the center parties will continue to hold the key position. The dyed in the wool republican Catholic Centrists, led by Dr. Bruening, who was forced to give way to Von Papen, are convinced that the election will make them the third strongest party in Germany.

The Centrists are banking on the popularity of Dr. Bruening and the belief that many Germans fear that a victory for the "national front" would mean a return to junker rule. The Centrists hope to return to the reichstag with at least 75 deputies instead of the 68 they had.

Their close allies, the Bavarian People's party, believe that the resentment of Bavarians against Von Papen for his alleged interference with the prerogatives of German states will help them win a new following. They expect to win 22 seats instead of 19 as before.

Socialists Are Stronger.

The Social Democrats [Socialists], who were defeated in previous local elections, have won new backing through the recent measures of the Von Papen cabinet. They hope to come back with 145 members.

The State party, last of the old liberal parties, has been losing ground in recent years. It is slated to get five seats. Before it had fourteen.

The communists have lost more than 10 per cent of their votes in all local elections and are expected to be lucky if they return with 70 of their 77 representatives. The radical wing of the National Socialists has been breaking into the Red ranks.

Observers of the political situation in Berlin believe that the government's forecast of 240 seats for the Nazis is too high. They predict instead 220 seats, with 65 Nationalists and members of the small parties allied with them. This would give the "national front" 285 seats, but not a majority in the reichstag.

The republicans, led by the Centrists, will get 75 seats, according to these predictions, the Bavarian People's party, 22; the State party, 5; the Socialists, 145, or a total of 247.

The communists will thus be able to play an important part with their expected 68 seats.

'TIN KING' GIVES BOLIVIA PLANES, MONEY FOR WAR

20,000 More Troops Mass to Fight Paraguay.

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 30.—(AP)—A dispatch from Antofagasta today said the Bolivian colony there had learned that Simon Patino, Bolivian diplomat and world "tin king," had donated fifteen airplanes and several million bolivianos to his government for use in the event of war with Paraguay over the Gran Chaco.

The dispatch quoted Bolivians as saying that 20,000 additional men would be mobilized Thursday in their homeland.

There was a hint today that Bolivia will not halt her present activities until she wins an outlet to the sea on the east.

Paraguay Asks Peace Parley.

This was indicated in an exchange of communications by Foreign Minister Ramirez of Paraguay and Foreign Minister Zalles of Bolivia. Ramirez suggested representatives of both governments adjudicate the dispute peacefully by sending a survey party into the Chaco and deciding upon a definite boundary.

"This would be incomplete, and ineffective," replied Zalles. "Paraguay should define its aims and restore to Bolivia an ample outlet to the sea which would avoid the strangulation my country now endures. If Paraguay wishes to avoid armed conflict it should recognize Bolivia's right to satisfaction for recent outrages against its dignity."

Bolivians Capture Forts.

LA PAZ, Bolivia, July 30.—(AP)—All Bolivia was in an uproar of war fever today on the basis of a government communique announcing that Bolivian troops had captured two Paraguayan forts, Corrales and Toledo, in the long disputed jungles of Gran Chaco.

The government communique today conceded that Bolivia had taken the initiative in the latest action, calling it a reprisal for two attacks earlier in July by Paraguayans. Reports went through the capital today that Paraguay was making heavy purchases of materials of war, including airplanes.

Paraguay Threatens War.

ASUNCION, Paraguay, July 30.—(AP)—Dr. José Guggiari, president of Paraguay, today declared that any new attacks in the Chaco by Bolivia will mean "the commencement of war."

"We don't worry about any new attacks from Bolivia," the president said. "These will mean the commencement of war provoked by Bolivia. Paraguay is firmly determined to resist with decision and courage."

League Calls for Peace.

GENEVA, July 30.—[U. P.]—José Matos of Guatemala, president of the league of nations council, telegraphed to Bolivia and Paraguay today reminding them of their international obligations which they affirmed by signing the covenant binding them not to resort to war.

Brazilian Troops Capture Tunnel.

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 30.—(AP)—Dispatches from Bello Horizonte said federal tanks had captured the strategic Mantiqueira tunnel, north of the railway junction of Cruzeiro, today, after a heavy battle with rebels within two miles of the tunnel. The Mantiqueira tunnel is near the Rio de Janeiro-Sao Paulo state borders, almost 200 miles from either capital, Rio de Janeiro and Sao Paulo.

FRANCO-BRITISH BLOC NOT AIMED AT U.S.—HERRIOT

Debt Moves Rest Until After U. S. Elections.

[Copyright: 1932: By the United Press.]

PARIS, July 30.—America need have no fear that a European bloc has been formed to drive a bargain with the United States on payment of war debts, Premier Edouard Herriot said today in an exclusive interview with the United Press.

The French premier consented to clear the clouds of misunderstanding which have hovered over the Lausanne reparations settlement and supplemental agreements as they affect the United States.

In doing so, he said:

Lausanne Treaty Provisional.

"1. The impression that France has an agreement to act jointly with Britain in dealing with war debts owed the United States is false.

"2. The Lausanne settlement is provisional within the framework of a world settlement of the question of international debts.

"3. So far as Herriot is concerned, no further move will be made regarding the debt situation until after the presidential election in the United States.

Herriot was informed that many conflicting reports regarding the Lausanne agreement had been circulated abroad and that the impression prevailed in some quarters that France had an agreement with Britain to act jointly in dealing with the United States on war debts.

Debts Still a Pivotal Condition.

America has no need to fear a European bloc to drive such a bargain, the premier replied with great emphasis, deploring the false statements attributed to him. He emphasized that there is no such agreement between Britain and France.

The so-called "gentleman's agreement" at Lausanne, he explained, was nothing more than an understanding that the reparations settlement would not be effective, that sacrifices to which France agreed will not be made unless there also is an agreement among France, Britain, and the United States regarding the debt payments to America.

There is no agreement or understanding, he emphasized, that France and Britain shall present a united front to the United States or that a debt agreement may not be made between Britain and the United States entirely independent of France.

Refers to Speech in Chamber.

To make himself clear, the premier displayed the statement he made to the chamber of deputies on the matter. It said:

"The Lausanne settlement is conditional. Sacrifices of Lausanne are provisional. The Lausanne European settlement is provisional. European debt settlement is placed within the framework of a world settlement of the question of international debts."

"The text is clear," the premier explained, "so clear that none can contest or falsely interpret it. If no satisfactory settlement is arrived at the Young plan will remain in force.

"For some days unfortunate and false interpretations of my statements concerning the Lausanne accomplishments have been circulated over the world. They have even put in my mouth statements which I never uttered affecting the liberty of Great Britain in regard to the United States and, consequently, affecting the future relations between Britain and the United States on the question of debts.

"I insist I have never made such statements."

Sets "Europe's House in Order."

Herriot said that, so far as he is concerned, no further move will be made regarding the debt situation until after the United States presidential election.

The Lausanne proceedings, he said, were in line with what was understood to be the desire of the United States that Europe put its house in order before any change could be made in the debt settlement terms.

Europe's way back to normalcy is a long road and for the journey much hard labor is required, the premier said in letting it be known he would remain at his desk all summer without a vacation.

"Order in Europe is not pure idealism," in the words of Herriot. "European order demands hard labor—much hard labor."

CASHIER OF DELLS ROBBED OF $12,000, HE TELLS POLICE

Jules Merson, cashier of the Dells Morton Grove roadhouse, yesterday reported to the Evanston police that he had been robbed of $7,000 in cash and $5,000 in checks by two men who halted him earlier in the day in front of the Georgian hotel, 422 Davis street Evanston. Merson at first told a halting story, according to the police, but with the arrival of his uncle, Sam Hare, manager of the roadhouse, he gave complete details of the alleged robbery.

He said that he left the money at the City National Bank and Trust company, Evanston, for safe keeping, Friday night. He returned for it yesterday morning and started for his room in the Georgian hotel before going to the roadhouse.

Two men leaped from a car parked in front of the hotel, Merson said. One of them threatened him with a revolver while the second snatched the money bag. The bandits then got into their car and escaped, Merson said. Bank employés verified the statement that Merson had left the bag at the bank but said they did not know how much money it contained. Hare said the bag contained $1,200 instead of $12,000.

The police were unable to find any witnesses to the robbery. They announced there would be no further investigation.

Frees Father Who Kept Beer for Marriage Fete

Judge James F. Fardy yesterday ruled that the marriage of a daughter was sufficient excuse for William Eden, 59 years old, 1513 East 63d street, to have beer in his ice box. Eden was freed on a charge of illegal possession of liquor when he explained he was celebrating the marriage.

PICTURES SPOIL RECTOR'S CHANCE FOR NEW HEARING

Appeal Is Denied in Immorality Case.

BY EUGENE SPECK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 30.—Photographs in which the Rev. Harold F. Davidson, 62 year old rector of Stiffkey, appeared in clerical dress beside a 15 year old girl clad in a thigh length shawl today spiked the preacher's appeal for a new hearing on his conviction by a diocesan court on charges of immorality with young girls.

The appeal was denied by the judicial committee of the privy council, the highest court of the Anglican church. It closed the last avenue left to the rector to escape the sentence which the bishop of Norwich is expected to pronounce in the next few days.

The photographs were introduced on the second and concluding day of the hearing. The committee had asked Roland Oliver, the bishop's counsel, to enlighten them on the evidence corroborating the immorality charges.

Made for Sale Abroad.

Oliver passed the judges the pictures made on the day before the rector's trial opened with the comment that it was understood they were made for sale abroad. The girl was standing beside the Rev. Mr. Davidson with the preacher's hand on her shoulder.

Ryder Richardson, in defense, submitted that his client was the "most foolish of all men," but maintained that the picture was a frameup. The picture was arranged simply to help a jobless girl make a little money through a photograph for an advertisement, and said the photographer tricked the rector.

Took Girls To Paris.

Richardson criticized the bishop for refusing to call the photographer as a prosecution witness during the trial. The committee, however, held that the Rev. Mr. Davidson was guilty of immoral conduct.

"If a man takes a flat for a girl described as a young prostitute and then goes to France with such a girl on two or three different occasions, I think that is sufficient evidence," Lord Atkin, chairman, declared.

EUROPE ANXIOUS TO DRAW U. S. INTO TRADE PARLEY

Agrees to Bar Debt Talk; Invitations Received.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 30.—[Special.]—Publication of the text of the British note inviting the United States to participate in the league of nations economic and monetary conference, revealed today that the European powers have leaned over backwards in an effort to persuade the United States to become a participant.

In its formal note the British government states that the invitations are extended on the understanding that the questions of reparations, of debts, and of specific tariff rates will be excluded from the scope of the conference. This step was taken to meet expressed state department objections to American participation in a conference at which the war debts owed this country by the allies would be discussed.

Place for Conference Undecided.

While state department officials declined comment other than to say that the invitation was under consideration, all indications were that the United States would accept.

No time or place was set for the conference, although Washington officials said probably it would be held in London.

Silver would be one of the major topics discussed. The other subject include monetary and credit policy, exchange difficulties, the level of prices, the movement of capital, prohibitions and restrictions of importation and exportation of products, quotas and other barriers to trade and producers' agreement.

Text of Note.

The British note announcing that the league invitation had been sent the United States reads as follows:

"I have the honor under instructions from his majesty's principal secretary of state for foreign affairs to transmit to you herewith two notes on the subject of the world economic conference. These notes invite the United States government to be represented on the committee of the council of the league of nations which is charged with the task of convoking the conference and to appoint two experts to sit on the committee charged with the preliminary examination of the financial and economic questions referred to in resolution V. attached to the final act of the Lausanne conference.

"I have further the honor to inform you that these invitations are extended on the understanding that the questions of reparations, of debts and of specific tariff rates [as distinguished from tariff policy] will be excluded from the scope of the conference and that among the monetary matters within its scope will be the question of silver."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 30.—Criticism of the part played by King George in Great Britain's financial crisis last September was uttered today in an address at the Oxford Liberal summer school by H. G. Wells, noted author. Such criticism is rarely made and was received in dead silence.

"The Labor party," he said, "is a complete failure, the Liberals are weak kneed, the Tories are outdated, and the world generally is in the hands of mental dwarfs. The cure needed is a revival of liberalism and termination of parliamentary control.

"The king was so ill-advised as to depart from his proper political and social neutrality and to lead the movement for cheese paring and grinding of faces of the needy in the interest of the debt collector, and not a soul in the Labor party said what ought to have been said about the king or the miserable campaign of unintelligible economy which cast its dismal shadow over the closing months of 1931."

Webber, Alfred Filch, and Donald Branan, all of Aurora, and Marshall Roach of Sycamore, were held to the grand jury in $1,500 bonds each, and the following were held in $1,000 bonds: William Anderson, Aurora; Marco Gusick, De Kalb, and Hugo Luederberg, De Kalb.

COVELLI DEFENDS 24 CONTINUANCES GIVEN 3 BANDITS

Prosecutor's Aid Gives Reasons for Delays.

The 24 continuances granted in 25 court appearances to three bandits, who held up Miss Marie MacLaughlan, 17 years old, and her mother in a restaurant at 9137 South Western avenue last May 2, were defended yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Daniel Covelli, who had been assigned to prosecute the case in Chief Justice Harry Fisher's court.

Two of the young badits, Alex Johnson and Allen Reynolds, both 18, were given probation by Judge Fisher last Wednesday. Charles Harrington, 16 years old, leader of the gang who slightly wounded Miss MacLaughlan after she had shot him in the hip, was sent to the St. Charles School for Boys on Thursday.

"A Clean Record."

"The case was entirely on the up and up," said Prosecutor Covelli emphatically. "The record is perfectly clean. If any one thinks there was a fix in the case let him prove it."

Prosecutor Covelli reviewed the case, giving reasons for the numerous continuances.

"Johnston was arrested first," he said. "He was indicted and when arraigned asked for a continuance. He was entitled to a continuance under the law on his first arraignment.

"Then Reynolds was arrested and the police, without the knowledge of the state's attorney, had him brought before a grand jury and indicted also. When the two defendants were arraigned the second time we were informed that a second indictment had been returned. I had to chase around the building to get the new indictment and then had to dismiss the first indictment.

Both Plead Guilty.

"The case came up again and both men pleaded guilty and petitioned for probation. Under the law the judge who accepts a plea of guilty must decide upon probation. When the men were arraigned the next three times Judge Fisher was ill. Judge Prystalski, who heard the cases, was unable to decide upon them.

"Judge Fisher's illness thus caused most of the continuances. When he returned the prosecuting witness agreed to probation and the judge allowed it."

Prosecutor Covelli was asked why the probation had been granted by Judge Fisher without any resistance from the state's attorney.

"Can't Fight the Judge."

"The state's attorney has nothing to say about probation," he said. "We merely present the evidence and let the judge decide. We can't fight the judge on his granting of probation."

Assistant State's Attorney Ralph J. Riley was in charge of the prosecution of Harrington in the Juvenile court. He could not be reached for an explanation of the many continuances granted Harrington in the Juvenile court.

PAIR OF ROBBERS STAGE 5 HOLDUPS IN 35 MINUTES

A pair of fast working bandits staged five robberies in the Lawndale district within 35 minutes yesterday. Their first victim was John Triska, 2522 South St. Louis avenue, from whom they got $1.60. Next they halted Frank Kolady, 3216 South Kedvale avenue, and got $35. Both men are truck drivers and both were held up in the 2400 block, South Central Park avenue. The robbers then held up butcher shops at 3556 West 26th street, 3324 West 26th street, and 3138 West 22d street, getting $200 each from the first two places, and $100 from the third.

STABS MAN HE CLAIMS 'KNOCKED U. S. TOO MUCH'

William H. Bell, 69 years old, a peddler, was arrested last night by Policemen George Lahey and Richard Farrell, standing with a knife in his hand over William C. Bowles, 48, at Van Buren and Halsted streets. He had stabbed Bowles in the right thigh.

"Bowles has been giving me communist talk lately, and tonight he knocked the government too much," explained Bell. Bell, a native of the Isle of Man, told police that he was in the railroad construction business years ago. Bell and Bowles live at 767 Van Buren street.

YOUTH IS SLAIN BY EX-CONVICT; 2 STORIES TOLD

James De Salvo, 22 years old, of 3532 South Francisco avenue, was shot and killed this morning at Archer and Hamlin avenues by Joseph Schumoch, 35, of 3032 Lock street.

Schumoch, who admits he served 7 years at Joliet for robbery, was arrested several blocks away from the scene by Policeman John Galk. He told New City police that he fired upon De Salvo when the latter and a companion tried to rob him. No gun was found on the slain youth.

Later Paul Foreman, 28 years old, of 4844 West 36th place, who was De Salvo's companion, appeared at the station and denied that they had tried to rob Schumoch. He charged the killing to an angry whim on Schumoch's part.

De Salvo and I were in a speakeasy at 46th street and Avers avenue," Foreman said. "We saw Schumoch. I remarked to De Salvo that the children in the neighborhood called him a gangster. Schumoch became angry. When we left he fired a couple of shots at us. Later he stopped us in Archer avenue, seized De Salvo around the neck and fired one shot."

Schumoch still clung to his story, however. Police are investigating his account. Early this morning they questioned a girl, Miss Stella Gniadek, 4552 South Avers avenue, whom he had visited just before the shooting. She told police that when Schumoch left her he said he was going to the home of Louis Koslowski, 3818 West 45th place, to "have a few beers." This is the place mentioned by Foreman as a "speakeasy."

POLICE SYSTEM IS REORGANIZED; 8 CHIEFS NAMED

City Divided Into Six District Zones.

under him the motorcycle division, the central traffic detail, the vehicle bureau, and the accident prevention division. The vehicle bureau, now commanded by Lieut. James Killackey as a separate body, is under criticism, charges having been made that the personnel incorporated a taxicab bonding company and at the same time restricted taxicab licenses.

Departmental Secretary James McSweeney will head the bureau of department records and property, with authority over motor service, department supplies, the dog pound and lost and stolen property.

The bureau of criminal information and statistics will be headed by Capt. William Killeen, who will also take charge of all radio and telephone communication. Maj. John Bauder will be director of personnel and in charge of police training and disciplinary trial boards.

The crime prevention bureau, under Lieut. Ernest Mueller, will have charge of police matrons, juvenile officers and motion picture censorship. Capt. Martin Mullen, long in charge of special vice and gambling squads, becomes head of the morals division. It will operate to suppress gambling, vice and narcotics, but Commissioner Allman emphasized that no responsibility in this respect would be lifted from district and divisional commanders.

Report by Numbers.

Under the new organization all patrolmen on beats will report through police phones to division instead of district quarters. They will use their numbers only instead of names. This was recommended by Mr. Smith to guarantee that personal friendship would not interfere with correct marking of time sheets.

To care for the district vacancies created by the promotion of the supervising captains transfers were made of other men of similar rank. There were also several changes for "the good of the service," the net result being the shifting of seventeen commanding officers in all.

RETURN TO THE AMERICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT.

THE TRIBUNE adds a plank to its platform for America: "Return to the American form of government." It is number one of the changes required and desired.

The alteration of the American government by encroachment may prove to be one of the most momentous facts of history, although during the process the people may not perceive what is being done. The United States has changed more in fifty years than England has in five hundred. The American case is one of the swiftest modifications without revolution ever known.

There is now a form of government which is more nearly akin to the Russian soviets than it is to the system provided in the constitution. It is a government by commissions amply supplied with money and endowed with authority to rule by decree and quasi-judicial decisions. It is not a government of limited powers, legislating by representative assembly within its delegated authority.

Its commissars are now conducting the business of the American people. A triumvirate of cabinet officers, acting as a judicial commission, recently ordered the Chicago Board of Trade closed. Another commission having bought wheat and exchanged it for coffee is now advertising for bids on the coffee. A commission determines what rates the railroads may charge and how they may operate as systems. A commission is in the banking business and may save or destroy banks by extending or withholding credit. A commissars' decree determines whether private industry may or may not sell other produce than meat products.

A citizen or a group of citizens wishing to manufacture for interstate trade may find it necessary to retain special counsel for an approach to Washington where commissars will require architects' blue prints and impose inspection before goods can be shipped. The farm board is trying to communize the farms. The radio commission sets up a jurisdiction which amounts to authority to expropriate property. The postoffice department maintains an arbitrary censorship.

The government has gone in the building and loan business. It is undertaking a communistic distribution of wealth by punitive taxation of productive states and the pauperizing of other states by subsidies. Having the control of the railroads which now send executives hat in hand to Washington for loans, it is reaching out for other public utilities. It seeks an entrance into the production of electric power.

Commissars want control of public education. They are preparing to furnish federal obstetricians and take charge of the infant. They advise as to the diet and are in the dressmaking business. They conduct markets in competition with taxed citizens. They even sell the flavors of alcoholic drinks to make contraband liquors more palatable. They have subsidized winemaking and taxed the ingredients of illegal beer. They dig weeds, raid homes, tap wires, padlock places of business and take property without just process. They have boosted the costs of government to five billions and they have so ruined the people that now the states are sending mendicants to Washington to get money to feed their destitute.

So we say: "Return to the American form of government." Return before it is too late, before the government of commissars has been fastened upon a people who cannot escape. Return to a Union of delegated and enumerated powers, of states both sovereign and competent, freed from the federal investigator and inspector, subsidizer and regulator, tax collector and expropriator. The federal proconsuls are destroying the substance and the form of the American republic. They are destroying the independence and solvency, financial and mental, of the people. They are taxing the nation to death to get funds to regulate it to death.

The early American Presidents saw this coming and tried to stop it. Unfortunately, they did not succeed.

"Have you considered all the consequences of your proposition respecting post roads?" Jefferson wrote to Madison. "I view it as a source of boundless patronage to the executive, jobbing to members of congress and their friends, and a bottomless abyss of public money. You will begin by only appropriating the surplus of the postoffice revenues; but the other revenues will soon be called to their aid, and it will be a scene of eternal scramble among the members who can get the most money wasted in their state; and they will always get the most who are the meanest."

JUST AROUND THE CORNER.

There is ground for an assumption that the present plight of the railroads is satisfactory not only to radical political groups but to certain elements of bureaucracy as being just around the corner from nationalization. The strangulating regulations which reduce railroad managements to the status of staffs of clerks are calculated to force the surrender of private property to government ownership and operation.

The sensible socialist or communist knows that his most powerful ally, aiding him silently and probably less than half consciously, is the American federal bureaucrat into whose awkward hands the present times have directly played. The magnifying of the bureaucratic scheme is producing the machinery of collectivism and at the same time it is breaking down individual abilities and private resourcefulness. There is being provided a network of government functions covering the country, adapted for socialist or communist purposes and available for them, and in its meshes the individual resistance is being overpowered by regulation and destroyed by taxation.

In the case of the railroads the progress toward nationalization has been most clearly marked. The transportation systems are now the wards of the interstate commerce commission and the Reconstruction Finance corporation. If the managements frequently appear to be dazed it is not astonishing. Their operations are congealed in bureaucratic ice at a time when elasticity and inspiration would be required to meet rapidly changing conditions.

The American railroad is an institution which cannot be jeopardized without shaking other institutions. Its investment fabric is an essential part of the nation, woven into its security. If the rail transportation can be harried by competition and smothered by regulation until it is prostrated the rescue, if the inappropriateness of that word can be endured, by nationalization will seem forced by the collapse of private ownership and management. It will be a collapse predetermined by the doctrines which then will be applied as the cure, being themselves the causes.

If the railroads are forced into state operation by state regulation threatening their existence the march of the soviets will not stop there. Utilities, electric power, mines, etc., with no reason for excepting farms, will go under the hammer. That's the drift, and one conspicuous success of the allied collectivists and bureaucrats will be only the overture to the complete opera.

DEFAMATION BY RADIO.

Radio broadcasting is raising many novel questions of law and requiring new interpretations and applications of legal principle. We think the law of slander and libel should be reconsidered with respect to broadcasting.

Under the common law there is an important distinction between defamation by the spoken word, which is defined as slander, and defamation that is written or printed and published, which is defined as libel. The latter was and is the more serious offense, a crime, in fact, as well as a cause of civil action.

The reasons for this distinction between libel and slander are, first, that a libel is permanent and may circulate through many hands; second, that it shows greater malignity on the part of its author than slander, and third, that it is more likely to lead to a breach of the peace.

Applying these tests to broadcasting, we think they should justify placing defamation by radio under the head of libel. It is not in fact physically permanent in the sense that written or printed words and pictures are, but it circulates through many ears, reaches as large a number of hearers as a book does readers, if not larger. It may be assumed to be more deliberate and hence to imply a greater malignity than a defamation in ordinary speech and because of its great publicity it may reasonably be assumed to be more likely to lead to breaches of the peace.

In short, the reasoning which supports the definition of printed defamation as libel, a public as well as a private offense, an indictable crime as well as a tort, seems to us to apply pretty well to a broadcast or radio transmission of defamatory words. It resembles libel more than slander and we think should be so defined by the law.

CAPT. VON PAPEN IN THE U. S.

It is certainly one of the strangest events in our international relations that the German chancellor should be an individual under indictment of a grand jury of the United States. On April 16, 1916, the present chancellor, then Capt. Franz von Papen, was indicted with four others by a federal grand jury for alleged participation in a conspiracy to blow up the locks of the Welland canal. That indictment still stands against him, since the statute of limitations does not run in favor of a defendant who is out of the jurisdiction. If the chancellor should be moved to visit Mr. Hoover as the heads of the British and French governments have done he would be subject to arrest unless the indictment were quashed for his benefit. Col. von Papen, so far as we know, is not planning a trip to Washington or likely ever to revisit the United States, for we assume he has no inclination to test again the hospitality of "those idiotic Yankees" to whom he "always said," as he wrote to his wife in 1915, "that they had better hold their tongues."

Americans who recall the chancellor's activities while within our gates are not likely to regret such a decision. In the first years of the late war Col. (then Capt.) von Papen was in the United States as a diplomatic representative of the German imperial government. He took advantage of his status as the official representative of a power with which we were at peace to engage in secret activities which seriously involved our responsibilities as a neutral power, and which endangered the property and even the lives of American citizens. He was proved to be an active participant in an elaborate policy of mischief making pursued by the German and Austrian embassies for the purpose of embarrassing and injuring their enemies regardless of the neutrality of the United States, and for the purpose of inflaming opinion against them among foreign born citizens of the United States. For this the American state department asked the recall of Capt. von Papen and Capt. Boy-Ed, and the department of justice later obtained Capt. von Papen's indictment, in order, as was officially announced at the time, that in view of the "conclusive evidence" against him "there should be attached to his name whatever of stigma the indictment carries." Two other objects of the indictment officially declared were, "that the indictment carries with it an amount of punishment in that, since it cannot be outlawed by time, Capt. von Papen can never return to the United States without running the risk of arrest and trial," and "for its general effect as a possible warning against the abuse of diplomatic privilege by representatives of nations accredited to the United States."

The folly of these machinations is or ought to be clear to the most ardent apologist for the imperial régime, for they accomplished little to hinder allied operations but much to inflame resentment in America against Germany and Austria. And in the American mind there remains the deep impression of an abuse of diplomatic privilege, of official immunity and hospitality, which influences even today the American attitude not only toward Col. von Papen but toward the class or classes he represents in German politics today. The ethics represented by the breach of privilege and honorable dealing, the willingness to plot and betray behind a studious pretense of friendliness, do not seem, in the American view, to promise a high order of international conduct from Chancellor von Papen and the régime he represents.

Perhaps time and experience have altered his views of justifiable conduct, but at a time when good faith in international intercourse is especially important and the confidence and good will of America certainly not without value the sudden elevation of former Capt. von Papen to the seat of Bismarck is not encouraging.

If a bold and unscrupulous man were wanted to overthrow the republic of Germany Von Papen's record would point him out as suited to the task.

HERDING THE TEXAS STEERS

TEXAS SEEMS in a fair way to return to its duplex governor, Jim and Ma Ferguson. The family sketch topped Gov. Sterling by nearly a hundred thousand in the first primary. This thing happened once before and Sterling was able to gain enough support from the eliminated candidates to win. If he does not do so a second time the state will have Jim pitching and Miriam catching again, but Texas is not without retorts when other states want to put it in a glass case as an exhibit of locoed democracy, and most of the retorts have point, not least of all for Illinois.

THE VARIED CHOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE FORECAST FOR KANSAS indicates a probability that the electorate is about to confer its favors on the goat gland optimist, Dr. Brinkley, exercising the Jeffersonian doctrine that one democratic privilege is the pursuit of happiness. The Kansans will be chided for this, but they know what they want and if it's Brinkley it will be Brinkley. The intellectuals who indorsed Mr. Brookhart in Iowa because, although dumb, he was wild, are severe upon his conqueror, Mr. Field, who, they say, is a radio chicken stew publicist. If Mr. Field arrives in Washington for a seat in the senate it will be because he, as Mr. Brookhart was before him, is the People's Choice, just as Dr. Brinkley may be in Kansas. Although malign influences are supposed to spread out everywhere from Wall street and big business, it does not seem intelligent to account thus for Mr. Bilbo in Mississippi, Postoffice Jack Garner of Texas, Tom Heflin in Alabama, or Alfalfa Bill Murray in Oklahoma. Even that despair of intellectualism, Mr. Rolfe of California, who will not let Mooney and Billings out, is the People's Choice.

JIMMIE TO HOOEY TO BILL

NO ONE who thought of government as an important and consequential phase of human life would regard Mr. Walker of New York as a satisfactory answer to the requirements. Nor could he think that Hooey Long of Louisiana was the response to a patriot's prayer. Alfalfa Bill is such a natural that he can be explained as the outpouring of the native character even if he does require that Providence work a three shift day, but if the responsibilities were more there would be a wish that Mr. Murray were less. Some people know that the best to be expected of the democratic political process, year in and year out, is a semi-honest demi-intelligence. Usually the greater the intelligence the less the honesty, for the very good reason that intelligence seeks rewards which only dishonesty can provide.

PEDAGOGUE AND DEMAGOGUE

WHEN AIMEE MCPHERSON is ready, if she ever is, to turn from emotional religion to emotional politics she'll probably be able to carry California for herself, for Ma or for Whataman Hudson or Whataman Hutton. It is not clearly demonstrated whether a simp or a scoundrel has the better chance in many electorates, but it is nowhere certain that a candidate is hopeless because he is a big jackass. The difficulties the electorate has in deriving government from elsewhere than the home for the feeble minded or the county jail have suggested to some reasonable people that the best answer is to decrease the opportunities of government to do damage. The opposite of this appeals to the intellectuals. They observe Dr. Brinkley, Ma Ferguson, Jimmie Walker, etc., and conclude that the best way to cure government ills is to increase them.

DEMOCRACY AND SUPER-GOVERNMENT

ONE DISASTROUS CONSEQUENCE of this mad nonsense is that old standards of criticism are failing. The determination to increase the jurisdiction of government, its powers and functions, is ignoring the mess which political cupidity, insolence, and mental infirmity are making of the country's affairs. One cannot at once attack the stupidities and dishonesties of government and at the same time work incessantly to extend the field of government into all affairs where these stupidities and dishonesties will have more calamitous effect. Even intellectualism cannot be blind to such an absurdity of conduct. Consequently disgraceful operations in public affairs are gaining immunity. It would be altogether too ridiculous to expose the frailties of government and advocate its extension into operations where its inherent faults can do still greater damage. The theorists do not know where they can get another kind of government and apparently they have agreed to forget that the first requirement of democracy is a limitation of authority.

PREVENTION OF HALITOSIS.

SOME ONE asks for a simple and prompt cure for halitosis. If any one must have simple and prompt relief there is nothing for him to do except to use one of the deodorants for the breath, of which there are many. Everybody capable of reading an advertisement knows about them, and if a person cannot read he is indifferent to his degree of odoriferousness. These advertised deodorizers, however, are merely life preservers. Like a swimming belt, we put them on and take them off. They may support us for a brief period of emergency, but they do not take the place of learning to swim.

We acquire halitosis by years of the experiences of life. We cannot shed it as a snake sheds its skin. Cure must be more than skin deep if it is to stick, and all deeply rooted processes require time and effort.

A small part of the cases of halitosis are due to offensive decomposition occurring in the nose. The nose disease responsible is ozena. The cure of this disease is baffling. Another small part results from decompositions in the crypts of the tonsils. It is not a difficult matter to empty these crypts, or even to remove them. This stops halitosis—assuming no crypts are left behind to act as garbage cans. Some cases are due to accumulations of decaying débris on the tongue and around the teeth. The problem of cure in this rather small group is comparatively simple.

By far the largest group of cases of halitosis are due to volatile, odoriferous compounds made within the digestive tract, absorbed therefrom, and excreted by the lungs. Most of these compounds have a sweetish odor, one that is described by some as ethereal, and that is objectionable to nearly every one. In all probability there are several of these chemical substances. The truth is we know very little about them.

Why no laboratory has done research work on this subject of great interest to so many millions is not easily understood. The wonder is that none of the great establishments with millions invested in advertising breath deodorants has financed research on breath odors. It is easy to capture the breath as is done in the popular metabolism test, and analysis should not be difficult. About all we know now is that the cure of halitosis of this type requires radical change in the diet. It is probable that change in the bowel habits is even more necessary. If halitosis has resulted from a given diet, or from certain bowel habits, this is a fairly good argument for a new diet and different bowel habits.

About the only claims for remedial procedures that appear to bear on the subject are those made for diets rich in acidophilus milk and other soured milks and milk sugar. To balance the diet vegetables, fruits, sugars, and a little fat are needed.

When some vegetables are eaten certain specific odors are very much in evidence. It would seem, therefore, that some vegetables should be avoided.

LIFE NOT IN DANGER.

C. B. N. writes: 1. Do hemorrhoids which bleed at times and occasionally considerably call for prompt attention?

2. Does such bleeding lower vitality or blood count?

3. Would ventriculin counteract such deleterious effect?

4. Is the injection treatment accepted?

5. Could it result in cancer?

REPLY.

1. No.

2. In some cases bleeding is sufficient to cause anemia. As a rule, it is not. The body compensates well. Hemorrhoids cause inconvenience, but they seldom endanger life.

3. It would not be called for in many cases.

4. Many experienced surgeons use it habitually.

5. I know of no studies which prove that cancer of this region is more frequent in those who have hemorrhoids than it is in others of the same age who are free from the affliction.

SEE PHYSICIAN AND DENTIST.

A. P. writes: My mouth is bloody when I get up in the morning. I feel well. Could it be my tonsils or my teeth?

REPLY.

There are several possible causes. One is scurvy; another, pyorrhea. I have known arthritis to start that way. See your dentist or your physician, or both.

ACNE.

I. M. R. writes: 1. Can acne be distinguished from ordinary pimples merely by appearance and if so how?

2. Is there a cure for acne?

3. Is it due to a condition of the blood?

REPLY.

1. Acne and pimples are essentially the same. A pimple is an infected blackhead.

2. Yes, more than one. Shaving is a cure. In shaving, the blackheads are emptied. Some are dissolved out with soap and hot water. Others are scraped or squeezed out with the razor. Steaming and massaging cures many cases. Marriage cures some. Dieting is of service.

3. No.

CANNOT BE RECOVERED.

I. I. S. writes: Please tell me what chance my children stand for recovery. They had spinal meningitis and my boy was left totally deaf and my girl blind in one eye.

REPLY.

It is to be regretted, but sight and hearing are not recovered after being lost from cerebrospinal meningitis.

LITTERING VACANT LOTS.

Chicago, July 20.—[Friend of the People.]—The vacant lot at 71st and Harper is very insanitary and unsightly. Several families dump garbage, tin cans, etc., on the lot. There is a bad odor as soon as the weather is the least bit warm, and the lot is so rat infested that the smaller children cannot play in the adjoining yards. Billboard advertisers leave a mess of paper when they change posters.
M. P.

Report is made that lot is now in satisfactory condition. Advertising company has been notified to have its men haul old paper away from billboards instead of leaving it on lot. A "no dumping" sign has been erected and location will also be kept under observation in an effort to prevent further cause for complaint.

JOSEPH J. BUTLER,

INHERITANCE.

Chicago, July 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please inform me regarding an estate left me. The will says I am under no restrictions and no bond is required. 1. Does that stand by law? 2. I would also like to know if inheritance tax officials have the power to set the fee of my attorney or any other agency. 3. I am told by attorney that they set the fee at the rate of 5 or 6 per cent. Is that correct?
T. O.

1. Where a will contains the common wording relieving the executor from bond, he is not required to furnish surety, if that is what you mean to ask.

2. They do not set the fee, but if they consider the fee excessive they can refuse to allow the excess as an exemption from the tax.

3. We would say that 4 per cent was nearer to the average.

COMPENSATION FOR INJURIES.

Metropolis, Ill., July 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—While employed I broke my arm. Was getting $26 per week at time and worked about nine months per year. Insurance company pays me $8.30 per week. Am not married. 1. I was under the impression that under the compensation act I was to receive half pay. 2. Also, does the insurance company have to make a cash settlement after disability stops? There surely must be a percentage of impairment in a broken arm.
H. K.

1. We suggest that you ask them how they figure it.

2. If you can prove a permanent injury you would be entitled to compensation for it, but we would not agree with you that there is necessarily any permanent injury in a broken arm.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

GARNISHMENT.

Chicago, July 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can an attorney garnishee a man's wages without first obtaining judgment? He has no papers of any kind signed by me. He has never sued me in court because it is not a just debt, but my employer refuses to give me any salary without a release. 2. What can I do? I cannot afford to hire a lawyer. 3. Is there any one I can go to? 4. What can be done to a lawyer for serving papers of garnishment without obtaining judgment?
M. M. S.

1. In general, no.

2. If the attorney has caused a garnishee demand notice to be served on your employer in advance of judgment against you we suggest that you report these facts to the Bar association.

3 and 4. See No. 2.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

JULY 31, 1916.

NEW YORK.—A fire of unexplained origin on the munitions pier of the Lehigh Valley railroad in Jersey City early this morning was followed by an explosion that rocked the metropolitan district for miles around, caused detonations felt in five states, and did property damage estimated at more than $30,000,000. Several persons were killed and many more injured. The number of deaths will not be known until the ruin that was one of the finest railroad terminals in the United States has been searched and cleared away. Whether the fire caused the explosion is a matter not yet determined. The blaze started far out on the tip of Black Tom island, where there were munition cars in the yard and barges loaded with explosives lying alongside. No more spectacular fire has been witnessed in or about this city for many years. The explosion was terrific. The shock of it brought destruction across the broad waters of New Jersey bay to Manhattan and Brooklyn, littering the streets with broken glass and damaging the contents of business houses. The skyscrapers of the financial district today looked as if they had been targets for scattering handfuls of rocks from a great giant. Windows were ripped out of their fronts and sides, twisted frames hung over the streets, and jutting ledges and window sills were strewn with splinters of glass and coated over with fine gray powder. The Statue of Liberty was sprayed with shrapnel, bullets, and all manner of missiles from the terrific explosion. Ellis island, with its hundreds of immigrants and employés, spent a night of terror and great peril, yet only a few persons were injured, and these slightly. The damage in Jersey City was great. Hardly a store along Newark avenue, the main business thoroughfare, escaped. The cause has not yet been determined.

PARIS.—After a pause the French echelon north of the Somme resumed operations today, giving further proof of the perfection of the new method by making a clean sweep of the German positions along a three and a half mile front from Hardecourt to the river. The French troops in Picardy had been waiting until the British carried out the operation assigned to them. On the front between Hill 139, northeast of Hardecourt, and the river, the French troops, passing to the attack, captured a whole system of trenches on a depth varying from 300 to 800 meters.

PETROGRAD.—While Gen. Brussiloff's breach in the Austro-German lines west of Lutsk is being widened and deepened by the further driving home of the wedge between the armies of Gen. von Linsingen and Gen. von Boehm-Ermolli, a new development has been recorded in the last 30 hours in the renewed activity of Gen. Letchitzky to the south of the Dneister. The Russians here have begun a new turning movement on Gen. von Bothmer's right flank to the west and southwest of Tarnopol. A division of cavalry rushed the Austrians and captured Ezerzany, 20 miles southeast of Stanislau.

PARIS.—The war office gave out the following report on aerial operations on the western front: "Yesterday our machines engaged in eleven fights on the Somme front. Three German machines were brought down and a fourth machine, attacked by one of our aeroplanes, was dashed to pieces within the German lines in the Argonne."

CHICAGO.—One hundred and seventeen deaths from the heat was the day's total up to midnight. This makes a total of 264 deaths due to the torrid wave in the last four days and more than 400 prostrations were reported. And yesterday, too, established the highest heat record but one in the history of the local weather bureau. The maximum, after the wind veered around into the southwest, was 101.7. At 7 o'clock last night it was 99. A cool wave is expected to bring relief by tonight.

THE BEAUTY OF THE SKOKIE.

Chicago, July 21.—Of late I have been in the habit of motoring along the western rim of the Skokie west of Ravinia, Glencoe, and Winnetka. This is the road that some time in the future, we hope, is to take the peak of the load off Sheridan road, and is in many ways far superior to that of Sheridan road. In fact, I know of no other road in this section from which you can see the full beauty of the Skokie landscape in its openness, its peacefulness, its joy, and mental freedom.

More than ever do I feel that this vast stretch of marsh land should remain as it is forever. It is of the greatest importance to those that are confined in the prison homes of city life to have this opportunity of feeling the peace and friendliness that this uninhabited open spaces bring to the mind—a vastness of waving grass hiding multitudes of beautiful flowers, many of which are very rare in this region; a real home for a great variety of birds and animal life that may live here in peace, and once in a while thrill the wayfarer with their sudden flight as strangers from the far off; the flickering lights of habitation at eventide on the rising bluffs. And who has not seen the beautiful sunsets over the Skokie? Nature seems to talk finer and deeper when left alone.

There is something so fine and charming about this bit of open landscape that not even the dune country surpasses it. The forest preserves have their great importance with their cool shade and shelter, with the moving waters of the Des Plaines and its historic associations, but the Skokie marshes are just as important in giving us that joy and mental freedom that only the great open spaces, free from interference, can give.

JENS JENSEN.

MILK AND TELEPHONES.

Chicago, July 20.—Before the war the customary charge for "unlimited" single line telephone service for business purposes was somewhere around 10 or 11 dollars per month. The cost for the same service with about the same number of calls has increased to about three times as much during the last ten or twelve years. It seems that the time for a reduction in telephone rates is here and we are glad to note therefore that in Wisconsin the state authorities have ordered the telephone companies to reduce their rates.

Here in Chicago, by virtue of the "splendid" coöperation between the big milk companies and the drivers' union, milk is still bringing 11 to 13 cents a quart, while leading retail stores are selling full cream cheese as low as 11 cents a pound. Now, it takes five quarts of milk to make one pound of cheese, but five quarts of milk converted with great skill and expense into one pound of cheese bring no more here than one quart of the same milk if sold by the "combine." Milk could be sold here at a handsome profit at 8 to 9 cents a quart, and there is more milk to be had near Chicago than is needed. Still, if one dares to sell milk for less he is in danger of his life unless he invokes the protection of the authorities—Al Capone et al.

Yes, the cream line may never vary, but neither does the milk price. No wonder the bolsheviks in Russia are laughing at our "advanced" civilization. The newspapers, of course, could do much to remedy the situation.

CLARK AND CLARK STREET.

Glencoe, Ill., July 19.—In your issue dated July 19 I am surprised to read an account of a move to rename Clark street because of its "unsavory reputation." I cannot see how the changing of the name would help the condition of the street in any way.

Instead of erasing the name, I think a monument should be erected on Clark street which would constantly remind us of the part played by Clark in the revolution. This should be done soon, as the suggestion that the name of Clark street should be abandoned would seem to prove that the brilliant episode of George Rogers Clark in saving Illinois for America is being fast forgotten.

ELMHURST AND SALT CREEK.

Elmhurst, Ill., July 21.—Your paper recently carried a news article in which you quoted parts of a letter addressed by J. Lyell Clark to the chairman of the Cook county clean streams committee on the subject of Salt creek pollution.

Mr. Clark, who is the mosquito engineer for the Des Plaines valley abatement district, charges that Elmhurst is dumping raw sewage into Salt creek and is thereby destroying fish and fresh water life in the stream by pollution.

Mr. Clark's letter gives a story in vivid detail, although based entirely on the reports of a golf course manager and a nearby resident, of how on June 26 following a heavy thunderstorm all the fish in Salt creek were suffocated, shot, or clubbed to death within the short period of twelve hours, all because, as he says, Elmhurst and Villa Park had been dumping raw sewage into the stream.

Before any further recommendations are made based on the fantastic stories of these two worthy gentlemen of the seven league boots and before any more slanderous articles regarding the city of Elmhurst are printed in the Chicago newspapers the writer hopes that Mr. J. Lyell Clark and any other interested parties will accept the invitation to a personally conducted tour through the five sewage treatment plants belonging to our city so that they may see for themselves that Elmhurst is not a party to the pollution of Salt creek.

The ease with which some people talk through their hats is positively amazing!

E. J. KENNEDY,
Superintendent Sewage Disposal Plants.

LABOR AND THE GANGS.

Chicago, July 22.—Is our government awaiting the murder of the last of our laborers' champions before stepping in to protect our legitimate unions from gangland?

With the eve of prohibition so near at hand the power hungry racketeers must seek a new source of revenue; muscling in on a legitimate labor union would eliminate the police opposition, which must have proved rather annoying during the bootleg era.

Labor organizations included in the American Federation of Labor are the dignity of the workingman. Formed to protect the interests of workers, who constitute the greatest portion of our nation, they have been in the hands of just, forceful, rugged men. Now these men are forced to curtail their usual varied activities in behalf of their "men," and they dare to venture out only under a heavy bodyguard. One of their number was recently redeemed from the hands of a gang by ransom. Police seem to have forgotten. Another was shot to death yesterday. Will this, too, be forgotten in a few days? We, the sons and daughters of labor, can only look at the struggle between these few brave men and the ruthless gangs, but we can't help wondering, "Why the police force?"
BERNICE SIMONS.

THE BEACH AT ARGYLE.

Chicago, July 19.—Why cannot an opening be made in the breakwater to allow a fresh flow into the stagnant water that has formed a large natural beach at Lawrence, Ainslie, and Argyle streets? Hundreds are in this water daily.

Why not make it clean and safe and preserve this much more of the lake, if not for all time, at least until the money is available for the completion of the outer drive. The proposed new Montrose beach is one and one-half miles from any transportation—too long a walk through the hot sand for the children.

As yet there has been no money for our life guards, none for our school teachers. Why continue this needless waste of the taxpayers' money?

INTERESTED.

EVERY MAN'S UNIVERSITY.

Chicago, July 21.—I hope you are receiving numerous requests to have a booklet containing the contributions to Every Man's University. I think they are very good.

THOUSANDS TURN TO GARDENING IN INDUSTRIAL AREA

Indiana Relief Plan Hailed as Success.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The industrial population of northern Indiana has turned from steel mills and lathes to the hoe and the fork, according to a survey completed yesterday. As a result thousands of families are finding outdoor work and assurance of food for fall and winter in an organized garden movement without equal in peace times.

A trip through the Calumet district where 20,000 such family gardens have sprung up in the last three months, or a visit to many other cities of Indiana discloses the extent of the "back to the soil" effort.

Soil Yields Up Food.

Swamp lands, weedy vacant plots and large areas of open country have yielded to the energies of men and women who wanted work and food and have found both. Through coöperation of local relief agencies, business men, the state university, the governor's relief commission, and the heads of "big business" there has been developed the "Indiana plan" of subsistance gardens. The survey disclosed that 43,900 gardens have resulted from this organized effort in 45 Indiana cities. There is no estimating the gardens in addition to these which families or communities have developed to meet the needs of the times.

"No work—no food" has been the position of organized relief work in Indiana. The state law which created a "trustee" to care for the poor or unemployed in each township provides ample legal basis for insisting upon this.

At first the Red element tried to block the gardening movement, but radical opposition was swept away by the enthusiasm of the unemployed for out of door work.

Meet Unexpected Response.

Early this year the "Indiana plan" took shape. Industries obtained tracts of land and implements for preparing the ground for seeding. Many executives and business men, even the relief workers, doubted the ability or willingness of people to provide their own gardens. Calls which they sent out asking for donations of seeds, fertilizers, tools, and transportation for workers met unexpected response, as did the number of families seeking a plot of ground.

At Indianapolis the state relief forces counseled with local welfare forces. Tractors were hauled across the state and were manned both day and night to turn the new ground. County agricultural agents aided in testing the soil and supervising local work, with truck farmers themselves interested in furthering the movement.

More than two million cabbage and tomato plants were grown in hotbeds at the state penal institutions and supplied free to local relief agencies for distribution. In the state farm at Greencastle were grown 570,000 cabbage and 389,000 tomato plants which now are flourishing in gardens in 24 counties. Here alone were enough plants to fill 200 acres of land.

Industries Aid in Work.

Some 32 industries of the state have spent money and loaned the services of valuable men to meet the demands for food. In some industries a large plot was sown in potatoes, tomatoes or green vegetables and men who needed the work obtained it on a cash or credit basis. The crops when harvested and canned return to the relief of distressed families or are sold to the company commissary.

Thousands of packets of seed were made up and distributed to families, who with this outlay of from 72 cents to $1.50 each are producing foods which would have cost taxpayers, through relief funds, between $20 and $45.

The transformation in the Calumet district of Lake county is perhaps most striking of all. According to H. E. Young, Purdue university horticulturist who has been developing the garden plan for a year, there is nothing to equal it in the nation. Mr. Young has been in touch with similar efforts in other states through the President's commission on unemployment relief.

Relief Head Pleased.

"I don't believe any of us realized how far reaching this garden movement would be," declared Col. Walter J. Riley, banker and chairman of the Lake county relief work. We sat in his office in the second story of a building near the steel mills.

"Just look at that," he said, raising the curtain of his window to disclose garden after garden in the vacant lots, behind billboards, and in rear yards of the smudgy little homes of the Calumet district. "I'm still mystified at how these people, untrained in gardening, grow such crops in this sandy soil."

There are many benefits being derived that outweigh, from a social standpoint, the actual cash value of the crops from these gardens. The people look healthy from their outdoor life. Many of them who were sickly from factory conditions and restricted diets are finding an appetite for "greens" and their children benefit as well.

Seller of Stolen Bonds Held as $142,000 Robber

James Morrison, 37 years old, who says he lives at 6236 Harper avenue, was held at the detective bureau last night for St. Paul, Minn., authorities as an alleged member of the bandit gang which two years ago shot two women and stole $142,000 in a robbery of a bank at Willmar, Minn. He was arrested Wednesday by Lieuts. Leo Carr and William Knowles of the "Secret Six," while attempting to sell some bonds.

Sioux Falls, S. SEVEN ARE HURT AS WESTCHESTER TRAIN HITS AUTO

Jury Frees Motorist in Another Crash.

Seven persons were injured last night when their automobile was struck by a Westchester train on the Metropolitan branch of the elevated lines in Oak Park. The accident occurred at the Ridgeland avenue crossing.

All those hurt were taken to the West Suburban hospital. The most seriously injured were T. J. Rynne, 43 years old, of 1001 South Harvey avenue, Oak Park, driver of the car, and Mrs. Rose Radice, 25, of 2816 Lexington street. The others injured were Rynne's two children, George, 13 years old, and Veronica, 7, and Mrs. Radice's husband, B. Radice, and their two children, Gerald, 4, and Margaret, 2.

Veronica Rynne was hurled 50 feet, and was picked up less than six inches from the third rail.

Coroner's Jury Frees Driver.

A coroner's jury disregarded the statements of eye-witnesses yesterday and released John H. Wood, 4900 Greenwood avenue, head of the Standard Varnish works, held as the driver of an automobile which struck and killed two motorcyclists. The jury acted after hearing evidence of the police accident prevention squad which investigated the crash. This was to the effect that Wood's car was moving at about 20 miles an hour.

The eyewitnesses said Wood's automobile was moving at 60 miles an hour when the two victims, Clark McNamara, 21 years old, 8224 South Hermitage avenue, and William J. Conway, 23 years old, 8223 South Hermitage avenue, were killed on July 9. The accident occurred at Damen avenue and 83d street.

Police Squad's Evidence.

The evidence of the police squad, presented by Policeman Clarence McAvoy, showed that Wood's automobile could not have been moving more than twenty miles an hour, since it was brought to a halt within sixteen yards beyond the spot where the collision occurred. The policeman also explained that neither the youths nor Wood could see each other, since weeds growing in vacant lots at the corner were more than six feet high. They have been cut since the accident.

Two deaths in Cook county yesterday raised the 1932 motor toll to 673. The victims:

Victoria Fisco, 4 years old, 2637 Vermont street, Blue Island. Killed when she was struck by the car of Henry Stricker, 1223 West 63d street, while crossing Vermont street at Maple avenue in the suburb.

Arthur Nelson, 54 years old, of Des Moines. Killed when the automobile in which he was a passenger collided with another car and then crashed into a light pole, which fell on one of the cars. The collision occurred at Roosevelt road and 17th avenue, Melrose Park. Nelson's son, Kenneth, a University of Chicago medical student, and two other men escaped injury.

Father-in-Law Dies While Visiting Judge Feinberg

Mr. Kaufman was a native of Hungary, but had lived in Chicago since boyhood. He is survived by a son, Emanual Kaufman, and three daughters, Mrs. Feinberg, Mrs. Tillie Newman, and Mrs. Fay Tow.

TRACE NEW CLEW TO WOMAN FOUND BURIED IN LIME

Leslie Long of Aurora will go to Woodstock tomorrow to examine articles of clothing and other personal belongings of an unidentified young woman whose body was found in a quicklime grave two miles west of Crystal lake last November. Long will view the articles to determine whether they are those of his missing sister, Mrs. Edith Rogers.

Mrs. Rogers disappeared a year ago. She is the wife of Charles E. Rogers, Chicago radio engineer, who is now serving a 1 to 20 year team in the Wisconsin state prison at Waupun for the shooting of Miss Laura Talley, a nurse of Racine, Wis. The shooting occurred in Long's cottage on Root river, near Racine, last March.

At the time of the shooting Long told police that his sister's continued absence mystified him. He said he believed that Rogers might have killed her. Rogers denied the accusation, asserting his wife had deserted him. Recently Long learned of the Crystal lake mystery. He has asked that the body of the grave victim be exhumed, and has also requested Waupun prison officials to question Rogers.

MARINE HEROES ARE DECORATED BY GOVERNMENT

Washington, D. C., July 30.—(AP)—A marine who lost his right hand in attempting to throw away a hissing hand grenade which had fallen into a group of his comrades was awarded the medal of honor today.

Another who fought Nicaraguan insurgents with a vim that upheld the best scrapping traditions of the corps was given the navy cross.

Corp. Donald L. Truesdale, a native of Lugoff, S. C., was with his troop in northern Nicaragua on April 24 when a rifle grenade fell from its carrier and ignited the detonator.

Truesdale was several feet away and could have leaped to safety, but instead he seized the bomb and attempted to toss it into the underbrush. It burst while in his hand. In addition to shattering the hand, it wounded him about the body, but he shielded his companions from injury.

Sergt. John Hamas, leading a patrol, displayed extraordinary courage and leadership, the navy reported, in two separate engagements with insurgents. His home is in Philadelphia.

Arrest of Restaurant Owner's Son Ordered

A capias was issued yesterday by Magistrate Harry H. Porter of Evanston for the arrest of James P. Harding, 32 years old, 1050 Pratt boulevard, on a charge of reckless driving. Harding is the son of John P. Harding, loop restaurant owner. Young Harding was arrested on July 19 at Dempster and Dodge avenues after his car struck that of Capt. Otto Dahl of Engine company No. 11 of the Chicago fire department. When he did not appear in court yesterday Magistrate Porter issued the capias.

LOOT JEWELRY STORE WINDOW.

Two burglars yesterday broke the window of the Jacques jewelry store, 1058 Wilson avenue, and fled with their hands full of jewelry. Police were unable to estimate the loss.

FINDS TRAFFIC OUT OF CONTROL ON WEST SIDE

Force Inadequate, Head of Park Police Says.

BY HAL FOUST.

Chief William Schramm of the west park police is concentrating his motorcycle policemen on Jackson, Warren and Washington boulevards in an effort to curb a sharply rising accident toll, but a tour of these west side pavements yesterday indicated that the traffic is still uncontrolled.

Investigation discloses that weak policing contributes to the physical disadvantages of the west side boulevards, with their rough and narrow pavements and their heavy cross traffic, making them more dangerous and slow than on traffic routes from the loop to the north or south.

Scramble to Pass Bus.

Leaving the loop yesterday afternoon, THE TRIBUNE roadster was in a scramble of cars that were trying to pass a Washington boulevard bus lumbering several feet from the curb between Canal and Halsted streets. At Western avenue, where traffic was stopped by a red light, a small roadster edged ahead in the lane next to the curb to the right of the bus and, by jumping with the amber light swung ahead to lead the parade. Its license, 508-142, was issued to J. Goldstein, 114 Forest avenue, River Forest.

At the 2800 block west, a sedan swung into the boulevard without coming to a stop. The license was 1-068-886. Secretary of State Stratton has not yet published license numbers above 1-000-000.

At the western edge of Garfield park, at a blind intersection on a curve, there was a tangle of cross traffic without a policeman. This is a few yards from the west park police headquarters in the ornate administration building.

Slow Car Blocks Traffic.

A little farther west in Washington boulevard a small sedan near the center of the pavement was traveling about twenty miles an hour, blocking traffic. It was being passed on its right by faster machines willing to take a chance on the illegal pass and on the bumps at cross streets. It was also being passed on its left by cars that cut around in the face of oncoming traffic. The sedan bore a Michigan license with a sign, "Hoover for Ex-President."

Eastbound, passing a string of slower machines by driving to the left side of the pavement, was a sedan with license 512-064, issued to Paul P. Clavel, 2004 South 4th avenue, Maywood, Ill.

The first motorcycle policeman noted was on the return trip to the loop in Jackson boulevard. He was in Columbus park.

At Cicero avenue a coupe with a Pennsylvania license made a prohibited left turn. In the 4400 block a car with license 572-790, issued to Sam Takiff, 1647 South Lawndale avenue, entered the boulevard without a stop. In Garfield park there was another tangle at intersections on curves.

Beats Changing Light.

Conditions were no better in proceeding east in Warren avenue. A sedan with license 217-493, issued to William A. Leuty, 8251 Rhodes avenue, sped ahead to beat a changing light, swinging ahead of boulevard traffic that was starting with the green. Just east of Western avenue an automobile with Michigan plates 636-874 made a left turn from the right side of the broad one way street. In the 2300 block an automobile with Illinois license 269-129, issued to George A. Wright, 2123 Warren avenue, entered the boulevard without a stop.

"I haven't enough men to do the job," said Chief Schramm. "The men are taking their vacations now so they'll be on duty to protect the school children this fall. I have 172 men on the pay roll to police forty-three miles of boulevards, sixteen small parks, and four large parks. The south parks have 379 men and forty-two miles of boulevards, while Lincoln park has 220 men with twenty-four miles of boulevard and only one large park."

MRS. J. J. KANN, FORMER WIFE OF FINANCIER, KILLS SELF IN HOTEL

New York, July 30.—[U. P.]—Mrs. Theresa Kann, divorced wife of Capt. James J. Kann, grandson of a founder of the New York Stock exchange and himself an internationally known financier, committed suicide by poison last night.

Her body was discovered when her personal maid came to her room in a hotel to awaken her this morning.

Known as an amateur painter, she married the financier in 1921. Kann had served in the Royal Flying corps in France during the war and was decorated by three governments. He was an officer of the Anglo-South American bank of London.

Relatives could give no reason for Mrs. Kann's act.

CHILDREN TO AID ICE FUND WITH MINSTREL SHOW

Families Send New Pleas for Help.

While most Chicago visitors are seeking the beaches and playgrounds and other points of interest, a group of juvenile guests of the Hotels Windermere who are members of the recently organized "Negro Minstrel company," is busily preparing for a presentation for the benefit of the city's poor. The proceeds of their show will go to THE TRIBUNE free ice fund.

A dozen children are being coached by Mildred Williamson, children's hostess, and Jo Deatherage. On Aug. 12 the production will make its debut in a dining room of the Windermere West.

Children Are Enthusiastic.

"The youngsters are so enthusiastic over raising money for the Chicago babies who need ice that they can't get enough practicing," Miss Deatherage reported yesterday. "You should see them cake walk, crack their jokes, jigs and sing their take-offs on southern songs."

Tickets to the children's minstrel show may be procured through the children's hostess.

More appeals for aid from the ice fund were received yesterday. Most of the letters contained the same information—that families were getting food from the unemployment relief and other agencies, but there was no ice available to keep the family milk supply from spoiling.

Seven and a half cents will provide sufficient ice for a family for a day. Think what that means to a mother who must sit by helpless, unable to give a fretting infant his bottle because the milk provided by charity has soured.

Children Send Money.

The contributions yesterday came from seven contributors. Among them was $2.50, the receipts of a children's carnival and bazaar. The participants, all 9 years old, were Marjorie Reis, Lois Dernburg, Jean Rose, Ruth Reis, Marjorie Baer, Joan Evans, Ruth Teller, Margaret Arens, Nancy Elliott, Betty Elliott, and Shirley Goldstein.

Another contributor sent stamps because "that is all I have that I can give to help some one else."

The gifts were as follows:

F. H. Haviland	$ 7.50
Children's carnival	2.50
Anonymous	2.00
A friend, Mrs. C. L. B., Alan H. May Jr., Mrs. Anderson	1.00
Total	$ 16.00
Previously acknowledged	1,452.50
Grand total	$1,468.50

Contributions may be sent to the cashier of THE TRIBUNE, Tribune Tower, for either the ice fund or the Camp Algonquin fund, which furnishes free vacations for tenement mothers and children.

W. PARKS DELAY COURT VIEW OF THEIR PAY ROLLS

'Padding' Case Postponed on Plea of Illness.

The pay roll records of the west park commissioners are still withheld from the scrutiny of the public, it was revealed yesterday at a hearing before Judge Charles A. Williams. The records will show a wholesale padding of the pay roll, according to Attorney Michael F. Ryan, who is fighting to get them into court.

On June 25 Judge Williams ordered the park commissioners to produce before him all pay roll records for temporary employés from Aug. 1, 1931, to April 15, 1932, but at subsequent hearings they have failed to do so. Yesterday the hearing was continued to Aug. 15 on the plea of William Costello, special attorney for the park board, that Charles J. MacGowan, superintendent of employment for the system, was ill and could not appear.

First Refusal, Attorney Says.

"If the park officials have complied with the law, and I presume they have," said Judge Williams, "they should have no hesitancy in allowing the records to be inspected by any one."

"This is the first time I have ever been refused the legal right to inspect and copy any public record," Attorney Ryan declared.

The demand to see the records has been made by Attorney Ryan in connection with the cases of his clients, Joseph C. Kotlengar and Bernard Burgeson, ousted park employés. Kotlengar was general foreman of boulevards for the park system and Burgeson was concrete construction foreman. They were civil service employés and petitioned for a mandamus to compel the commissioners to rehire them.

Charges Threats of Violence.

Both men have received anonymous threats of violence for their court action, according to their attorney. Burgeson was missing for two days and the Fillmore police started a search for him on Friday. It was found that he had left the city and would not return until he is needed in court.

According to Attorney Ryan, the west park board, of which W. R. James is president, has filled its pay roll with political employés. After Kotlengar was dismissed, the attorney charges, four Republican ward committeemen were placed on the park pay roll as district maintenance supervisors to carry on his work.

The four committeemen are James Vignola [26th], Paul Rothenberg [24th], William Garrison [27th], and William Lass [23d].

Bell of Evanston, who died suddenly at her home on Friday. Burial will be in St. Joseph's cemetery, Wilmette. Mrs. Zander was 73 years old. She had lived all her life in the house where she died. Surviving are her children, Edward, William J., and Joseph Bell, and Mrs. Katherine Wagner, and her husband, Arthur F. Zander.

"Funeral by Hursen"
Of Course

Hursen Chapels are today recognized as the finest institutions of the kind in this country. The North Side Chapel, particularly, is a masterpiece of beauty, massiveness, facilities and arrangements. It has recently been remodeled. The South Side and West Side Chapels are palaces, convenient for the smaller or the largest funerals.

All Hursen automobile equipment, the finest things on wheels, was built for Hursen along Hursen special designs. Yet the charge is no greater than for equipment far less desirable.

There is no charge for the use of any of the three Hursen Chapels, each equipped with organs of unmatchable tone and size. The charges for Hursen funerals are less than the charges usually made elsewhere. So, call Hursen, of course!

DEATH NOTICES

In Memoriam.

PEARCE—Ulricka Pearce. In sad and loving memory of our dear mother and grandmother, who passed away one year ago today, July 31, 1931.

It's lonesome here without you,
And sad and weary the way,
Life has not been the same to us
Since you were called away.
How often do we tread the path
That leads us to the grave,
Where rests the one we love so well,
And did our best to save.

LOVING DAUGHTERS AND GRANDDAUGHTERS.

HARSH WORDS FLY AS CHAPPLE WARS ON LA FOLLETTE

Tours State in Used Car Caravan.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., July 30.—[Special.]—When Calvin Coolidge was President of the United States a group of apprehensive Republican leaders went to the White House to seek his counsel on how to win certain impending state elections.

JOHN B. CHAPPLE

"Funny," said the President after listening in unflustered silence to the unfolding of difficulties, "what a lot of trouble you fellows have getting elected. [Slight pause.] I don't."

James W. Wadsworth Jr., then United States senator from New York and facing a hard contest for reelection, sought explicit advice, saying, "Just what would you do, Mr. President?"

"When you going home?"

"Very soon."

"Then," said Mr. Coolidge, taking a figure of speech from earlier days of transportation, "hitch up a buggy and drive around the state."

That, allowing for the change in methods of "driving around," is what young John B. Chapple of Wisconsin is doing in his campaign for the regular Republican nomination for the United States senatorship.

He has hitched up two automobiles, filled them with camp equipment and with booklets written by himself, and he is driving around the state.

Defining a Parasite.

Some days he makes as many as five speeches, each an hour or more long, in denunciation of what he declares to be the extravagance and the subversive propaganda of the La Follette régime. That régime he calls "the La Follette racket." Its leaders he describes as "parasites on the body politic." Once he was sharply questioned at a legislative committee hearing as to just what he meant by "parasite."

"Do you mean," asked one of the members of the examining body, which was largely composed of La Follette adherents, "that we are like a louse on a rat?"

"I am not so sure," Mr. Chapple replied, "about the rat part of it, but I think louse is just about right."

The reply is not remarkable for either subtlety or delicacy, but young Chapple's contention is that for nearly a generation the La Follette faction of Wisconsin Republicanism has had pretty nearly a monopoly of severe language in political campaigning and that the only effective way to combat what he describes as the vagaries and excesses of that faction is to fire back at it with just as emphatic language as it employs.

A Carnival of Denunciation.

Hence town and village squares in Wisconsin from the Illinois state line on the south to Lake Superior on the north resound with John Chapple's denunciation of La Follette leaders as being—

"These poison peddlers.

"These wreckers of America.

"These breeders of ruin.

"These disciples of destruction.

"These brokers of class hatred."

In commenting on the efficacy of Chapple's method of campaigning an old line Wisconsin Republican of the faction long known as "the Stalwarts" said:

"What's been the trouble in Wisconsin is that the regular Republicans for the last thirty years have turned the soft shoulder to the La Follette group. But this man Chapple fights back—gives 'em just as hot hell as they send."

Certain of Chapple's opponents do not, however, have to take lessons in vituperation from him.

Dr. Glenn Frank, president of the University of Wisconsin, resenting not so much Mr. Chapple's political ideals as his charge that the university countenances communistic and free love propaganda, delivers against Chapple and his supporters broadsides that contain phrases which for vehemence match any of Chapple's. Those whom he considers traducers of the university President Frank denounces as—

"Blatherskites and demagogues.

"The little band of character assassins.

"Wisconsin Romanoffs who would have the university ruthlessly repress every minority opinion that may arise in the student body or the faculty."

"Slick tricksters with personal and political axes to grind."

Academic Volleys.

Current utterances and activities of Stalwarts, among whom Chapple is conspicuous, President Frank describes as—

"The insincere, unprincipled and dishonest campaign of a little handful of ambitious men.

"The amusing attempt of certain hysterical mountebanks to picture me as a propagandist for communism."

Replying to Mr. Chapple's charge that free love propaganda is tolerated on the campus, President Frank says:

"The overwhelming majority of the students of the university are clean in mind and decent in morals. In any community of ten thousand there will be a handful of persons at once noisy and nasty.

"The issue of immoralism would never be raised but for the occasional outburst of sex letters in the student newspaper. In the nearly seven years I have been the executive head of the University of Wisconsin there have been two outbursts of bad taste and indefensible indiscretion in the letter column of the student newspaper."

And such indiscretion, the president acknowledges, "gives added war materials to blatherskites and demagogues who are seeking to attack the university for other reasons."

No Quarter Asked or Given.

Controversy in Wisconsin, it will be seen, has reached the stage of conflict, with no quarter asked or given.

In that conflict John B. Chapple, aged thirty-two, is at present the most conspicuous and picturesque figure—the most conspicuous because, being tireless, he is literally all over the place, and picturesque because in his campaign against United States Senator John J. Blaine for the Republican nomination for the senatorship in the September primaries he is employing methods peculiarly his own.

He is sleeping in tourist camps.

He is living on tinned food.

His caravan comprises two second hand cars which he keeps supplied with gasoline by selling at a quarter each copies of his 160 page paper bound book entitled "La Follette Socialism: How It Affects Your Job, Your Savings, Your Insurance Policy, Your Rights and Your Future." In less than a year the sale of this book in town squares, on village greens, and along the highways has reached twenty thousand copies.

On the days when he is touring Mr. Chapple rises at 6 o'clock. Preparing breakfast, breaking camp, loading the autos for the day's traveling, and shaping up new material for speeches occupy him until mid-morning. In the routine work he is assisted by three ardent followers—Robert Keena, Leslie Koons and Walter Wilcox—who have been associated with him on the Daily Press of Ashland, Wis., a newspaper which long has been owned by the Chapple family and of which the candidate is managing editor.

Five Speeches Daily.

At 10:30 o'clock speechmaking begins and from that hour on the schedule for the day's speeches is 12:30 o'clock, 2:30, 5:00, and 7:30, each of the scheduled hours bringing Mr. Chapple and his bundles of books to a different town. He estimates that he addresses about 2,500 persons daily. In a small town like Menasha (population about 7,000), on beautiful Lake Winnebago, where I first heard him, a gathering of 300 citizens in the public square was considered a good audience. It was a grilling hot day and before the speaker had finished the hour for supper had come. But still the people lingered and listened.

In closing his speech, Mr. Chapple said:

"I'm practically broke. I've spent about every cent I had on this campaign. I didn't have much to start with, but I'm glad I spent what I had. [Applause.] Now, if you believe I'm sincere in my effort to expose the undercover communistic tendencies of the La Follette racket, if you want to help me keep going, and if you want to help me buy some more gasoline and more cans of beans, then buy my book of 160 pages of exposures which the racket can't answer. I'm living in tourist camps on canned beans and selling my book to buy gasoline. That, friends, is the kind of 'entrenched privilege' I am, and it is 'entrenched privilege,' you know, which the La Follettes say they are fighting. They say, too, that they are fighting for the jobless. They are expressing great concern about the jobless. Why, what do they know about the jobless! They've had jobs ever since they left the bottle—political jobs."

A Good Hot Supper.

The candor and homeliness of the appeal had their effect. Perhaps a score of Menashans paid their quarters for "La Follette Socialism," and a half dozen more, touched evidently by the speaker's reference to the tinned beans, invited him and his aids to supper at the hotel.

An hour and a half later he was holding forth at Appleton, five miles north of Menasha.

In Appleton, a handsomely built city of about twenty thousand population, his audience numbered nearly twelve hundred and was most attentive. The scene was Pierce's park, and instead of speaking from a truck as at Menasha Mr. Chapple delivered his charges against the La Follette régime from the park bandstand, to which well-wishers had borne in his honor an American flag.

Specimen charges—here somewhat condensed—were:

"That the La Follette political racket imports outsiders, paying them as high as $28 a day at the very time when Wisconsin men are looking for work.

"That these picked jobholders, favorable to the political operation of business and to other socialistic fantasies, who come from Chicago, from New York, from Washington and elsewhere, are costing the taxpayers of the state thousands of dollars a year.

"Little Short of Scandal."

"That the racket succeeded in getting its hands on the state highway money and administered the grade crossing program in a way which regular Republican members of the senate, in a statement which was read into the record, referred to as 'little short of a state scandal.'

"That in a Milwaukee radio speech on Jan. 7 last Gov. La Follette went to the extreme of urging that Wisconsin citizens cancel their subscriptions to and their advertising in newspapers opposing his program.

"That at a hazardous time he unsettled the minds of Wisconsin people regarding the banking situation and was warned that the policy was dangerous and might prove disastrous.

"That as one committed to political banking he has been paving the way for the ultimate goal of political operation of banks.

"That the La Follette controlled 1931 legislature increased state taxes nearly thirty million dollars for this year and next over the preceding two years.

"That ruinous and destructive policies such as those advocated by La Follette have already cost Wisconsin heavily.

Business Decamps.

"That W. W. Coleman, president of Bucyrus-Erie, says bluntly that there is a serious economic disadvantage in having a plant in Wisconsin and that the only safe policy to pursue is to provide for all future expansion in other states.

"That the Allis Chalmers company in Milwaukee has acquired in recent months two new industrial units, the activities of which, according to President Otto Falk, would logically have been brought to Wisconsin but are being located in Indiana.

"That the constant increase of taxes in Wisconsin amounts to political extortion and that the citizens of Wisconsin are today as truly the victims of extortion as were the parents of the Lindbergh baby.

"That the political racket in Wisconsin has grown to such proportions, with over ten thousand individuals on the state pay roll, that even the leaders of the racket can no longer control it.

"That Prof. Alexander Meikeljohn of the University of Wisconsin, who along with the La Follettes, is a member of organizations opposed to the American system, says that the reason students pay little attention to the things taught by the home, by the school, and by the church, is because the things there taught are not worth listening to, and that he has further declared that many students realize the futility of praying to a God who may not exist.

"That Gov. La Follette, in a speech made at Shorewood a few evenings ago, said, 'I am for confiscation of property if necessary,' and that Senator Blaine frequently declares 'every single dollar above the necessities of life has a public use.'

"That Prof. Max Otto of the University of Wisconsin preaches atheism to the students, declaring 'there is no God and mankind would be better off if rid of the delusion that there is such a being.' And many of our boys are coming home from Madison and echoing Otto to the heartache of their parents."

Carrying the War Into 71 Counties.

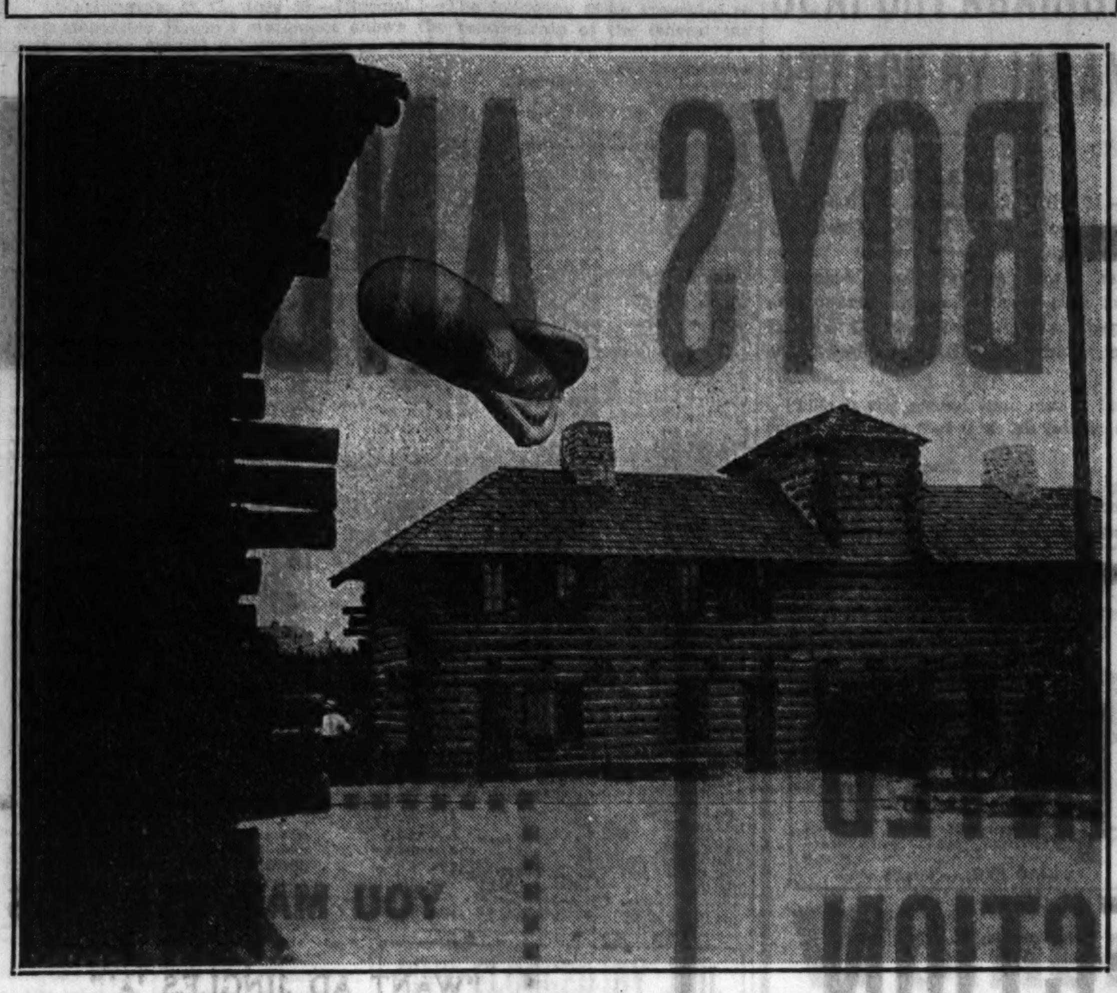
Such are specimen charges, all of them, though here condensed, being given with strict fidelity to Chapple's own words. On them he hammers by the hour. On them he has been hammering for nearly a year. Wisconsin has seventy-one counties and since January he has spoken in every one of them. From being the managing editor of a daily newspaper with a circulation of 3,500 he has become a figure of state-wide renown and the people seem to hear him gladly when, quoting Washington's words, he shouts to them from trucks, from bandstands and from mounds by the highway "Let us raise a standard to which the wise and honest can repair."

At its greatest length the state of Wisconsin extends 300 miles; at its greatest breadth it is 280 miles wide. Chapple says that as long as the gasoline and the beans hold out he intends to keep going until he has covered it from end to end and from side to side.

"Distracted politicians," he adds, "always do something stupid and the stupidest thing the income tax assessors of the La Follette faction are doing to me is the frequent summoning of me back to Ashland to 'give evidence and testimony under oath' in the matter of the audit and investigation of my state income tax returns.

"These summons disarrange my schedule of meetings and put me to the expense and inconvenience of a great deal of travel, but the contempt which that form of political persecution creates in the public mind results in larger audiences at the postponed meetings. So the old second hand car No. 2 will continue to keep an hour ahead of me with its announcement that I am to speak in such and such a town in an hour."

World's Fair Observation Balloon Flies Over Grounds



The new World's Fair observation balloon, which made its first flight yesterday, as it appeared over the replica of Fort Dearborn. The balloon is controlled by a 1,000 foot steel cable. It will make daily flights.

Flights Daily

The World's Fair observation balloon, with five passengers in its wicker basket, made its first ascent over the exposition grounds yesterday. The ride inaugurated a daily passenger service from noon until midnight with the blimp carrying four persons on each trip.

The balloon is of the same type as that used for observation in the French, British and American armies. It is 98 feet long and inflated with 37,000 cubic feet of gas. A steel cable, 1,000 feet long, is attached to the huge bag, which permits it to ascend and come back to earth through the operation of an electric winch.

A loom fashioned by a broadax in Ohio 100 years ago was placed on exhibition yesterday at the World's Fair Lincoln replica group. Pioneers brought the loom to Peru, Ind., many years after it was constructed.

Limitations of space permit only this partial showing of famous Chevrolet fleet owners. Could the entire list be shown it would read like a "Who's Who" of American business. If you are interested, a copy will be sent you.

Many of America's best known concerns have proved that Chevrolets cost less to run

AMERICA'S most successful firms have this one policy in common: very strict requirements about hauling equipment. And with few exceptions, these soundly managed organizations use six-cylinder Chevrolets. One look at their cost records and you would understand why. These records prove that six-cylinder Chevrolets cost less for gas, oil and maintenance than any other trucks—regardless of how few or how many cylinders they may have! And every experienced truck buyer knows that, all other things being equal, the most economical truck is the most sensible investment.

But Chevrolet makes many more appeals to your good judgment besides unexcelled economy. And most of them can be traced to the same source—the six-cylinder engine. Six-cylinder smoothness makes the rugged, vital parts last even longer. Six-cylinder power permits the use of bodies with a larger bulk capacity. Six-cylinder speed hauls bigger pay loads in shorter time. Six-cylinder handling ease, combined with comfortable cabs, reduces driver turnover. And back of this sturdy, economical truck is one of the world's largest service organizations, ready day and night, to provide fast, expert workmanship at flat-rate charges among the lowest in the industry!

These are facts, established by America's leading fleet owners. And now is the time when facts alone should guide you in buying hauling equipment. So—when buying one truck or a hundred, call in a Chevrolet dealer. In addition to furnishing further proofs of the advantages already listed, he will show you that Chevrolet prices are among the lowest at which trucks are sold.

U. S. SUBSIDIES PAID TO STATES CLIMB RAPIDLY

Total Third of a Billion Yearly Now.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 30.—[Special.]—With federal aid subsidies to the states now aggregating nearly a third of a billion dollars a year a steadily increasing number of states are obtaining more in handouts from Uncle Sam than they contribute to the support of the federal government.

Moreover, recent depression relief legislation has given the institution of federal aid a strangle hold on the treasury that it will be exceedingly difficult to loosen.

Congress had already advanced 80 millions to the states for highway construction to be repaid in five annual installments by deduction from the amount due each state from the regular annual federal road subsidy of 125 millions. Then at the last session congress advanced 120 millions to be repaid in ten annual installments beginning in 1938.

May Last Indefinitely.

It thus falls out that in order to obtain reimbursement of these advances aggregating 200 millions the federal government must go on subsidizing highway construction by the states. The taxpayers cannot get this particular subsidy off their backs before 1948, if ever.

In a recent statement Representative Robert L. Bacon [Rep., N. Y.] pointed out that as a result of increased federal aid and decreased internal revenue collections there are now 17 states which receive more in direct subsidies than they contribute to Washington in direct taxes. He cited the accompanying table, comparing federal aid to the states aggregating $219,162,574 in the fiscal year 1931 with the internal revenue from the states totaling $2,428,228,754, in which 14 states are shown to have failed to pay their way.

Three States Added.

Now, however, with federal aid for the fiscal year 1932 having risen to $307,557,088 and internal revenue collections having declined to $1,554,233,363, three more states—Alabama, Nebraska, and Vermont—have been added to the list of those receiving more than they give. The seventeen states now on this roll are:

Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Georgia, Idaho, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Wyoming.

Federal aid covers a vast range of activities the details of which are not generally known. Here in detail are the federal aid appropriations for the fiscal year 1932:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.
Payments to states, Hawaii and Alaska for agricultural experiment stations	$ 4,357,000
Coöperative agricultural extension work	8,672,936
Payments to states and territories from the national forests fund	1,600,000
Payments to school funds, Arizona and New Mexico, national forests fund	40,000
Forest fire coöperation	1,775,000
Coöperative distributions of forest planting stock	95,000
Coöperative construction of rural post roads	159,000,000
Federal aid highway system advances to states	59,071,933
Total	$234,611,869
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR.
Colleges for agriculture and mechanic arts	$ 2,550,000
Payments to states from receipts under mineral leasing act	1,500,000
5, 3, and 2 per cent funds to states [public lands]	12,000
Coos Bay wagon road grant fund	40,000
The Oregon and California land grant fund	575,000
Payment to Oklahoma from royalties oil and gas, south half of Red river	30,000
Total	$ 4,707,000
NAVY DEPARTMENT.
State marine schools, act March 4, 1911	$ 100,000
TREASURY DEPARTMENT.
To promote the education of the blind [American Printing House for the Blind]	$ 75,000
WAR DEPARTMENT.
National Guard appropriations	$ 34,905,628
State and territorial homes for disabled soldiers and sailors	600,000
Total	$ 35,505,628
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE. [Coöperative work with states.]
Forest roads and trails	$ 12,500,000
Coöperative farm forestry	74,000
Total	$ 12,574,000
TREASURY DEPARTMENT. [Public health service.]
Preventing the spread of epidemic diseases	$ 400,000
Interstate quarantine service	68,040
Studies of rural sanitation	2,338,000
Total	$ 2,806,040
Vocational education	$ 7,367,000
Payments under water power act	58,275
Grand total	$307,557,088

Congressman Bacon said that not one of the 17 states listed contributes a single dollar toward the salary of the President or the smallest function of the national government. They did not even contribute toward the salaries of senators and members of the house they sent to Washington to represent them.

In addition, he declared, there were 18 other states with a combined population of 35,000,000 which make net contributions in taxes totaling $146,000,000, or slightly less than 7 per cent of the total taxes paid.

Sixteen Pay 93 Per Cent.

"It follows, then, that the remaining states, 16 of them, or one-third of the Union, paid 93 per cent of the total net federal tax bill, or a sum over 2 billion dollars," Mr. Bacon said.

"We have the situation where two-thirds of the states, with 40 per cent of the population of this country, and represented in the senate by 64 senators, pay slightly less than 7 per cent of the total net tax payments into the treasury, and where one-third of the states with 60 per cent of the population and represented in the senate by but 32 senators, pay a little more than 93 per cent of the total net tax bill.

"What is back of this condition? Why are any sums paid into the state treasuries by the federal government? Why should any state receive back more than it pays? The answer is found in the existence of the policy known as 'federal direct aid payments.' Federal subsidies to the states. Only comparatively recently has this policy excited any particular study or concern. Kept within more or less reasonable and proper bounds for more than a century, this policy suddenly became stimulated and it has spread with astounding repidity.

Wonders What's Ahead.

"Will the influences of its further rapid growth on all manner of federal expenditures, unless severely checked, result in the nationalization in a practical way of many of the remaining important reserved powers of the states? Or, through operation of practical politics, will the result be the milking of the contributing states to pay the expenses of the noncontributing ones? This might be under the guise of nationalism or through a frank avowal that taxes shall work a redistribution of wealth. Can the federal treasury and the national credit stand this rapidly mounting cost of subsidies to the states?

"The sad part of the story is that the states have consented to their own ravishment. They have in large measure surrendered their sovereignty in consideration of gold appropriated out of the federal treasury and in their eagerness to obtain it they have increased taxes and debts until they are deluged with evils which they at one time thought were blessings.

Pay 15 Cents; Get Dollar.

"What are these direct aids to the states? The list covers a variety of subjects, running all the way from highway construction and building of forest trails to the endowment of agricultural colleges; from grants for vocation and rehabilitation work to fighting forest fires, and in the very recent past to such subjects as maternity and infancy care and social hygiene extension.

"To receive a federal subsidy dollar there is one southern state that pays in gross federal taxes only 37 cents for this dollar it receives; one in the southwest that pays only 15 cents, and another in the northwest that pays only 15 cents. As a contrast to these states paying no net taxes into the treasury there is a New England state that pays $22.08 for every federal subsidy dollar it receives, a central states that pays $23.08 for every federal subsidy dollar, and a Pacific state that pays $15.01 for every federal subsidy dollar."

BEACH REOPENED TO BATHERS AND SUIT IS DROPPED

The injunction suit which sought to restrain the south park commissioners, the Century of Progress, and the Congress Construction company from fencing off the 12th street beach was dismissed by State Representative James W. Harris when the commissioners agreed to open the beach to the public.

The suit was filed after it was discovered that the park commissioners had given a charter to the Century of Progress, which allowed a lease to the Congress Construction company. The company fenced off the beach and charged an admission price for bathers. The company agreed to open the beach to the public until the time of the fair.

FIVE FLOGGED BY JAIL WARDEN AT WHIPPING POST IN DELAWARE

Wilmington, Del., July 30.—(AP)—With a few spectators present, five men were whipped in the New Castle county workhouse today by Warden Elmer J. Leach. The men, one of whom was convicted of a charge of derailing a railroad train and the others of larceny charges, also must serve jail terms.

Allan Smith, Chester, Pa., Negro, who pleaded guilty to derailing a Baltimore and Ohio freight train near the Pennsylvania-Delaware state line in order to become a "hero," received 20 lashes. He will serve one year and also was fined $500 on a charge of malicious mischief.

Edward Wilson, of Wilmington, who pleaded guilty to stealing sample dresses from a salesman, received 10 lashes and will serve four months. George MacNeil, Philadelphia, Andrew Mays and Howard Simpson, both of Wilmington, all Negroes, were given 10 lashes each. MacNeil also was sentenced to four months on a charge of stealing a wrench from an automobile, Mays to six months and Simpson to eight months on charges of stealing chickens.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, July 30.—One thousand five hundred persons from 34 countries, speaking 24 different languages, have gathered here for a conference at which only Esperanto will be spoken. This will be the twenty-fourth world Esperanto conference. It is reported by Esperantists that during the last four or five years especially there has been an enormous development in the use of the "universal" language.

President Lebrun has given his patronage to the conference, which also has the active encouragement of Premier Herriot and the Paris chamber of commerce. In France Esperanto now is being taught in chamber of commerce classes, and at Lyons Premier Herriot has actively encouraged its teaching in the schools. In Germany there now are more than 1,000 teachers of Esperanto, and it is an optional language in many academies there and in England.

The first social meeting of this year's conference will be held tonight. Tomorrow there will be church services in Esperanto at the Notre Dame cathedral and the Protestant church of Ste. Marie.

CANADIAN LABOR MEETS TO FORM SOCIALIST PARTY

GALGARY, Alberta, July 30.—(AP)—The Canadian Labor party swung into a two day conference today with hopes of forming plans that eventually will lead to a dominion-wide Socialist party. Delegates from every western province and observers from the east joined in discussions that will be continued at a joint Farmer-Labor parley Monday and Tuesday.

T. B. Bailey, president of the Calgary branch of the Canadian Labor party, opened today's meeting and then retired as chairman in favor of C. Fines, Regina, president of political labor parties in western Canada.

J. S. Woodsworth, Labor member in the house of commons for Winnipeg, declared there is a widespread though unorganized movement throughout the dominion aiming at radical alterations in the economic system.

RUSSIA FORTIFIES SEAPORT AGAINST ATTACK BY JAPAN

BULLETIN.

HARBIN, Manchuria, July 31.—(Sunday.)—(AP)—The Rengo (Japanese) news agency today said Japanese headquarters here had announced conclusive proof that the famous Chinese general, Ma Chanshan, had been killed northeast of Hailun.

[This is the second time within the last six months that Gen. Ma has been reported dead.]

HARBIN, Manchuria, July 30.—(AP)—New accounts of large scale preparations by the soviet government to fortify Vladivostok harbor and prepare the people of the Siberian seaport against an expected attack by Japan are being brought here by travelers.

Residents of the city, according to these reports, are being made familiar with underground shelters that have been prepared against bombardment and are receiving instructions in the use of gas masks and in rifle fire.

Troops, transported in closed cars and disembarked at night, arrive daily, it is said. Observers told of seeing ten armored trains in Vladivostok railway yards, as well as fifty tanks, sixty airplanes, and many artillery units.

Russians Leave Harbin.

Meanwhile Russian business houses in Harbin are closing and soviet citizens are returning home, apparently in the belief that Japan intends to absorb Manchuria. More than 2,000 Russians have left Harbin during the last two months on orders from Moscow.

The most competent soviet engineers and technicians have been withdrawn from the Chinese eastern railways, jointly owned by Russia and China, and Moscow authorities have removed hundreds of locomotives and most of the road's best rolling stock.

These moves have led to the belief that Russia is getting ready to abandon the road, which is operated at a great loss. The 400 mile stretch from Harbin to Vladivostok already is out of operation.

The staff of the soviet bank here has been reduced more than 50 per cent and the soviet naptha syndicate is preparing to withdraw. Many foreign and native business men are leaving for southern China.

China Refuses to Pay Tokio.

SHANGHAI, July 30.—(AP)—China will withhold temporarily the installment of the boxer indemnity payments due Japan tomorrow and amounting to approximately $150,000, T. V. Soong, finance minister, announced today.

He pointed out that China heretofore has paid the monthly installments in spite of the seizure by Japan of the Manchurian revenues which were pledged to meet indemnity services on the loan. The seizures run to a large figure compared with the loan indemnity commitments, he said, to which the Manchurian customs heretofore have contributed largely.

The Japanese, he added, still retain part of the Manchurian revenue collected before the customs seizure.

Colorado Rainstorm Halts Auto and Railroad Traffic

Denver, Colo., July 30.—(AP)—Hundreds of homes were flooded, crops were damaged, and train and automobile traffic was halted by a terrific rainstorm that swept a wide area in Colorado last night.

Marriage License Business Falls Off in Iowa County

Davenport, Ia., July 30.—[Special.]—Scott county's marriage license business reached a new low during July, according to records of County Clerk Emil Schroeder. Only nine couples applied for licenses during the month.

POMERENE SEES TREND TOWARD TRADE RECOVERY

Cleveland, O., July 30.—(AP)—A trend toward economic recovery was seen today by Atlee Pomerene, the former Democratic United States senator chosen by President Hoover for the chairmanship of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

"The information I have received is that the situation is getting better," he said on his return from Washington, where he met with his R. F. C. associates for the first time.

"One of the signs is this: When France started withdrawing her 700 million dollars credits, foreign countries had credits here totaling 3 billions. Other nations followed France in withdrawing credits. They are now down to 600 millions.

RUPTURE

Don't submit to avoidable operations or the use of antiquated trusses, as they all set where the lump is and not where the opening is. The opening is seldom larger than a dime, no matter the size of the rupture, and in all cases can be retained with the end of a lead pencil. The Spermatic Shield-Complex (Patent No. 747,247, No. 1,237,709, and other patents pending) is a scientific achievement in a highly specialized art. It will not only retain any case of rupture perfectly, but contracts the opening in 10 days on the average case by stimulation. Infinitely superior to any instrument method of operation, and produces results in no other way obtainable. All cases are secure a lifetime as against any further trouble or expense. Large or difficult cases or incisional rupture (following operations) specifically solicited. This instrument received the only award in England and in Spain, producing results without surgery, harmful injection, medical treatment or prescriptions with distinguished personal patrons of all nations. Get booklet on "The Fallacy of Surgical Procedure."

105,000 CHEER OPENING OF OLYMPIC GAMES

LADYSMAN WINS ARLINGTON FUTURITY BY 4 LENGTHS

35,000 WATCH FAVORITE ROMP HOME IN FRONT

Technique 2d and Pomponius 3d.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Ladysman, from W. R. Coe's stable of New York, won the Futurity as the Arlington Park Jockey club's gala summer racing season came to a close yesterday afternoon.

With 35,000 spectators cheering while he made a spectacular dash down the stretch, the son of Pompey-Lady Belle flashed past the winning post 4 lengths in front of Technique, a filly owned by Mrs. Hal Price Headley of Kentucky. A length back in third place came Pomponius, another son of Pompey and a stable mate of Ladysman.

The crowd was the second largest in Arlington's history and a record for the season.

Runs Like a Champion.

When Ladysman started his drive from behind and came hop skip jumping toward the front most of the spectators in the great Arlington crowd realized they were looking at a new champion.

The big chestnut was eating up ground. He was going about his task in long even strides, one ear was up and the other was down. He was in a running mood, and as he charged down to capture the race, which had a gross value of $54,010, he established himself as the best 2 year old in America.

The time was 1:11 1-5, not so fast on the speedy Arlington course, not as fast as Hilena ran when she won the Lassie stakes two weeks ago, but fast enough, for Ladysman seemed to be winning on his class as much as he did on his speed. He was looking them in the eye and telling them to drop on back for here comes the champion.

Pays $5.34 to Win.

A great colt like Ladysman had to be press agented. The folks in the big crowd knew that he was going to run a marvelous race. They backed him with great confidence. Once in the betting he was at 4 to 5. Another time he was at even money. He wound up by paying $5.34 to win; $2.94 to place; and, because his stable mate Pomponius finished third and the entry got two-thirds of all the money in the show pool, he paid $3.36 to show. Technique, noted for her drive down the stretch, paid $4.82 to place and $4.22 to show. Pomponius, in the entry of course, was at $3.36 to show.

When Starter Roy Dickerson gave them the word Technique bounded to the front and in a few strides she was 2 lengths in the lead. But Ladysman, which had left the barrier with the rear guard, had pulled up near the flying Kentucky filly and was running second. His room mate, Pomponius, was going along nicely in third place.

They ran in this order all the way down the back stretch and it was a terrific pace Technique was cutting out, for she had stepped the first quarter in :22 3-5, was at the half in :46, which is just a little off flying, and she rounded out the five furlongs in :58 2-5.

Could she keep up such a dazzling pace and dash on to victory? The crowd which had backed Ladysman began to wonder.

Ladysman Starts Going.

Their worry was of short duration. For Ladysman was now beginning to run. It was hardly a case of Technique quitting. It was an inspired Ladysman running like an Equipoise, a Phar Lap or a Man o' War.

His big strides soon drew him up alongside of Technique. In a fraction of a second he was drawing on past the game fast running Kentucky filly. Jockey Bobby Jones was riding him hard by this time and had applied the whip to make him stage the winning rally.

Once in front Ladysman never faltered. He galloped away from his

"Great Success," Hertz Says of Arlington Meet

"Arlington Park has closed a meeting remarkably successful in many ways," John Hertz, chairman of the executive committee of the Arlington Park Jockey club, remarked yesterday afternoon.

"I am happy because the closing day crowd was the second largest in the history of the track and we are very grateful to the public for the generous support. We have adhered strictly to the policy of not flooding the community with passes, on the theory that there are no privileged classes. Instead, we lowered the admission to $1.

"The splendid attendance throughout the meeting proved to the directors that their policy in the conduct of the racing was the correct one," Mr. Hertz concluded.

The Arlington Park Jockey club offered the richest stakes and purses in America this year.

The meeting may show a very small loss or possibly a slender profit, depending on the final checkup of the closing day's business, it was learned from official sources last night.

$54,000—GIVE LADYSMAN THE WINNER'S SHARE

Ladysman bounds up to the finish pole and in another jump nods to the judges to bring out the winner's share of the $54,000 Futurity, closing day feature of the Arlington Park racing season. Technique is coming in second, four lengths behind the leader, with Pomponius, stablemate of the fleet Ladysman, in third place. A crowd of 35,000, the largest of the Arlington season, saw the race, the west's richest stake for two year olds. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Paavo Learns It's Piker Who Gets Caught

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., July 30.—Paavo Nurmi has been convicted of making some money out of his principal business in life, a charge which most citizens of most countries would like to plead guilty of, preferably in the first degree.

Nurmi was convicted of making money only in the third degree, which was a double humiliation, not only impugning his amateurism but belittling his business acumen. They charged him with realizing a small profit on his athletic expense account on a trip to Germany and barred him from the Olympic games for that. The profit necessarily must have been trivial, because continental Europeans do not believe in spoiling athletes by shipping them first class. The Europeans have a humane motive as well as a motive of economy in restricting their athletic hands to steerage accommodations and allowances.

It's O. K. for Officials.

Officials who conduct continental European teams to this country as the guests of American organizations have been known to complain that the travel accommodations and maintenance are much too good for the good of the athletes. It is bad for the boys to travel first class and live in first class hotels in the United States because they are working class boys and are not accustomed to such luxury. For the officials themselves nothing is too good, because, being officials, they are used to good living.

But the boys, returning to their normal way of life at home, are likely to feel the contrast. This was somewhat the philosophy of the late Uncle Charlie Ebbets, the owner of the Brooklyn Robins, who conducted an altruistic campaign to depress the wages of the ball players on the ground that the monetary interest tended to distract their minds from the game. When their interest in the game abated they lost their efficiency and it was necessary to send them back to the minors. This made them very unhappy, and Uncle Charlie, above everything else, wished to spread happiness in the lives of his employes.

All for Their Own Good.

It was true that Mr. Ebbets would have saved for himself all the wages that he did not have to pay to his ball players under his humanitarian plan. It was also true that when an athlete who had cost a lot of money in the market became a flop, due to the impairment of his efficiency by thoughts of sordid gain, Uncle Charlie lost the difference between the buying price and the selling price.

But Mr. Ebbets felt that his strength was the strength of ten because his motives were pure and he always turned a deaf ear to any insinuation of this kind.

Contrary to an old humorous superstition, it is not easy to show a profit on an expense account even with a private employer even in the United States. I have known only a few conspicuous successes in a rather extensive acquaintance with expense account travelers. One was a war correspondent in Mexico whose misfortunes in the poker game could be spotted in his expense account by successive items reading, "to one horse, shot from under me, $150." This correspondent had an uncommonly bad run of luck and had had an entire herd shot from under him before the auditing department back home prevailed upon the managing editor to transfer him from the cavalry column to the infantry.

Penalized for Poker Item.

There was another genius who went to the arctic circle on a story. There was a poker game there, too, and the correspondent, upon his return, had in his expense statement an item of $50 for a sled dog which had died on the trail. However, there was another item of $50 which did not seem to be accounted for and the expense account bounced back from the auditor with a request for an explanation. This was willingly given. This $50 was spent for flowers for the dog's bereaved mate.

Another war correspondent who accompanied the First division to France sent back at the end of the first month an account which included items of $100 for his paper's share of a luncheon for Marshal Joffre, $100 for another luncheon for Gen. Pershing and $50 for a luncheon to Gen. Bullard, who was only a brigadier at the time and therefore had a smaller appetite. These items were unchallenged until the auditor came to one which read, "To one pair binoculars for observation amid shot and shell, $10."

"Ten dollars for a pair of binoculars convinces me that the entire statement is phoney," said the auditor. "You cannot get a pair of binoculars for $10. The cheapest pair costs at least $35."

How About 1924?

But the ordinary expense account really permits no margin of profit, considering the price of mineral water, the tips for room service and the cost of sitting up in places at night in a strange city. If Nurmi was able to show a profit on an athlete's expense account, that would not be graft. It would be a miracle.

If the Olympic officials had really wished to be fair to Nurmi, they would have taken testimony from the treasurers and payoff men of some of the athletic clubs for which Paavo ran races, drawing gate receipts of majestic dimensions, when he was touring the U. S. A. in the winter of 1924. Then, since he must be barred, he would not be branded as a piker.

BEST ATHLETES OF 39 NATIONS ARE ON PARADE

Curtis Officiates at First Day Ritual.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., July 30.—Vice President Charles Curtis opened the tenth modern Olympic games under the strenuous beams of a blazing California sun in Los Angeles Olympic stadium this afternoon before a crowd of 105,000. Actual competition among athletes of thirty-nine nations for a crop of championships and new world records will begin tomorrow and continue for fifteen days.

Nineteen hundred men and women threw the fervor of patriotism into stands crowded with the representatives of every nation except soviet Russia as they circled the 440 yard oval of the stadium behind national standards in the glittering parade of nations.

Lieut. Calnan Takes Oath.

Following the parade the Vice President formally dedicated the athletes and the arena to the occasion of their gathering by repeating the seventeen words prescribed for the opening of every Olympic:

"I proclaim open the Olympic games of Los Angeles, celebrating the Olympiad of the Modern Era."

Lieut. George Calnan, United States navy, was called forward to take the Olympic oath, in form exactly as laid down at the first modern revival of the international games in Athens in 1896:

"We swear that we will take part in the Olympic games in loyal competition, respecting the regulations which govern them and desirous of participating in them in the true spirit of sportsmanship for the honor of our country and for the glory of sport."

Other Athletes Join In.

As the ex-Annapolis fencer, veteran of four Olympic games, pronounced the oath in loud voice, all athletes of the thirty-nine countries, grouped behind their standards, and facing the Vice President and rows of frock coated Olympic dignitaries in stands on the south end of the field, raised their hands and swore the oath silently with Calnan.

The booming of ten saluting guns preceded the oath taking, as the Olympic fire was lighted to burn throughout the games in a brazen chalice, fifteen feet in height, at the peak of the peristyle at the east end of the stadium.

2,000 Pigeons Released.

When the Olympic torch had been lighted to symbolize the burying of national feud for the duration of the games, a catch was released on a bunting covered stand in the middle of the oval, releasing a cloud of 2,000 pigeons to carry out the further ceremony of winging to the far corners with tidings of the reign of athletic amity.

A band of 250 pieces and massed chorus of 2,000 voices sang the "Star Spangled Banner" as prelude to the day's ceremonies and the band provided martial airs for the nations to parade and retire. Six hundred women sang the Olympic hymn, another accepted item of the quadrennial ritual, and after an address of welcome by William May Garland of Los Angeles, who was most instrumental in securing the first Olympic games for American soil since the St. Louis events of 1904, Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California, gave a brief dedication address and benediction.

First Track Events Today.

The program of competition opens tomorrow with trial races in the 100 meter sprint and 400 meter hurdles, the ten thousand meter event and finals in the high jump and shot put. Only one item of competition was held today, a preliminary in the weight lifting.

Greece, sixteen strong, led the parade behind the blue and white standard. The modern counterparts of the ancient Hellenes were bareheaded, and wore white flannels, white duck shoes and dark blue coats.

Argentina followed, with forty ath-

Dodgers Whip Cubs, 7 to 2; Wilson Drives in Four Runs

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 30.—Pat Malone came to this unique city all set to get even with his old time nocturnal pal, Hack Wilson. Remember on June 9 Hack beat Pat with a home run with the bases full.

PAT MALONE.

You may judge how complete was Pat's vengeance when you know that this afternoon Hack's contribution to a 7 to 2 Dodger victory over the Cubs was a double in the fourth inning with the bases full to score the Dodgers' first and second runs and put the third on third base. And he came back in the next inning with the bases full and singled to drive in Dodger runs No. 4 and No. 5. Another hoss on Malone.

10th Beating for Pat.

Hack's second vital swat chased Malone, in possession of his tenth defeat of the year, to be succeeded by Burleigh Grimes, the stomach ache man, who was pretty good the two innings he pitched; Jakie May, who wasn't so hot, and Leroy Herrmann, just up from Los Angeles, who terminated the brutal Dodger offensive by striking out Rosenfeld in the eighth.

While it was pleasant for Wilson to be so boisterous, his conduct scarcely was necessary to defeat the Cubs, for Hollis Thurston had them thoroughly crushed from the outset. Thurston, incidentally, was the first Dodger pitcher in 21 contests to pitch a complete game.

Can't Win When Pirates Lose.

Another thing that was against the Cubs was the scoreboard, showing the success of the Phillies over the Pirates. For weeks now the Cubs have had a rule against winning on the same day the Pirates lose. But even so, the Cubs gained a half game on the Pirates and now trail by 5½ games.

For the first three innings it appeared that the contest was going to be one of those things the experts call a mound duel. In those three innings the Cubs didn't get the ball out of the infield, though Cuyler got on through an infield scratch, only to be sunk trying to steal. In the same span only nine men faced Malone, each of the three innings starting with a strikeout.

Here Comes Trouble.

In the fourth Rosenfeld opened with a double off the left field wall, the first hit off Malone. Stripp bunted and was safe when Cub players stood around in the hope the ball would roll foul. O'Doul walked, filling the bases, and with none out, mind you, up came Mr. Wilson. The count ran to two balls and two strikes. Malone thought he had fanned Hack on his fifth pitch, but Umpire Moran didn't agree. It makes no difference, for the pudgy one was privileged to take another swing, and when he took it he hit a high class double off the right field wall, Rosenfeld and Stripp scoring and O'Doul pulling up at third.

Thurston Starts It.

Cuccinello followed with a long fly to Cuyler, O'Doul scoring and Wilson holding second. Wright was called out on strikes and Slade fouled to Grimm. You might think Hack had unleashed enough orneriness against his old pal, but the very next inning found him up there with the bases full, this time with two out.

With one down Thurston singled to

VAN RYN, ALLISON WIN DAVIS CUP DOUBLES MATCH

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, July 30.—John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, American doubles tennis team, vanquished their French rivals, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, in a strenuous five set match today at Roland Garros stadium to give the United States a fighting chance for the Davis cup.

Ten thousand, including Walter Edge, American ambassador, and Dwight Davis, donor of the trophy, saw the young Americans rally in the face of almost certain defeat to turn back the French veterans, 6-3, 11-13, 7-5, 4-6, 6-4.

Allison Maintains Pace.

What provided a rosy light on the horizon was the continued brilliant play of Allison, who maintained the flashy pace he set against Cochet yesterday. It is generally thought that he has an excellent chance of beating Jean Borotra tomorrow and if he succeeds, he will return to America with more individual glory than any one since Tilden has acquired.

The score seesawed back and forth, both teams tending to separate, which caused the game frequently to become a series of individual duels. It was a nip and tuck race, but the Americans won through their ability to pull themselves together after a few bad games and above all through the individual brilliance of Allison.

Cochet was easily the weakest player on the court, exhibiting his usual mastery of shots, but showing flaws as a doubles player.

After winning the first set easily, Allison and Van Ryn seemed to have the match in the bag, but in the second set got too confident after running the French to 4-2. Cochet and Brugnon pulled up at 4-all and then ran out the set at 11-13.

Davis Has His Troubles.

In the fourth set the French led, 3-love. The Americans evened the score, 4-4, but the French then ran out the set on the strength of Allison's suddenly erratic serving. The loss of the set was attributable to Allison losing three of his services.

The fifth and deciding set, which was marked by fast play on both sides, was won when the Americans broke through Cochet to pull ahead

Gaston Pitches, Bats Sox to 8-5 Win Over Senators

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Milton Gaston, the White Sox's tall right hander, is one of those fellows who believes that if you keep trying you'll get what you're after. He'd been looking around for a victory since June 21, but his series of rebuffs came to a conclusion yesterday when he combined the skill of his bat and his right arm to lead his companions to an 8 to 5 victory in the opener of the series with Washington's Senators. It was Milt's fourth triumph of the season and the second in a row for the harassed south siders.

MILTON GASTON.

In compiling his winning performance Gaston enjoyed some unexpected help from a few of his co-workers. All of them did just about everything possible on defense, but the fun of taking fatal shots at a trio of hostile pitchers was enjoyed only by a select few. Gaston himself had a hand in this by singling twice and accounting directly or indirectly for the Chicagoans' first four runs. Then there was Carey Selph, who nudged home a couple of mates on a double and a triple. And Lu Blue, with three safe taps, made himself a prominent in the three run splurges staged in the fourth against Lloyd Brown and Dick Coffman and in the eighth at Fred Marberry's expense.

Two Out, Then Trouble.

Gaston retired the first two men in the opening inning and then the customary firing began. Manush singled to left and Cronin walked. Kuhel poked a single over second and Manush ran home. Another Senator nicked the plate in the second. Kingdon singled to left. On a hit and run play Appling cleared out of his usual position at short and Berg shoved a single through the opening, Kingdon taking third. He registered while a double play was being perpetrated on Brown's roller to Hayes. Then Gaston settled down to business and nothing was accomplished against him until the eighth.

The Sox suddenly became a bit frisky in the third and a run resulted. Gaston took a hand in this pleasing incident by leading off with his first single to center, but he was forced by Funk, after which Hayes hoisted a fly to West. Then Selph appropriated a little glory for himself. He lined a two bagger into the left field corner and by the time Manush ceased playing three cushion billiards with the ball, Funk was across the plate.

The bit of action that put the Sox in the lead by 4 to 2 in the fourth started with Appling's single to center. Kress flied to West, whereupon Blue shot a single over short. Brown got himself out of the ball game by filling the bags on a pass to Grube. Coffman stepped into the vacancy and Gaston immediately supplied his second single to center, Appling and Blue scoring and Grube pulling up at third. Funk's grounder to Kuhel was fumbled momentarily and this gave Grube time to score.

Walk Proves Expensive.

After Gaston's single in the fourth the Sox didn't get another man on base until two were out in the seventh and they made this good for a run. Marberry, who started his labors in this inning, set down Gaston and Funk, and then walked Hayes, who stole second. Selph responded for the second time. He whacked a drive to Philadelphia, Pa., July 30.—(AP)—The Phils checked the mad rush of the Pittsburgh Pirates for the pennant by defeating them in a double header today before 18,000 fans. The score in the first game was 7 to 4, and 13 to 3 in the second.

Roy Hansen held Pittsburgh to four hits for the first eight innings of the nightcap, the only run in that time being a homer by Gus Dugas. Then he eased up and permitted a pair of runs in the ninth.

center and stopped at second on Rosenfeld's single to right. Stripp walked, filling the bases, but O'Doul popped to Hemsley in front of the plate. Wilson again took two strikes before he got the focus. Then he slammed a line single to center, scoring Thurston and putting Stripp on third. Cuccinello supplied the third out with a fly to Stephenson.

The Cubs got a run in the eighth on Hemsley's single, two passes, and a long fly and another in the ninth on a single by Stephenson, a double by Moore, and a fly by Grimm.

In the eighth a base on balls, Wright's double, an intentional pass to Lopez, and Thurston's second single gave the Dodgers their last two runs. Herrmann came in and relieved May to get the side out. He fanned Rosenfeld.

YANKEES DEFEAT TIGERS, 5-4, IN PITCHERS' BATTLE

Pipgras Gets Verdict Over Hogsett.

Detroit, Mich., July 30.—(AP)—The Tigers and the Yankees had a one inning slugfest today, then settled down to a pitching duel between George Pipgras and Elon Hogsett with the Yanks winning, 5 to 4.

Each team scored three runs in the first inning, but from then on Hogsett yielded only six hits and Pipgras seven. A run in the seventh inning brought the Yanks their ninth victory in 11 games against the Tigers this season.

Gaston Holds Senators; Sox Triumph, 8-5

right center for three bases to send Hayes home. Selph received no assistance from Fothergill.

Manush singled through second to start the eighth and the Senators immediately got busy on the job of melting down Gaston's lead by two runs. Cronin was punctured by a pitched ball. Kuhel slapped a long single to right center, scoring Manush and sending Cronin to third. The latter scored while Kuhel was being forced at second on West's roller. Kingdon also bounced into a force out and then retired to let Bluege run for him. Grube cut down Bluege in an attempted steal of second.

Mr. Blue Comes Through.

Appling coaxed a pass from Marberry to open the home eighth, and this, with the help of two doubles and a single, grew into three runs. Kress sacrificed and Blue crashed through third with a two bagger to score Appling. With Blue tearing for third, thus causing some confusion for Bluege, Grube rammed a hard grounder at the hostile third sacker and it shot past him for a double, Blue counting. Gaston was pagged out easily but Funk dropped a single into left and Grube sprinted home with the third run of the inning.

After the above rally it was all over for the day except a homer dumped into the second floor of the left field stand by Dave Harris, who swung for Berg to start the ninth.

Here's the Outside Dope on Cubs: Two of 'Em Tattooed

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 30.—Since joining up with the Cubs we have been reminded by fans of some of our old researches into the personal affairs of the Cubs and besought to bring same up to date.

For instance, fanciers of refined tattooing have asked us to find out something about the designs on the skins of the current Cubs. Some of the more enthusiastic even have gone so far as to beseech us to draw reproductions of this art work, so that fans can be tattooed with the same designs, in compliment to their heroes.

Only Two Tattooed.

We regret to inform these splendid enthusiasts that there are only two Cubs in the present outfit who have any tattooing whatsoever. The designs on these two lads are very prosaic. Pat Malone has an American flag and Rolly Hemsley has a lady who does the hootchie coochee when he flexes his muscles. The flag is refined, of course, but we don't believe any fancier would care to bring an ordinary pictorial hootch dancer into his life at this late date.

It is not probable that there will be any further designs on the Cubs this year on account of the lack of example, Manager Rogers Hornsby offering no incentive along that line as did Joe McCarthy, a great exponent of tattooing. Joe's main picture, you will recall, is supposed to be a portrait of Pocahontas, the well known Indian lady. The fact that it looks more like Chief Rain-in-the-Face than Pocahontas never caused the work to lose any of its charm for Mr. McCarthy.

Now, About the Roomies—

We can report more success in responding to the requests for the roomie combinations on the Cubs. This year the boys are paired off and named like the teams in a six day bike race. Here's the list:

Cuyler and May, the woods and waters team.

Grimm and Herman, the German team.

Hartnett and Moore, the shout and whisper team.

English and Root, the Buckeye team.

Taylor and Hemsley, the mask and mitt team.

Bush and Tinning, the cotton and corn team.

Warneke and Malone, the strikeout team.

Jurges and Gudat, the Flatbush Alamo team.

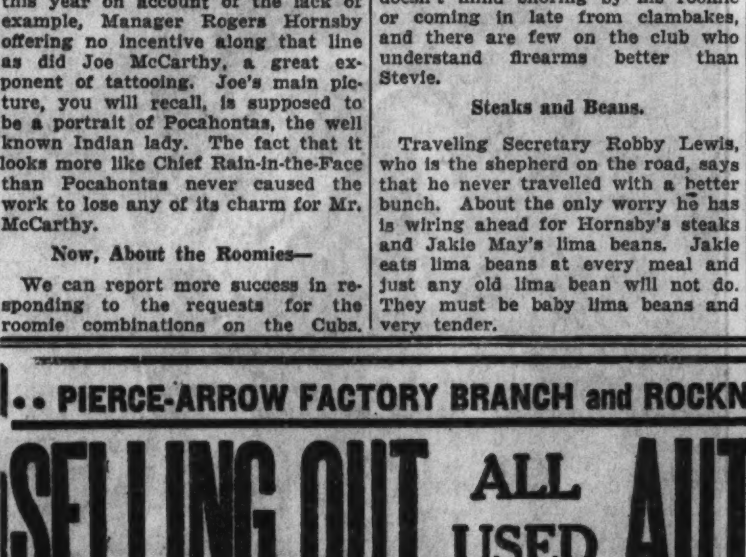
Hack and Demaree, the kid team.

Stephenson and Grimes, the vet team.

All of these teams are rather permanent with the exception of the last named. Stevie is a sort of spare who can get along with anybody. Stevie might not approve of an associate sleeping in his socks and hanging his pants on the chandelier, but he wouldn't quarrel about it. Mr. Stephenson also is a good sleeper and doesn't mind snoring by his roomie or coming in late from clambakes, and there are few on the club who understand firearms better than Stevie.

Steaks and Beans.

Traveling Secretary Robby Lewis, who is the shepherd on the road, says that he never travelled with a better bunch. About the only worry he has is wiring ahead for Hornsby's steaks and Jakie May's lima beans. Jakie eats lima beans at every meal and just any old lima bean will not do. They must be baby lima beans and very tender.



FLORALS MEET FIREMEN TODAY IN TWO GAMES

Mills to Oppose All-Stars in Semi-Pro League.

The Standings

	W.	L.	Pct.		W.	L.	Pct.
Mills	11	4	.733	Sheboygan	8	8	.500
Milwaukee	10	6	.625	L. Squares	7	9	.438
Madison	12	8	.600	Col. All-St'rs	3	11	.214
Florals	10	8	.556	Chgo. Giants	0	8	.000
Firemen	8	7	.533

The Duffy Florals will meet the Chicago Firemen in a Wisconsin-Illinois semi-pro league double header at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets, this afternoon. Victory for the Florals in the twin bill will give them a tie for third place, as the Madison Blues, occupants of that position with twelve victories and eight defeats, will be idle today.

Joe Maley and Johnny Brice will pitch for the Florals, who are in fourth place, with ten wins and eight losses. The Firemen in their last league engagement dropped a double header to the league leading Chicago Mills.

Mills Meet All-Stars.

The Mills, in first place by a game and a half, will defend their lead against the colored All-Stars in another double header at Mills Stadium, Kilpatrick avenue and Lake street. In a previous pair of games the Mills swept to two victories.

The same pitchers who opposed the All-Stars in the last twin bill will be on the mound today. Lefty Sullivan, the league's only spitball pitcher and who is enjoying another successful season in the semi-pro ranks, will pitch the first game for the Mills. He has lost only one game in more than a year. Forrest Paddock will seek his fifth consecutive victory of the season in the nightcap.

Squares Face House of David.

The Logan Squares, in second division, with seven triumphs and nine defeats, will engage in a nonleague affair, meeting the House of David at Logan Square park, Kedzie and Elston avenues, in a double header. Jim Vaughan probably will pitch the first game for the Squares.

The Chicago Giants, who have yet to taste victory in the league, will attempt to push aside the Sheboygan Chairs and break into the win column at Sheboygan, Wis., in the only other contest on the league schedule.

29 DAY MEET AT HAWTHORNE TO OPEN TOMORROW

Handicap Saturday First Big Event.

Hawthorne Facts

29 day meeting, Aug. 1-Sept. 2.

Eight races daily. Post time, 2:15. All races timed electrically.

Stake dates:

Hawthorne Handicap, $25,000 added, Aug. 6.

Illinois Owners' Handicap, $10,000 added, Aug 13.

Hawthorne Juvenile Handicap, $10,000 added, Aug 20.

Hawthorne Gold Cup, $25,000 added, Aug. 27.

Racing officials:

Stewards—Joseph A. Murphy, Martin Nathanson, Herman Conklin.

Starter—Harry Morrissey.

Racing secretary — Joseph McLennan; assistant, Charles McLennan.

Clerk of scales—Frank Otis.

Paddock judge—Max Murphy.

Patrol judges—Emmet Hileman, Sidney Brown.

Transportation—I. C. railroad special trains; special elevated trains, surface lines and buses; 30 minutes from loop.

Hawthorne, the oldest race track in Illinois, and "home" to many race followers, is ready for the opening of the 29 day meeting tomorrow.

This is the first time since racing was legalized in Illinois that the west side track has run off its meeting in one stretch. It will lose nothing in the way of stakes or rich fixtures by this new schedule, for it has combined all of the features into this one meeting.

Three Bargain Days.

Opening day at the old Stickney course will introduce the first bargain day of the meeting. Three times weekly Hawthorne will stage these "dollar days," every Monday, Tuesday and Friday.

This meeting will mark the return of Starter Harry Morrissey to Chicago racing. The veteran handler of the Bahr gate is ranked as one of the best starters in the country and has always been popular locally. He will have the same old official crew with him.

Another figure, or rather, voice, that has grown on Chicagoans until it is almost a part of the racing itself will return to Chicago with this meeting. This is Pat Horgan, the soft spoken announcer whose calling of the races has long been a feature at Chicago tracks.

Illinois Horses.

The four big stakes of the Hawthorne meeting and their dates are as follows: Saturday, Aug. 6, the Hawthorne handicap, $25,000 added; Saturday, Aug. 13, the Illinois Owners' handicap, $10,000 added; Saturday, Aug. 20, the Hawthorne Juvenile handicap, $10,000 added, and Saturday, Aug. 27, the Hawthorne Gold Cup, $25,000 added.

The Illinois Owners' handicap is one confined to horses owned by residents of Illinois and has grown to great importance among the Chicago and Illinois owners. It started out two years ago as more or less of a novelty, but it took hold with such force that the management now has increased the added money purse to $10,000.

The Juvenile handicap, coming as it does so late in the summer, finds all of the star youngsters named.

Eight races will be run daily with post time for the first set at 2:15 o'clock, daylight savings.

SUNTICA WINS OAKS

Latonia, Ky., July 30.—(AP)—Suntica, queen of the stables of Willis Sharpe Kilmer, Binghamton, N. Y., sportsman, won the 36th running of the Latonia Oaks which featured the getaway program here this afternoon.

It marked the third Oaks triumph for the 2 year old daughter of Sun Briar and Simpatica, she having previously won renewals of the Kentucky and Illinois Oak at Churchill Downs and Washington Park, respectively.

Shouldering top weight of 126 pounds and given a well judged ride by the veteran jockey, Jimmy Smith, Suntica came from behind in the stretch to lead the Audley farm's Late Date, which she conquered by a nose in the Illinois, to the wire in the mile and a quarter test. Butter Beans, representing the Forest Cove stable, was third.

Three Others in Field.

Six accepted the issue in the $5,000 added event, Light Eagle, Elizabeth Fox, and Olamay making up the remainder of the field. Butter Beans cut out a sizzling pace for the first half mile. Elizabeth Fox was nearest in pursuit, but retired in favor of Suntica as the field turned into the back stretch. Late Date moved into third place at this point.

Butter Beans continued to show the way to the stretch, but it was apparent that Smith had Suntica under restraint. A sixteenth out Suntica raced into the lead, but had to be shaken up in the drive to stall off Late Date's challenge. Butter Beans held on gamely for the show end of the purse.

T. PHILIP PERKINS WEDS HALF SISTER OF PEGGY JOYCE

Farmville, Va., July 30.—(AP)—Miss Cecile Bushal Upton, half sister of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, and T. Philip Perkins of West Bromwich, England, former British amateur golf champion, were married today. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. S. B. Upton of this city.

Perkins, who was second to Gene Sarazen in the recent American open championship, is the son of Mrs. Margaret G. Perkins of New York City, and at present resides there.

Ladysman Is Easy Winner in Futurity

rivals, and he had them all whipped to a fare-you-well. He just went on about his business and won. Technique saved second money because Pomponius tried to sneak through on the rail, couldn't find an opening, and Jockey Burke was forced to take up and come around on the outside.

In a few more strides Pomponius would have stepped on past Technique to make the Coe entry finish one-two. But Technique wouldn't quit, so the entry finished one-three.

There have been few more brilliant racing days at Arlington this season. Favorites and outsiders were fighting all afternoon and it seemed to be just about an even break until Ladysman came along and showed his championship class in the Futurity.

Helen Bab Wins Opener.

The favorite players in the big crowd were away to a flying start when Helen Bab, owned by L. C. Young of Kentucky, beat Fanfern by a nose after a furious battle down the stretch. She was ridden by H. Elston, and in the mutuel betting paid $6.82. Snorky, a Pacific coast colt, finished third.

Chu Chu, at 6 to 1 in the betting, beat the heavily backed Grand Prince, owned by the Nash brothers of Chicago, by a length, in the second race. Jockey W. Saunders sneaked through a narrow opening next to the inner rail as the field headed into the stretch and gained an advantage which Grand Prince could not overcome. Fiddler, another that was backed stoutly, was always beaten, but managed to be far enough up to get third money.

The favorite players were jolted in the Chatelaine purse for 2 year olds, which came third on the program, and in the Ravenswood sprints, for older horses, which was the fourth race.

Tickory Tock, the little sister of Tick On, easily outfooted the field in the Chatelaine at 5½ furlongs, beating Orphean by a length, with the favorite, Royal Blunder, third.

Ladder, the short priced choice in the Ravenswood, was out of the money. Con Amore, the fleet Maryland more, winning by two and one-half lengths from Brown Wisdom. Higher, which had made the early pace, hung on long enough to be third.

700 RACE HORSES PUT ON BLOCK AT SARATOGA SALES

Breeders Puzzled About Prices to Expect.

BY FRENCH LANE.

Within a few days the figures will be available showing how much the depression has affected the value of a good thoroughbred race horse.

For the annual yearling sales at Saratoga are ready to start and as most of the thoroughbred breeders of America market their young stock through the sales ring there, a true barometer is established which shows values of horse flesh.

Between 600 and 700 young horses that will reach racing age on Jan. 1 will go under the hammer this year. This is about the same number marketed in other years. In the past the average price has been as high as $3,000. And some young horses were so highly fancied they brought $50,000 and $60,000.

Record Price Unlikely.

It isn't likely any of these records will be equaled this year. They may not even be approached, although the folks who are selling the young horses point to the rich prizes for which horses continue to run at the large American racing centers. If a horse can still earn as much as he could in the more prosperous days they believe his value has not decreased, even though there has been a depression.

The Saratoga auctions will open Friday soon after the annual summer racing season gets going there. Between that date and Aug. 26, yearlings from the most fashionable and most famous thoroughbred nurseries will be sold. They will represent the most famous blood lines in America, with many of the youngsters closely related to the stars of our present day racing.

Buyers journey to these sales from all parts of the country, much as they do to Newmarket in England. And while prices at Newmarket have been considerably lower this year than they were a few years back, some of the best stock offered brought high prices.

Purses Still High.

The race tracks in England, just as in America, have not suffered as much as other sports since the era of high prosperity ended. The value of the purses and stakes at English race tracks are about the same as in other years. The horses can earn as much as ever if they are able to win.

So on the eve of the Saratoga sales most of the breeders are hopeful their stock will not be sacrificed at unheard of low prices, although a few sales held at different racing centers during the spring and summer have indicated as much.

But they must sell their young horses regardless of the prices that are bid. For another crop is forever coming on at these breeding places, and to hold the young horses until higher prices were offered would soon find most of the breeding farms overcrowded with racing material which must eat and be cared for regardless of the financial trend of the times.

Schedule of Sales.

The sales schedule at Saratoga is much the same this year as in other seasons. Day after day the young horses are led out to auction block until all of them have been sold. The schedule for this year is as follows:

Aug. 5—Sanford Stud farms, Swingalong stud, Tollie Young, Idle Hour farm, and R. H. Farmer, Idle Hour farm, and C. M. Lewis.
Aug. 9—Entire crop of Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Court Manor stud.
Aug. 10—Belair stud of William Woodward, also Thomas Piatt and others.
Aug. 11—Shoshone stud of William R. Coe, also Leslie Combs, L. B. Combs and others.
Aug. 12—Claiborne and Ellerslie studs of Arthur B. Hancock.
Aug. 15—Sominco stud of Rodman Meacham, J. H. White and others.
Aug. 16—Heronford and Retirement studs of the Herring brothers, and Greenwich stud of William B. Miller.
Aug. 17—L. A. Moseley, Charlton Clay, E. K. Thomas, Poplar Hill farm, Pioneer Point farm, Charles Nuckols and others.
Aug. 18—Xalapa farm of Edward F. Simms, and Reagan farm of Mrs. Thomas B. Reagan.
Aug. 19—Old Hickory farm of Philip T. Chinn.
Aug. 22—Rancocas farm of Harry F. Sinclair.
Aug. 23—Rancocas farm of Harry F. Sinclair.
Aug. 24—Philip T. Chinn and others.
Aug. 26—Horses in training.

Sales Are Social Functions.

These yearling sales are social functions of steadily gaining vogue. Held under the glare of a dozen sputtering arclights, they begin, generally, about 8 o'clock. It is rudeness to be late. Evening dress is de rigeur but not obligatory. Ringside seats are reserved. John Bain wields the hammer, with John Tranter at his elbow to keep track of the bidding. There are intensely dramatic episodes, especially when a couple of well heeled gentlemen go after some particularly desirable lot. At one Saratoga sale a son of Whisk Broom II. brought the world's record price (for a yearling) of $75,000. At another a son of Man o' War fell to a bid of $65,000. At another a daughter of Man o' War brought $50,500.

The Woodward paddock sale will be marked by the offering of a filly by Gallant Fox, which in 1929 and 1930 earned upward of $340,000 in money and trophies, from Exterminate, she a half sister of the famous distance runner Exterminator. There also will be a filly from Tetrazzini, a young daughter of Stefan the Great and Isabeau.

These are of the first crop of that son of Sir Gallahad III. and Marguerite which is serving with his daddy at Arthur B. Hancock's Claiborne stud. These babies by Gallant Fox are foals, naturally. Not so a colt and a filly by the English stallion Sickle, son of Phalaris and the English Selene, which is standing, under lease from Lord Derby, at Joseph E. Widener's study in Kentucky, catalogued among the Belair yearlings to be sold Aug. 10.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

RACING ADMISSIONS.

ARLINGTON PARK has concluded the greatest meeting, from a racing viewpoint, in the history of the American turf. In amount of stake and purse money distributed to horsemen it also holds primacy. Volume of speculation, in keeping with the times, was markedly below former levels. Attendance, in the absence of official figures, probably was about 10 per cent below that of 1931.

Average attendance was augmented by a series of "Dollar days" to which the public responded with enthusiasm. These days answered criticism that "prices were too high" for this period of deflation and that many persons wishing to see great stake horses perform could not afford such recreation. It was the first time in America that racing of this caliber was offered for $1, plus tax.

Now there are two theories of race track admission fees. Leave out the big racing strings, most of which are owned by wealthy men willing to pay for their sport, and consider only public attendance and speculation, if you will. For every winning bettor there must be a losing bettor. What one person wins another loses, plus the maintenance cost of tracks and the payment of purses. That overhead can come from only one source, and that source is the spectators.

So during the recent period of public thought in which zealots attempted to regulate the so-called morals of their fellow man—prohibition is an example—race tracks, to a certain extent, feared hostility toward racing, of which betting is a necessary adjunct. Accordingly, the theory grew that racing should be witnessed only by those "who could afford to lose." Admission fees were made high enough to discourage attendance of those who could not afford to lose.

Like the noble experiment, the theory did not work. Human nature hasn't changed much within the limits of recorded history. The chap who did not or could not afford the track admission fee found bookmakers to take his $1 or even 50 cent and in some instances 25 cent bets, compared to the $2 minimum wagers at the track. He bet on the races without the exhilaration of seeing horses run amidst attractive surroundings.

Prices in Chicago were $2.40 for grandstand admission and $5.70 for clubhouse, which included state and federal taxes. In New York, where the track does not receive revenue from betting, which is not recognized by legislative enactment but conducted orally or "on the nod," as turf parlance goes, the lowest admission at the better tracks is $3.85, with about $5 extra for clubhouse, if we remember rightly.

During the boom era days these prices were paid by large crowds. Track attendance all over the country suffered this year, although to a lesser extent than anticipated. Meantime some criticism was heard of the charges.

When Arlington Park, on which approximately $4,000,000 has been expended, was taken over by a group of Chicago sportsmen, they announced it would not be run for profit; that profits, if any, would go back into the property and for improvements. They also announced they would not submit to financial exactions from chiselers, would not contribute to legislative "jackpots," if such jackpots exist, and would not contribute under duress to campaign funds or anything not pertaining to racing. Rather than submit they said they would close their gates. We believe they would.

Meantime reform is not as popular as it once was. A few restricting bills have been introduced at Springfield of whose sincerity one was skeptical, but the Lager act recognized pari-mutuel wagers with license fees and admission taxes enriching the state treasury has remained on the statute book.

In Illinois race tracks are allowed 6½ per cent of the mutuel handle for operating expenses. It is known technically as "take." With admission fees it supports the tracks.

So in Illinois, Kentucky, Maryland and Florida, states with pari-mutuel laws, higher attendance with consequent increase in betting offsets because of the "take" reduced admission charges. If attendance doubled, which it probably wouldn't, the change would be decidedly to the tracks' advantage.

Let's omit the financial angle. If racing is good sport, why should it not be popularized? Lower prices in anything increase consumption, economists tell us. Therefore, tracks are popularizing the sport if they make the charges the lowest consistent with high grade operation.

With the old bogey of reform opposition less menacing, that was the question for the Arlington directors. They decided upon the experiment. Figures are not completed showing just what was the effect or whether the experiment can become permanent. There is no question crowds increased notably and that more people derived pleasure from racing. The objection, if any, is that more people may wager, for one likes to make one or two bets at least during the afternoon. That, in our opinion, is something for the individual to decide.

Therefore, if racing can be conducted with reduced admission fees without lowering the quality of the sport, The Wake would like to see the plan continued at other Chicago tracks and in future seasons. If the revenue proves not sufficient we suggest continuing "Dollar days" once a week or oftener.

Mrs. Pardue Wins, 8 and 7, in Minnesota Golf Final

CURTIS OPENS OLYMPICS, 1ST EVENTS TODAY

Athletes of 39 Counties March in Parade.

letes, the boxers and horsemen in blue coats and white flannels, the track and swimming contestants in white duck trousers and sleeveless white jerseys.

15 from Australia.

Australia followed, five girls and ten men, all wearing green flannel coats over white. The girls wore white sports hats and the men dark green short peaked caps.

Austria had eleven in line, two of them girls, all in white with white caps. Belgium's fourteen wore blue coats and straw hats, attire favored by a dozen nations. Brazil, with 63, as the strongest South American representation, was garbed in white jerseys with blue borders and white trousers.

Canada presented a compelling picture with 19 girls and 60 men, all in splashy scarlet with white trousers or skirts. The Canadians wore white turned down Panama hats. Chile had four slender, dark complexioned youths bareheaded in blue and white, and next marched China's six, in the same popular blue coats and white pants, with straw hats.

Colombia Delegate Lonesome.

Colombia's one athlete wore gray plus fours and double breasted coat, and carried his country's standard, hatless. Cuba added nine blue coats to the contingent. Czechoslovakia, which marched next, varied the blue and white scheme with vivid scarlet ties and little white caps. Denmark's nine girls, all taffy blondes, and twenty men, wore vivid red coats and little white caps.

Egypt's one representative, Farid Simaika, a Hollywood movie actor and stunt man, wore a red fez. Estonia's flag was followed by five. And next came Finland's 43, without Nurmi, getting a hand from the crowd which sympathized over loss of the distance racing star. The Finns wore white shorts and white skimmer straw hats. In Nurmi's absence the flag was carried by Aki Jarvinen.

77 from Great Britain.

Great Britain's 70 men and 7 women marched with a prancing step, clad in blue, white and pith helmets. France's group of 2 women and 55 men also affected the blue and white.

Haiti's one contender, the broad jumper Cator, who is one of the favorites in his specialty, marched in a solemn one man parade.

Holland, with twelve girls in longish white skirts, bright blue flannel coats, and white berets, were followed by four Netherland army officers in dark blue dress uniform, and after them ten male athletes in blue coats and white trousers.

Turbans 'n' Everything.

Hungary's delegation of forty maroon coats also included two girls and three army officers in spic and span khaki. India's hockey and athletic teams wore dark blue turbans over light gray blue tunics and white flannels.

Irish Free State presented fourteen husky men in emerald green coats, bordered in orange. Italy, third biggest of the national degelations, wore overseas uniform caps of white, vivid satin blue shirts, oranmented with a medal, navy blue belts, white trousers.

Next came Japan, with the largest delegation of all visiting countries, 19 girls and more than 100 men. The Nipponese clung to the formal sports wear of blue coats and white shirts and trousers. The emblem of the rising sun on field appeared over each heart. As the Japanese marched a string of balloons with Japanese lettering suspended was set off to hover over the stadium.

100 from Mexico.

Jugo-Slavia had four men in gray coats, Latvia had three men in white shirts, and Mexico's group of nearly one hundred received an ovation from the crowd in their white wool sweaters and white ducks. New Zealand's twenty men marched behind one woman.

Norway had seven in blue coats. The Filipinos, who decided to mark their own nationality in this Olympic instead of competing for Uncle Sam, marched, eleven strong, in blue, white, and pith colored Panama hats and blue ties.

Poland had twenty men and fourteen girl marchers, clad in white caps and blue coats, and, after Portugal's six and Spain's half dozen in gray trousers and blue coats, came Sweden's big delegation of fifty-two men and one girl.

Switzerland had twelve in line, all in white duck with red ties, four of them carying corners of the Swiss standard of red field and white cross.

U. S. Team Largest.

South Africa was in jade green coats and white, two girls and fifteen men, and after Uruguay's three the United States wound up the parade with the most imposing array of all.

The girls wore red vests over white shirts, with short white skirts, with short white sleeves and white lapels. They wore red cloche hats with a triangle of red and blue stripes over the left ear. Most of the Yankee girls were stockingless. Two colored girls marched with the squad. The American men were in white, short sleeved, thin flannel jerseys with red and blue striped belts. Morgan Taylor, Chicago hurdler, carried the stars and stripes.

The American team, with 376 men and 48 women in line, nearly doubled the next largest numerical contingent, that of Japan. Italy had the third largest team. Germany and Great Britain's delegations were next largest numerically, being closely followed by Canada, Mexico, Brazil, and Sweden.

From tomorrow's active start the program of track and field events will grow heavier daily until Sunday, Aug. 7, when the running competition reaches its climax and finale in the marathon run.

LATIN GOLFERS HOT TAMALES; BEWARE, SCOTS!

Sarazen Heads Parade of Italian, Spanish Stars.

New York, July 30.—[Special.]—One of the strangest turns that golf has taken since the great war is the rise of the Latins as formidable contenders for highest laurels. Your golfing shellback, who dates back to the gutty ball, swan necked wooden clubs, the Victorian sleek and betasseled plaid stockings, finds it hard to reconcile himself to this Italian-Spanish-French uprising. To him there will always be something incongruous about a Latin shooting a full iron dead to the pin.

Preconceived notions, even when based on fallacy, die hard. To the generation reared on McGuffey Readers the Latin will always be pictured as "a volatile race, fond of dancing and light wine." Verdun weakened this illusion for the post-Victorian brood and Latin golfers are now doing the rest.

Scots Face a Fight.

If the cold concentration and calm relaxation which championship golf supposedly demands are not usually associated with the mercurial Latin temperament, the fact remains that native born Latins of golfers of Italian-Spanish descent have come to the fore in the last decade and are threatening to drive the Scots into the background. Either the disposition formula for winning golf is all wrong or these young Latins don't run true to style.

Away back in 1907 Arnaud Massy of France broke Britain's stranglehold on its own open championship, beating an American to the prize by 15 years. It was a long time before England recovered from the shock of seeing a Frenchman beat Taylor, Braid and Vardon. That Massy's victory wasn't just an accident is shown by the fact that he tied for the lead in 1911 and lost the play-off to Vardon.

Oddly enough, Massy reveled in windy going. Britons called him "a Frenchman with the soul of a Scot." France has never produced his equal, though Auguste Boyer and Louis Tellier have had fair success.

Plenty of Good Spaniards.

The Spanish strain, as represented by José Jurado, Marco Churio, Hector Freccero, Tomas Genta of the Argentine and by Al Espinosa, Abe Espinosa, Olin Dutra and Morte Dutra of the United States, has produced far more talented golfers than France.

While no native born Italian has yet given Mussolini cause to puff out his black shirted chest over a golf victory, Americans of Italian descent figure prominently in every medal summary. Gene Sarazen, it need not be said, is "tops" right now. If he lacks MacSmith's limpid style, Gene can trim the redfaced Scot when the blue chips are on the table. That's what counts in poker and golf.

After Sarazen there is a wide gulf before you come to the next best Italian-American player—Joe Turnesa. Joe's number was called out at Scioto in 1926, but a 41 on the last nine spoiled his championship dream. Turnesa led Bobby Jones by three strokes when the final round began. A 75 would have slammed the door in Bob's face.

A Polished Stylist.

Connoisseurs of form like to follow Joe Turnesa. Here is a polished stylist with a free, lashing swing that is launched almost the instant his feet are settled. No fussing around or shilly-shallying for Turnesa. As Sarazen says: "Joe just rolls into his swing."

Turnesa's graceful whipping technic reminds one of Bob MacDonald's style. Bob had few equals as a shot maker, but never acquired the knack of competitive scoring. It is just as well, because MacDonald now ranks as one of the great teachers in golf. Bob has an enthusiastic clientele in Chicago, where he conducts mass instruction clinics with the aid of an ingenious swing-grooving machine of his own invention. The club head simply cannot get out of line, because it travels along a metal trolley, making a two point contact as it slides.

Henry and Al Ciuci rate next to Sarazen and Turnesa in any American-Italian golf ranking. The brothers Ciuci specialize in knocking par for a loop on a given round, but they rarely hook four low enough rounds together. Their scoring spread, to use a golf term, is wider than that of most low handicap men—meaning that from the mid sixties to the low eighties is merely a breeze for the mysterious Ciucis.

How About These Teams.

Picking teams based on racial origins is an amusing pastime. Here are a few eight-men line ups jotted down at random. In view of Bob Cruikshank's crusade for a match between home bred and foreign born professionals, why wouldn't a round robin tournament involving these American citizens of various national strains be a good gate attraction?

LATIN TEAM.		SCOTTISH TEAM.
Gene Sarazen	1	Macdonald Smith
Al Espinosa	2	Tommy Armour
Joe Turnesa	3	Bob Cruickshank
Olin Dutra	4	Will MacFarlane
Morte Dutra	5	Jock Hutchinson
Henry Ciuci	6	Jack Forrester
Tony Manero	7	Clarence Hackney

Would Caledonia's Blue Bonnets be outpointed by this Spanish-Italian melange? Some of the Highland lads are well past their prime. And what about these:

TEUTONIC TEAM.		IRISH TEAM.
Walter Hagen	1	Johnny Farrell
Leo Diegel	2	Wilfred Cox
Bill Mehlhorn	3	Tom Creavy
George von Elm	4	Mike Brady
Willie Klein	5	Pete O'Hara

Jim Barnes	3	Walter Kozak
Cyril Walker	4	Gus Novak
Willie Hunter	5	Larry Nabholtz

Charles Mayo	8	Pat Petranck

Under the Slavic heading are grouped a medley of racial strains, including Lithuanians, Polacks, Croats, Serbs, Hungarians, Czechs, and Slovenes. Don't stick Burke on the Irish side by mistake. He was born Burkowski. Johnny Golden's real name is likewise a tongue twister.

Golf may be as Scottish as scones and heather, but you can't prove it by this collection of golfing headliners. Jurado and Sarazen will take part in an exhibition at Ridgemoor Country club today.

3 Records Fall in Senior Girls' Track Events

Three records were broken and two tied in the annual west parks girls' senior track meet at Douglas park yesterday. Kathryn O'Connor, La Follette park, established a new park record in the 75 yard dash when she ran the distance in 9 seconds. Ethel Krause, also of La Follette, set a new record in the hurl ball contest with a mark of 60 feet, while Grace Wilson of Dvorak put the shot 34 feet 4 inches to break the record. Celia Dubois of Union tied the 50 yard dash record with a time of 6 6-10 seconds, while Loretta Baranowski's high jump of 4 feet 4 inches also tied the old record.

Ethel Klecka of Douglas was the high scorer with 17 points, winning the broad jump and placing in the 50 yard dash and high jump. Julia Fermanyak from Holstein was second with 10 points, placing in the 75 yard dash and broad jump, while Grace Wilson won the 60 pound shot put to score 7 points for third place.

Fadie Murphy, competing for Union park, scored 10 points to win individual honors among the juniors. Fadie won the 50 yard dash with a time of 6 5-10 seconds, and placed in the basketball throw. Stella Maspalska of Eckhart was second in scoring with 8 points, while Susan Jurko of Dvorak, Helen Speponaitis, Douglas; Mary Marousek of Franklin, and Alice Hozakwicz of Holstein tied for third place with 7 points each.

Douglas park, with 22 points, was first in team scoring in the seniors, and Union, with 15 points, was first in the juniors. In the senior division the parks finished in the following order. Dvorak, 17; Eckhart, 16; La Follette, 15; Holstein, 13; Union, 7; Shedd, 3; Franklin, 2; Pulaski, 1. The junior standing was: Douglas, 13; Holstein, 12; Eckhart, 11½; Franklin, 8; Dvorak, 7½; Harrison, 5; Humboldt, 2.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Two weeks from this afternoon the third annual 100 yard free style swimming races sponsored by The Tribune will be held at the Lincoln park lagoon. Entries close at midnight Aug. 10. While the period of registration is not as long as in other years, it is deemed sufficient by the officials. The races this year are scheduled two weeks later than usual because of the international amateur boxing bouts with Germany which were held last week.

The first 100 yard races for boys and girls were held in 1930. Fourteen hundred and seventy entered the contests and more than one-half of this number competed. Last year, with five age classifications for boys and five for girls, the total entry was 2,825, of whom 1,463 competed.

Use Same Layout.

The 1932 races again will be held at the Lincoln park lagoon. The starting barge will be placed as formerly, south of the stone bridge spanning the lagoon and connecting with the outer drive. The barge will be opposite the Lincoln Park Boat club. The finish barge, of course, will be anchored 100 yards down the lagoon. Both will be in full sight of spectators on the outer drive and on the lawns of the park between the middle drive and the lagoon.

Permission for the races has been granted by the Lincoln park commissioners. H. O. Weege, general superintendent, and Harry Albrecht, superintendent of small parks and recreation, already have commenced preparations. Commodore Prost of the Lincoln Park Boat club has offered the facilities of his club to the contestants.

Gold Medals to Winners.

Ten gold medals are the awards offered the champions. Ten silver and ten bronze medals are the prizes for those who finish second and third in each race. In addition each boy and girl who reports for the races will receive a souvenir button as certificate of his or her ability to swim 100 yards. A team trophy also will be awarded to the club or organization which scores the most points in all ten events.

Following the custom inaugurated in the Silver Skates Derbies, the 1931 champions will not be eligible to compete in the same age divisions. They may, however, race in the next class, with the exception of Class E [unlimited age] winners, who are barred from competition by their championships.

Opportunity for All.

The purpose of The Tribune races is to promote swimming among all the boys and girls in Chicagoland. Many of the thousands who frequent the beaches and pools are not proficient swimmers. Hundreds of them never have tasted their ability in competition.

The age classifications for boys and girls are: Class A, 11 and 12 years; Class B, 13 and 14 years; Class C, 15 and 16 years; Class D, 17 and 18 years; Class E, 19 years of age and over.

Clip Out Entry Blank.

Individual entries may be made on the blank which is printed daily in The Tribune. Team entries, certified by coach or responsible director or member of the club or organization, may be made in a group, providing correct ages are given.

Most important is that the entries be mailed by Aug. 10. The names and numbers of all contestants will be printed in The Sunday Tribune on the day of the meet.

FT. SHERIDAN TO MEET TEXAS PROS IN POLO TODAY

HAGEN, JURADO TO PLAY ARMOUR, SARAZEN TODAY

Chicago golf fans this afternoon will have their second opportunity of the season to see Gene Sarazen, the new British and American open champion, and his partner, Tommy Armour, but their opponents in an 18 hole exhibition match at the Ridgemoor Country club are likely to steal the show. The two in question are Walter Hagen, who needs no qualifying adjectives, and José Jurado, the South American champion, who, since his first appearance in the United States a month ago, has made a bigger hit with the galleries than any foreign golfer to play American courses in a decade.

The match today will start at 3 o'clock, but for the preceding hour, the gallery will be entertained with a demonstration of wood and iron shots by Sarazen and Armour, a performance which they omitted on their last appearance here, when Harry Cooper and Horton Smith defeated them at Glen Oak.

Every Man a Star.

The twosomes who will compete at Ridgemoor include four of the game's leading workmen. Hagen and Armour hold no titles at present, although each has won every championship worth winning in his career. Sarazen achieved a feat this year that was reckoned almost impossible for any professional, that of taking over the British open title and then returning to Fresh Meadow a few days later to win the American open with a record score.

The stranger of the quartet of Chicagoans will be Jurado, but a glance at José's record proves that he's an exception to most foreign players, who excel in their own countries, but are dismal failures as soon as they leave home.

José Is a Champion, Too.

Jurado holds the Argentine championship, which he has won several times. It was in the British open that he first began to attract international attention, leading the field until the final nine holes in 1928, and losing the title by a stroke to Armour last year. He planned to compete in last year's open at Toledo, but was withheld by an invitation from the prince of Wales to stay in England for a fortnight. In his first appearances in America this year, he has become not only a contender for every title, but a gallery favorite as well. He finished well up in the American, Western, and Canadian open meets.

Crowd Trails Californians at Jackson Park.

One of the largest galleries of the year trooped over the fairways and greens of the Jackson Park Golf club yesterday to see Irving Goddard, 20 year old Pasadena, Cal., collegian, win the 28th annual Chicago city championship by defeating Douglas McKay, a resident of Long Beach, Cal., and a law student at De Paul university, 5 and 4.

It was the second consecutive year in which Californians met for the championship. Last year McKay beat Joe Nichols, the Los Angeles prodigy, in the final, and was a strong favorite to repeat this year, until Thursday, when Goddard, just a name on the scoreboard when the tournament opened Monday, broke the Jackson park course record with a 65, four under par.

Goddard has been playing great golf on the coast, but didn't achieve real recognition until the national public links tournament two weeks ago, when he ran Pete Miller, the eventual runner up, to 20 holes before losing.

Policeman Wins Trophy.

Judge Thomas A. Green presented the championship trophy to Goddard, and to Frank McNamara, the Pekin station policeman who won the consolation final, also at 36 holes, from Harry Baker of Olympia Fields, 3 and 2.

Cards for the Goddard-McKay match follow:

Par out	444	443	434—34
Par in	344	355	434—35—69
Morning Round.
Goddard out	543	344	434—34
Goddard in	443	444	443—34—68
McKay out	544	443	433—34
McKay in	444	355	434—36—70
Afternoon Round.
Goddard out	343	564	435—37
Goddard in	343	34
McKay out	443	464	535—38
McKay in	443	45

Goddard 2 Up in Morning.

Goddard was two up at the end of the morning 18 holes as the result of a par breaking 68, and continued his excellent putting in the afternoon, getting on the first green in two and dropping a 20 footer for a birdie 3. McKay had a couple of chances to catch up in the afternoon, but faltered on the incoming round, being unable to win a hole out of the last five.

Outboards to Seek $10,000 Trophy Today

Existing outboard motor speed records are expected to fall today at the Century of Progress regatta in the south lagoon of the World's Fair grounds.

Tom Estlick of Waukegan will defend his world championship title in the race for the $10,000 Commander Eugene F. McDonald trophy, the most valuable cup offered for outboard racing. Thirty-two other drivers, among them five record holders, will line up against him. Estlick holds the world's record of 56.52 miles per hour.

Entries Pass 100 Mark.

More than 100 entries have been received for this race and for races in classes A, B, C, and F, and a special event for runabouts. Entries have been received from 14 states east of the Mississippi river, and the winners in each class will be acclaimed champions of the central states. Drivers are pointing for new records since the races are sanctioned by the National Outboard association.

Lieutenant Commander J. M. Creighton of the World's Fair yachting committee predicted yesterday that the regatta, the opening event in an extensive program of sports events for the Century of Progress exposition, will be the most successful water meet staged to date in Chicago.

A Race Every 20 Minutes.

The starting gun for the first event will be fired at 1 p. m., and the races, each of which will be for five miles over the one mile course, will follow every 20 minutes.

SARAZEN SHOOTS THREE UNDER PAR AT DAVENPORT

Davenport, Ia., July 30.—[Special.]—Shooting a 67, three under par, Gene Sarazen, British and American open champion, thrilled the large gallery which followed him, Tommy Armour, Dr. Paul Barton of Davenport, and R. Abrahamson, Rock Island professional, in their Tri-City exhibition today.

Sarazen's total was just two above the course record of 65 established several weeks ago. Tommy Armour took 73 strokes to cover the distance, and the two Davenport golfers, Barton and Abrahamson, 75 and 76, respectively. On the first nine Sarazen shot 31, four under par, and Armour 34.

KOZELUH WHIPS TILDEN IN 4 SETS TO ENTER FINALS

Meets Nusslein Today for Pro Tennis Title.

William T. Tilden II, for one year king of the professional tennis courts, was dethroned yesterday afternoon at the South Shore Country club when Karel Kozeluh of Czecho-Slovakia defeated him in a four set battle, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, 6-1, before 2,300 spectators.

As a result of his victory yesterday Kozeluh will meet Hans Nussilen, a 22 year old German, this afternoon for the title. Nusslein also won his way to the finals yesterday, defeating Roman Najuch, 6-2, 12-10, 6-1.

Tilden, despite several displays of his temperament of amateur days, exhibited brilliant tennis, using all the strokes in his tennis repertoire. They were not enough yesterday to subdue his dogged little opponent, who persisted in returning the ball across the net.

Tilden was at his best in the second set, when he punctuated fast drives with almost perfect control, completely routing Kozeluh, who, standing on the base line, was unable to cover his court.

Kozeluh Rallies to Take Set.

In the next set, however, Kozeluh rallied again and again until the games went to 6-5, when an official ruled a foot-fault on Tilden at set point and the affair went to the dark haired European.

Following the intermission, Tilden, after a brief streak of championship tennis, consistently netted the ball or drove it out of bounds, permitting Kozeluh to win easily.

Nusslein, who learned his tennis tactics from Najuch in Germany five years ago, turned loose all of the cunning that his opponent had taught him, to defeat his 39 year old teacher.

Najuch at Best in Second Set.

Nusslein, smashing deep drives to the back-court and refuting Najuch's attempt to storm the net with line drives, found difficulty only in the second set. At that time Najuch opened up a burning fore-hand drive and a cannonball service to run the games to 8-7, when he had the affair at set point on his own serve. Nusslein broke in, however, to win. Najuch was obviously fatigued in the last set.

2 Generations of Egans Enter Amateur Golf

Rockford, Ill., July 30.—[Special.]—Two generations of the golfing clan of Egan will participate in the western amateur golf tournament here Aug. 22 to 27.

H. Chandler Egan, one of the heroes of the 1929 national amateur tourney, will attempt another comeback, while his brother, Bradshaw, and his son, Bill, will be among his opponents.

Winner of the national amateur title in 1904 and 1905, and the western amateur in 1902, 1904, and 1907, Egan went to the quarter finals of the 1929 national amateur in 1929. In that tournament at Pebble Beach, Cal., Jimmy Johnston won over Dr. O. F. Willing in the finals after Johnny Goodman had eliminated Bobby Jones.

Chandler Egan suffered a physical breakdown after his victories early in the century while a member of the Exmoor Country club in Chicago. Since then he has regained his health and his old form. He has already won the Pacific Northwest championship this year.

Bob Gardner, who won the national title in 1909 by beating Egan in the final round, is another old-time entrant. Egan will make the trip east with Don Moe of Portland, defending champion and a member of the Walker cup team.

It is likely that all who qualify in the Pacific Northwest district preliminaries for the national amateur will play in the tournament at the Rockford Country club course.

HANLEY, KIPKE TAKE STUMP FOR GRID SYSTEMS

A forerunner of what may be expected when Michigan and Northwestern meet in football next fall will be obtained when Harry Kipke and Dick Hanley, respective coaches of the two schools, debate the merits of their systems at Northwestern's coaching school, Aug. 15 to 27.

Both coaches have agreed to take the platform and point out the advantages of their styles of football, Kipke holding forth on the famous Michigan punt formation, while Hanley explains the makeup of the Warner system. On Oct. 8 the coaches will put their theories to an actual test when the Wolverines meet the Wildcats at Ann Arbor.

In addition to the Kipke-Hanley debate the school will also feature a number of lectures by coaches of several other famous systems.

Judge Walter Steffen, Carnegie Tech coach, and Arnold Horween, head coach at Harvard until his retirement a few years ago, are others who will discuss various phases of the game.

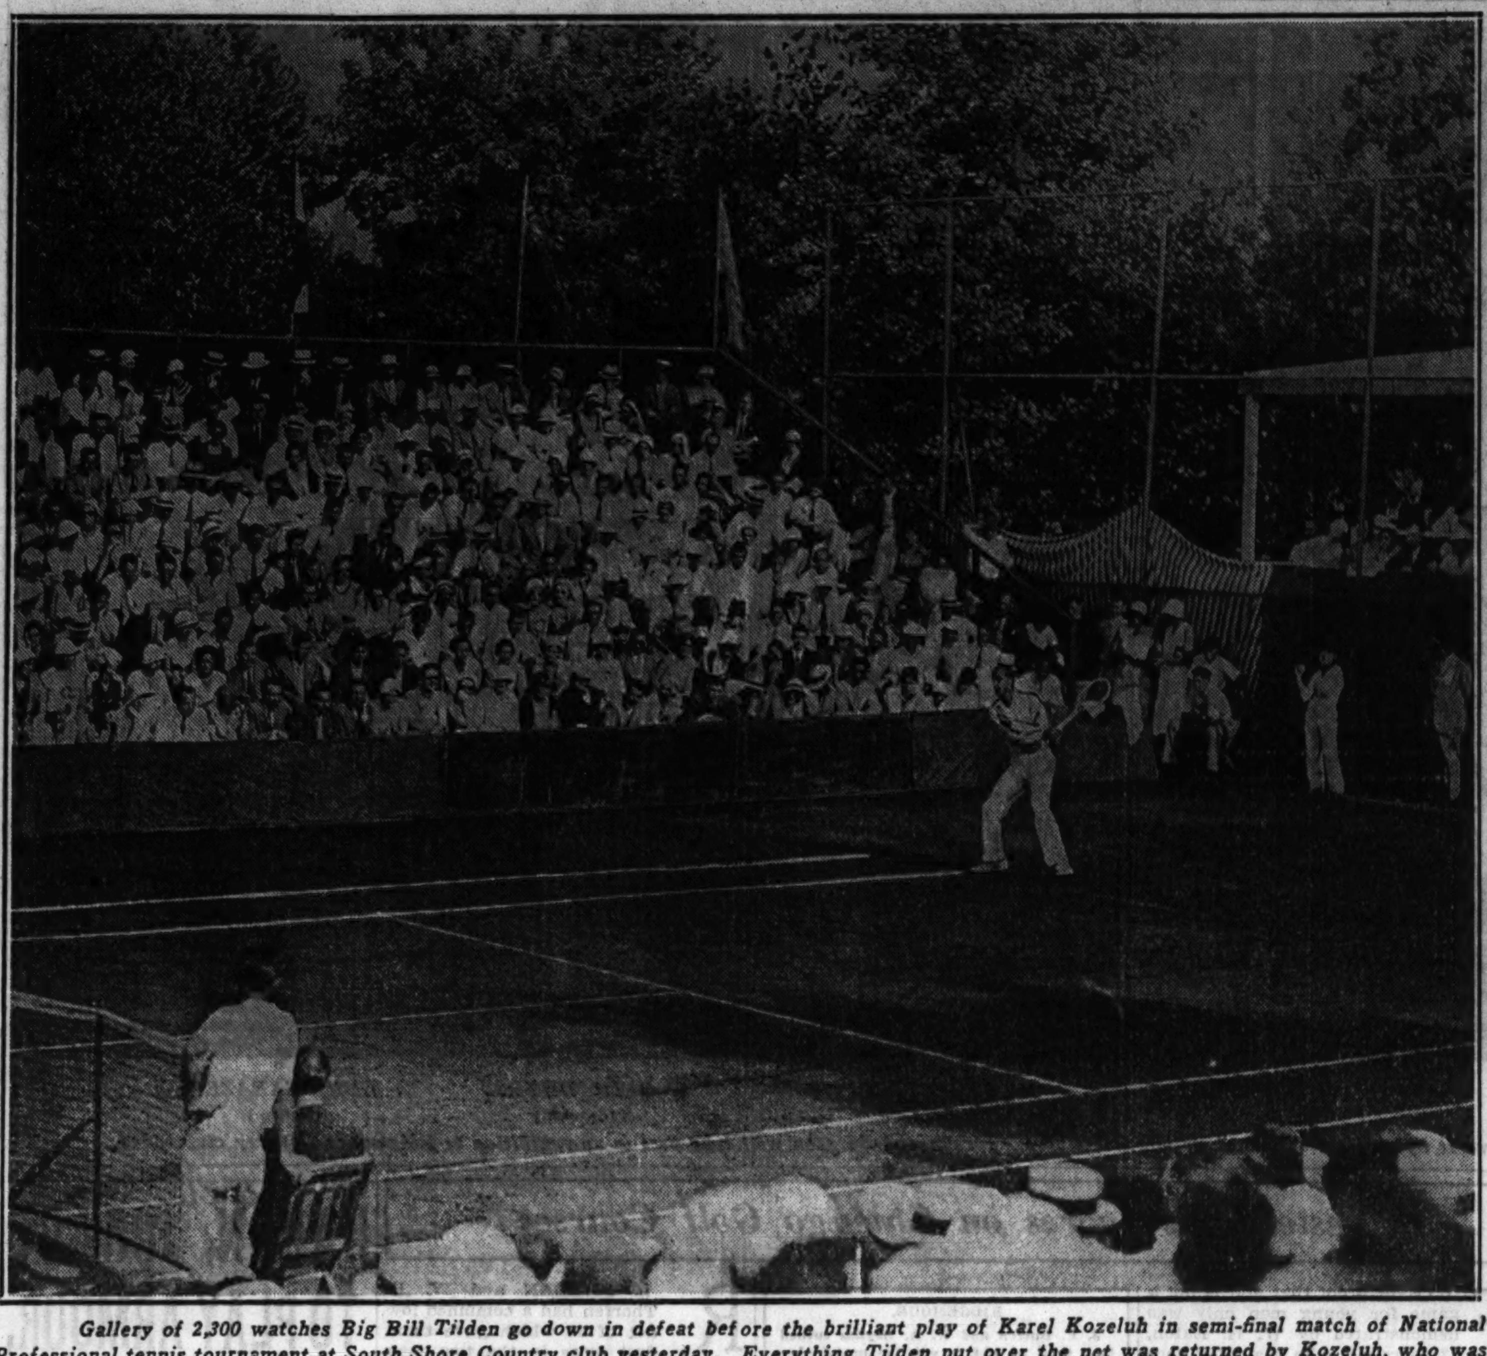
LARGE GALLERY SEES DEFEAT OF TENNIS MASTER



Gallery of 2,300 watches Big Bill Tilden go down in defeat before the brilliant play of Karel Kozeluh in semi-final match of National Professional tennis tournament at South Shore Country club yesterday. Everything Tilden put over the net was returned by Kozeluh, who was unperturbed by the fact he was playing the defending champion.

New Crop of Cauliflower on Stadium Card

Matchmaker Nate Lewis believes that what the Chicago boxing situation needs is a flock of new faces, so there will be several brand new sets of cauliflowered ears introduced to Chicago at the Chicago Stadium Thursday night.

The card is headed by the junior lightweight championship match between Kid Chocolate, title holder, and Eddie Shea of the west side, a ranking 130 pounder. Chocolate has boxed here before, but the bout with Shea will be his debut at the Stadium.

Chicago fans who have journeyed to Milwaukee to see Angel Cliville perform have been telling about this new "Battling Siki" from Porto Rico. He is slated for an eight round bout on the Chocolate card against Wild Willie Oster of Boston.

Cliville's style is interesting and often effective. Every punch he lets go is tagged for keeps. The Stadium matchmaker asserts this scrap is for the wild man championship, for Oster is one of the great untamed and fights just like that.

Freddie Miller, Cincinnati featherweight, is another newcomer. Freddie is scheduled for eight rounds against the flashy Hymie Weisman of Des Moines.

Chocolate will arrive in Chicago today and establish himself at Trafton's gym. Shea has been at work for ten days at Kid Howard's. The other athletes on the program will all be on hand by Tuesday night.

LASKEY WANTS K. O.

Art Laskey, Minneapolis heavyweight, will be seeking his second knockout at White City when he meets Tom Jones tomorrow night for Promoter Mique Malloy.

Malloy is having trouble finding opponents for Laskey. If Laskey beats Jones the south side promoter will endeavor to match Art with Tuffy Griffith, King Levinsky, or Charley Retzlaff.

Jack Robinson and Bob Stone, heavyweights, will meet in one of the supporting five round bouts. Jackie Davis and Phil McQuillan meet in another. Three other bouts will complete the card.

The Harold Taylor post and O'Donnell-Eddy post will meet in the final game for the Cook county championship of the American Legion Junior Baseball league this afternoon at the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital at Maywood. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

Taylor marched into the final round by eliminating St. Mary's post, 24 to 1, in the semi-finals, while O'Donnell-Eddy defeated Rogers Park, 11 to 2, at Wrigley field yesterday. The Taylor-St. Mary's score:

St. Mary's	000 000 1—1	0	3
Taylor	2412 015 *—24	22	3

Batteries—Komisky and Larocco; Gaffke, Galluski and Klasa.

U.S. Davis Cup Doubles Pair Beats France

at 5-3. Brugnon took his service, but the Americans ran out on the next.

During the ovation which greeted Dwight Davis on his arrival, it was believed that yesterday he was prevented from seeing the singles through a combination of misunderstandings and discourtesy which caused him to walk out of the stadium.

He was supposed to sit in the presidential box with the official party, but by mistake he turned up at the enclosure reserved for notables of the second magnitude, whence he was chased by a ticket taker. This official is understood to have told Davis that he, the ticket taker, was Premier Edouard Herriot in disguise and what about it?

Players Cool to Visitor.

In despair, Davis finally wandered to the players' platform, getting by on the strength of his name, which appeared to be vaguely familiar to the ushers. Unfortunately, once inside the rostrum, he could not find a seat, so he asked a group of French players to make room for him on the crowded bench. He was told to go find a bench in a warmer climate. When he made known his identity, Mme. le Bes Nerais, well known woman player and wife of the Davis cup referee, said, "Well, what of it?" She smokes cigars.

Davis went home in disgust, but decided to come today after receiving apologies from Borotra and Pierre Gillou, local official, who learned of the incident and called on him last night.

Need Both Matches Today.

Two singles matches tomorrow will conclude the challenge round and the United States needs victory in both if it is to regain the cup, which passed into French hands five years ago. Jean Borotra and Cochet gave the defenders a two match grasp on the trophy yesterday by conquering Ellsworth Vines and Wilmer Allison, respectively, in the opening singles play.

Allison's inspired play made him a favorite to defeat Borotra in tomorrow's opening singles match, which would leave the fate of the trophy to the meeting of Cochet and Vines. Cochet was slightly below form today and may find the Californian a dangerous opponent.

Here's Book That Settles Debates for Fishermen

BY BOB BECKER.

Michigan has its St. Lawrence muskalonge, Wisconsin may "point with pride" to its northern muskie, and Ohio can boast about the Chautauqua muskie, but where is the tiger muskie that we hear so much about?

Along with this brain teaser the summer fisherman finds this question to mull over: Some fishermen in northern Minnesota say they have the real northern pike and it's a different fish from the pickerel, while other neighboring states say that they have both pickerel and northern pike. Therefore, why is a pickerel, and which is a northern pike?

If anglers who spend considerable time going after muskies, northern pike, "pickerel," and other members of that family want to settle arguments about these game fish they can do it quickly by using a copy of the new "Fisherman's Guide," which has just been published by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. It is now on sale at THE TRIBUNE'S public service office, 1 South Dearborn street, Chicago. The price is 15 cents if purchased at the office over the counter. By mail the charge is 20 cents.

The chapter entitled, "Muskalonge and Northern Pike [Pickerel]" in this new fishing guide sails into the tiger muskie question the very first thing. The fisherman who wants the facts on what the so-called tiger muskie is and how many different kinds of muskies we have in North America, will find his information in chapter two of the fishing guide.

The northern pike versus pickerel argument also enters into this chapter. As the new handbook points out, the names applied to the species known as Esox lucius or pickerel [northern pike] have caused a lot of confusion among anglers in the central states.

As a matter of fact the poor old "luce," as Izaak Walton used to call it in England, has more than 70 different names from "snake" to the dignified northern pike. Incidentally the northern peninsula of Michigan seems to be one of the few sections of the country where the fisherman call Esox lucius and the wall-eye by their corect names.

The "Fisherman's Guide" contains 72 pages of information on nearly all of our common game fish in the central states, tips on tackle, how to take care of fish after they are caught, and is illustrated with many photographs.

Altair Moves Into Lead in Yacht Series

Altair, Dr. Arthur Metz's eagle boat, which has been speeding along in the last few weeks of the Chicago Yacht club's regular weekly series, finally passed the consistent leader, George Getz Jr.'s Aquila, yesterday. The Metz boat, which had previously taken four consecutive second places, handed Aquila her first defeat of the season and took a lead of one point in series B. Aquila, which had won series A and was leading in the B division, could do no better than finish fourth, both Bob Haynie's Falcon and Bill Derby's Hyac heading her to the finish line. Falcon was first to pass the starting mark, with Aquila second and Dr. George Davis' Orn third, but Altair stepped along in the first thousand yards, overtook all of them, and increased her advantage on every leg thereafter.

The R boats held their first race in series B, with Bill Glaver's Jonnie the winner over Samuel Dauchy's Varya. Jonnie was first across the line and held the lead throughout the race which was run in a light easterly wind. These breezes were no help to Gossoon II., one of the better R class boats on the great lakes, and she had to follow Ned Sheridan's Ariel and Bill Sprague's Echo home.

Results and elapsed times for the eagles, R boats and pups follow:

HELEN JACOBS WINS SEABRIGHT TENNIS TROPHY

Seabright, N. J., July 30.—(AP)—Helen Jacobs of Berkeley, Cal., the country's No. 2 ranking tennis star, today retired the Seabright bowl from competition, defeating Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, Cal., in the finals of the 45th annual championship meet, 6-4, 6-3.

Robert [Lefty] Bryan, Chattanooga, Tenn., and John McDiarmid, Fort Worth, Tex., gained the men's doubles trophy by defeating Samuel Gilpin, Philadelphia, and Eddie Jacobs, of Baltimore. The scores were, 9-11, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4. The victors gained their first legs on the bowl which John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, Davis cup winners in France today, captured last year.

'SPECIAL POLICE' DEFRAUD OWNERS OF AUTOMOBILES

The Chicago Motor club issued a warning yesterday that men are fraudulently representing themselves as "special police" of the park boards in soliciting automobile owners for $1.50 a month to watch their cars parked on the streets at night. Persons solicited are advised to telephone the park police.

COUNTY POLICE OPEN DRIVE ON NOISY MOTORS

Drivers of Autos Without Mufflers to Be Nabbed.

Chief William Collins has ordered Cook county highway police to arrest drivers of passenger vehicles and trucks operating without engine mufflers.

"Noisy autos have become so numerous that drastic steps must be taken," said the chief. "Cars are being operated with broken exhaust pipes and leaking gaskets, with muffler cutouts and with no mufflers at all.

"There is enough noise difficult to avoid in the traffic through municipalities and on the busy country highways. The police must protect the public against avoidable strains to nerves."

Muffler Cutouts Barred.

The Illinois motor vehicle code does not specifically cover all nuisance noises from automobile operation. A sections reads: "No motor vehicle shall be equipped with or use a muffler cutout that can be operated from inside the car in this state." The penalty for violation is $25.

However, according to Joseph H. Braun, general counsel for the Chicago Motor club, the Illinois statutes on nuisances can be invoked to prosecute guilty drivers who might escape the motor vehicle code. Paragraph 143, section 56, chapter 38, of Cahill's 1931 Illinois revised statutes reads: "Whoever willfully disturbs the peace and quiet of any neighborhood or family by loud or unusual noises . . . shall be fined not exceeding $100."

Noise Is Outlawed.

Ordinances of most municipalities prohibit unmuffled automobile engines. The "uniform traffic code" passed by the Chicago council last year reads:

"Sec. 58. It shall be unlawful to operate a vehicle which makes unusually loud or unnecessary noise.

"Sec. 66. No vehicle shall be operated upon any street unless the same is provided with a muffler in efficient and actual working condition, and the use of a cutout is forbidden."

"The folks who live in the country," said Chief Collins, "are entitled to quiet as much as those who live in cities. Many of the rural residents selected their homes for quiet. Furthermore, the city motorists driving in the country are seeking peace and quiet. There's no excuse for an unmuffled motor anywhere except on a race track."

Lotus Beds Only 2 Hours from Chicago

The lotus beds of Grass lake, fifty-seven miles from the loop, are now in full bloom. The rare flowers rise from several acres of water at the end of a two hour drive from Chicago. The plants blossom for about six weeks, and the first buds opened this year in the middle of July.

Grass lake is one of the Fox river's chain of lakes just south of the Wisconsin line. THE TRIBUNE roadster, in making the trip last week, left Chicago in Milwaukee avenue and followed the Ill. 21 markers to Lake Villa, thence west to Ill. 59 and north to a group of billboards pointing down a gravel road to the lotus beds.

Takes Boat to See Lotus.

Rival boat owners have erected a confusion of placards with arrows directing to their respective landings. At one of these, picked at random, a ticket costing 40 cents admitted the reporter to a small power boat for a thirty minute cruise of the lake.

The cruise was through channels dredged about the shallow lake. The first few hundred yards from the landing tall grass grows on both sides of the channel.

A waft of a delicate and strange perfume drifted into the boat. At a bend in the channel a great field of large yellow flowers came into view. For approximately a half mile, it seemed, these beds were on both sides of the boat as far as the eye could see.

Lotus or Lily?

The flowers are from six to ten inches in diameter, each at the end of a stem that holds it two to four feet above the water. Their broad leaves also are supported above the water.

The plants are described in a booklet bearing the name of Col. A. V. Smith of Waukegan as the Egyptian lotus. Locally there are contentions that the flower is related to the Homeric lotus, which bore a fruit that caused sailors to forget home after they had tasted its sweetness. Botanists, however, describe the Grass lake beds merely as an unusually profuse display of an American lily.

EDUCATION OF DUNES HIGHWAY DRIVERS GOES ON

The Indiana highway police today will continue their campaign to educate motorists in proper driving on the Dunes highway and the new Dunes relief road. The purpose is to reduce hazards and to increase the traffic efficiency of the pavements. Chief Grover Garrott has issued the following basic rules:

1. All motorists proceeding on the Dunes highway, composed of four 10 foot lanes, must keep to the outside lane, except when passing another car. They are then permitted to use the second lane only. Drivers who cross the center line of the road face arrest.
2. All cars must bear 1932 state license plates. Proper lights must be maintained on all vehicles.
3. Drivers must not pass on hills or curves and must avoid cutting in and out of traffic.
4. Trucks using the highways must not be over 33 feet long, 8 feet wide, and 12 feet high. A combination of vehicles shall not exceed 40 feet in length.
5. Baggage and other equipment extending more than 6 inches from the left side of vehicles will not be allowed.

Last Sunday there were fifty-seven arrests in this campaign. Most of the defendants, mainly Chicagoans, paid fines of $1 plus $10.50 costs.

Tribune Auto Makes Tour of Clark Street

BY HAL FOUST.

THE TRIBUNE roadster drove south from Evanston in Clark street last Sunday, avoiding the familiar routes over the boulevard system or over widened Western or Ashland avenues in preference to the historic highland highway named after the revolutionary war hero, George Rogers Clark. The street has received publicity recently as merchants in certain sections have sought to change its name to the tinsel title of New York's Broadway.

From the city limits at Howard street, the tour angled south by east on a narrow brick pavement with a carline between an almost solid border of small retail stores that have grown up from a prairie within the memory of young men. Clark is on a slight elevation which made it a wagon trail from the village of Chicago a hundred years ago when everything east to the lake was swamp in the spring rains.

Various Nationalities.

Through Rogers Park and then Edgewater are occasional Swedish bakeries and German delicatessens, telling something of the neighborhoods. There are also a few kosher shops. At Lawrence avenue is the one time bright night spot, the Rainbow Gardens, across the street from it a cemetery.

The east side of Clark is again a cemetery south of Montrose avenue as the street skirts the western edge of Ravenswood. Near the Cubs baseball park at Addison street hawkers for garages and parking lots were active although it was still hours before game time. There were also "watch yer car, mister" racketeers seeking tips for the privilege of parking on public pavement at the curb.

At Diversey parkway, Broadway, formerly Evanston avenue, converged with Clark. It's a developed business center. Further south, at 2122, the tour passed the garage where seven gangsters were massacred in an unsolved slaying on St. Valentine's day of 1929.

Broadens Into a Plaza.

At Center street Clark broadened from a narrow car line thoroughfare of business into a plaza bordering Lincoln park, with its trees, shrubs, lawns, museums, exhibits, and monuments. There were a few tall new buildings and there were also some venerable mansions, with "furnished rooms" signs on their architecturally fine stone fronts. Crossing the wide pavement of La Salle street, a glance south saw the skyscraper Chicago Board of Trade building, approximately two and a half miles distant.

South of Lincoln park Clark street enters the near north side, with its heterogeneous population of artists, hobos, millionaires, and bootleggers, a neighborhood of growth so rapid that there are still mansions of its aristocratic past, slums of yesterday, and comfortable modern buildings of its future. On Clark are antique shops, book stores, dancing schools, and cafés with curtained windows and doors. The Newberry library, one of the best research sources in America, is across the street from Washington park, "Bug Square," where unemployed philosophers lecture from soap boxes to crowds that give part of their attention to feeding flocks of pigeons.

Into and Through Loop.

The Chicago river is spanned by a bridge built in a Carter Harrison administration. The upper level of Wacker drive is crossed with no evidence that there is a lower deck to the broad waterside boulevard. The loop is entered nine and a half miles from Howard street by the roadster's speedometer.

The roadster continued south in Clark street through the loop, passing the Randolph street Rialto, the outgrown County building and the aged Federal building that will soon be replaced by a new postoffice just west of the river.

South of the loop, where there were more antiquated buildings, Clark street rose to cross the Roosevelt road viaduct at grade, passed through a double row of truck loading platforms of railroad freight depots and continued south abutting a railroad embankment. At 18th court is the venerable St. John's church, founded in 1859. To the east could be seen the tottering apartment buildings of a poverty stricken Negro sector with vacant lots littered with rubbish and junk.

Pass Another Ball Park.

THE TRIBUNE roadster jogged west in 22d street and south in Wentworth avenue, the heart of Chinatown. Slant-eyed boys played games on the sidewalk. Merchant windows displayed oriental script so strange to occidentals.

South of Chinatown dark skinned men and women sat in chairs on the sidewalk or on the small porches of unpainted frame cottages. There were many Negroes also on the street. Near 36th street is a Jugo-Slavish American club. There are Italian restaurants. The White Sox ball park is at 35th street.

The neighborhood improved as the tour continued southward, finally running over Vincennes avenue and Halsted street to turn east in 95th street. Across a mile of vacant property were the tall smokestacks and tanks of industry on the Calumet river. In Ewing avenue smoke blackened cottages between small stores were on submerged lots that were never filled to meet the higher street level established in 1872. The tour entered Indiana on Indianapolis boulevard, the heaviest traveled highway serving Chicago.

The U. S. 20 markers were followed over their new routing through Whiting, East Chicago and Hammond, through miles of oil refineries and storage tanks into the city of 100,000 population that has risen with the steel industry from a waste of sand twenty-six years ago, Gary, Ind. To the east of Gary THE TRIBUNE roadster used the new Dunes relief road to watch the Indiana state police control traffic on the forty foot pavement that swings through wooded sand hills of virgin beauty before the billboards started to grow within the last few months.

The side streets of Gary, with rows of neat brick cottages, were used to return to Illinois over 15th avenue and 169th street through Hammond and through Dolton, Ill., on the Michigan City road. Families were lolling in Cook county forest preserve.

Halsted street was picked up in the southern end of the county and followed north through the city. Passing the world famous stockyards, there was only a faint trace of the odor that was a New York vaudeville joke for many years. Farther north, Mexican, Greek and Italian settlements were traversed.

At Halsted and Madison.

Maxwell street was clogged with Jewish venders hawking from store fronts, sidewalk stands and parked cars.

After crossing Goose island, Halsted was shaded for a few hundred feet by the steel skeleton of an elevated structure that when completed will carry Ogden avenue over the island. Just before reaching Diversey boulevard the roadster was jogged east to Clark street so as to enter Broadway without making a left turn.

Broadway, which once carried the descriptive name of Evanston avenue, was followed north between stores and apartment houses built in a former decade but still well kept. A couple of garages were in modern buildings. North of Montrose avenue the pavement widens and there are clusters of ornamental street lights. Thence to Wilson avenue and north of Lawrence avenue is the Uptown business district, stores large and small, and moving picture theaters.

At Devon, Broadway flows into Sheridan road. The boulevard, jammed with Sunday afternoon traffic, was used to Howard street to complete a circle trip of 137 miles.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

REPORTS MELROSE PARK TRAP.

Glen Ellyn, July 18.—I read your article in today's TRIBUNE in which you report that Mr. James P. Haynes of the Chicago Association of Commerce is going to fight the charge of speeding placed against him by an officer of a small village was a good one.

If we had more men like Mr. Haynes, who are in a position to fight the outrageous charges, it would be safe to go through our small towns at a snail's pace and not be accused of speeding.

I have been prompted to write this letter on account of the injustice done me in Melrose Park. I came through that town the other morning with my wife and baby. I had just started up from a stop light and had hardly gone a half a block when I was stopped by an officer, or rather two, in a police car.

They wanted to know what my hurry was and I certainly was dumbfounded when they accused me of going 37 miles per hour. As a matter of fact it takes me about two blocks to get up to 37 miles per hour. I tried to reason with them but to no avail.

This was about 7:20 in the morning. I had to wait until the judge got in at 8. Explaining to the judge that I was going about 22 miles per hour did no good; the officer had me charged with 37 and that was all there was to it. My fine was $3 and costs, or a total of $6.

If I had had the time I certainly would not have conceded so easily. A note in your Voice of Traffic on Sunday would tend to warn your readers of this speed trap.

WM. H. GROOS.

TRUCKS HURT PAVEMENT.

Chicago July 19.—It seems to me that the editorial columns of your paper ought to reflect the highway situation persistently until something is done to protect the taxpayer from the ultimate confiscation of his holdings to meet the expense of rebuilding these highways at a much greater expense than that expended already for a construction that has never been intended to carry the traffic that is now going over them—heavy trucks and transportation buses.

If the interstate commerce commission hasn't the power to do something to prevent this situation, then it should be given it. This heavy traffic should be compelled, through rating, to go over the steel rails laid on roadbeds built especially for that purpose by the railroads of the country, unless the scheme is in the air to abandon the latter to bring about more quickly the elimination of the farmers through excessive taxation for highway reconstruction and the absence of the right kind of transportation for their product. I admit I own a section of land that I now fear I'll have to let go for taxes. What do you say?

EDWARD MURRAY.

AND ANOTHER!

Chicago, July 11.—We believe that the thousands of motorists who read THE TRIBUNE would appreciate being advised through the columns of your paper of the existence of a speed trap on South Halsted street between 123d and 127th street.

The west side of the road is within the boundaries of the village of Calumet Park. Anything over twenty-five miles an hour is considered a source of revenue and a cash bond of ten dollars is demanded. The absence of warning signs is lightly brushed aside with the explanation that some motorist knocked them down.

We are three victims.

TAX DODGER.

Chicago, July 25.—Will some one tell me why there are five ot six thousand automobiles on the streets with either no license at all or with either the state or city license missing. I see them every day passing policemen and squad cars. I have traveled through 14 states, large and small cities, but nowhere did I see the violations of law as I do here in Chicago. There are several thousand cars and trucks on the streets of Chicago today with last year's license.

FARMER FIGHTS FARM BOARD IN PRICE PLEA

Taxpayers' Relief Groups Listed.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

"Help! Get the federal farm board off my back!"

This cry for assistance comes from G. C. Manning, a Nebraska farmer, who recently used a full page in the Central City Republican, Central City, Neb., to tell what he thinks about the farm board.

"Under the federal farm board régime I am in desperate financial straits," Farmer Manning stated. "Five bushels of my standard commodities are not worth a dollar lumped together.

"A bushel of wheat, a bushel of corn, a bushel of rye, a bushel of barley, and a bushel of oats are only worth 92 cents in Central City today. Now what do you think of federal farm board promises and the spending of $500,000,000 to make better prices for my commodities?

Buying Power Ruined.

"I don't know what you think, but I know what I think. I know my purchasing power has been destroyed. I know I cannot support industrial activity today. I know no man can pay indebtedness and taxes under such a program.

"I know the federal farm board has insurmountable power and has used it to destroy my business through ignorance and unprincipled lack of economic knowledge as to the laws of supply and demand. So I am asking for your help. I am not asking for relief. Get the federal farm board off my back. In the name of the old methods of distribution let my grain go unhindered into the marts of trade. It cannot do so with governmental interference a la federal farm board surplus, federal farm board stabilization, and federal farm board so-called orderly marketing."

The editor of the paper in which this plea appeared described Mr. Manning as "an outstanding farmer," saying: "Due to the fact that he is a tenant farmer his interests have always been solely agricultural rather than speculative in the price of land. In the seventeen years since coming to this county from Illinois he has resided upon but two farms. We mention this to call attention to his stability and businesslike methods."

Voice of Dirt Farmer.

Thus speaks one dirt farmer of a federal bureau that many leaders in the nation-wide campaign against tax eaters are denouncing as providing a heavy burden on the taxpayers. The farm bureau is but one of the countless bureaus and departments of federal, state, and local government now under fire by aroused taxpayers who are seeing their homes and jobs swept away under the sea of confiscatory taxation.

In all parts of the nation citizens are finding that the only way they can bring the political tax spenders to their senses is to organize and build up a voting power that will brook no opposition. As a guidance for citizens in Chicagoland there is included a list of organizations herewith that the citizen may join, either directly or indirectly. The leaders of these organizations are in a position to direct citizens to local associations if their own membership is not open to general membership.

ILLINOIS.

The National Organization for the Reduction of Governmental Expenditures [The Norpe, for short] coordinates the activities of member associations. It is located at 1 North La Salle street. Walter W. Williams, president of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce, is in charge of Norpe activities in Illinois.

The Chicago Association of Commerce, 1 North La Salle street.

Illinois Chamber of Commerce, 20 North Wacker drive. This chamber has some 200 member organizations in cities and towns of the state which any citizen may join or where he may get information as to local taxpayer organizations.

Kiwanis clubs, 520 North Michigan avenue. The secretary will give address of local clubs.

Chicago Rotary club, 112 West Randolph street.

Chicago Motor club, 66 East South Water street, participating in the national campaign of the American Automobile Association against oppressive taxation of motorists.

Illinois Manufacturers association, 120 South La Salle street.

Illinois Taxpayers' association, 223 Unity building, Bloomington. This association is organizing branches in the various counties.

Britons Buying More Stock of Yankee Firms

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 30.—A striking demonstration of foreign confidence in the dollar has returned. The demand for dollars here was outstandingly marked in the present week.

Large withdrawals of American funds from London are proceeding, with the result of a marked fall in the international value of sterling. Additional evidence of the change of sentiment towards the dollar is seen in the increasing preference of British interests for American common stocks. Following the cutting of British war loan interest to 3½ per cent, present prices of American securities are regarded as too low considering merits and prospects.

Buy Yankee Stocks.

Substantial buying of American securities by British interests, both professional and public, this week accounts to a considerable extent for the dollar's appreciation and sterling's adverse movement. Sterling shows a loss of over 5 cents for the week.

Conversion of the 10 billion dollar war loan was the biggest operation in Britain's financial history and it promises to be successful as, according to official announcement, only a small portion of the investors have hesitated to accept the plan of conversion. The present outlook suggests that by early autumn British government interest may stand at 3¾ or 3 per cent—the conversion 3½ per cent loan for the first time in history went over par this week.

Stock Prices Improve.

General stock exchange conditions appear to be improving. A strong feeling of optimism is abroad. Equities and commodities continue rising and the bulls are moving firmly and confidently on their feet again after a long sojourn in the background.

Conditions in the Lombard street money market are reduced to a state approaching stagnation. Credit continues in abundant supply at low rates.

Foreign government securities are active and mostly favorable. The latest developments in the United States regarding war debts has helped to improve the sentiment on European loans.

Dollars in Paris

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1932: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 30.—The rise of the dollar to the highest point since December, 1930, was the outstanding feature of the Paris market this week.

The dollar reached 25.5675, which is four above the gold point and considerable interest was aroused here on the fact that the heavy gold shipments which in recent months were eastward now are in the other direction. The dollar was heavily bought on the local money market and at the end of the week was commanding a premium of 4 centimes.

In this connection the Bank of France gold reserve dropped this week, although this was chiefly accounted for by heavy Swiss purchases. Gold is flowing to the United States from Canada, South America, and parts of Europe, but no appreciable movement from France so far has taken place.

U. S. GOLD STOCK INCREASES FOR MONTH OF JULY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 30.—For the first time since March our gold holdings in July increased, confirming the statements made by bankers in mid-June that the heavy withdrawals of the metal had ended. Imports at New York aggregated only $7,298,600, compared with $17,322,500 for exports, but offsetting this loss was a net decrease in earmarked gold of $48,236,600 and the receipt of $3,796,000 worth at San Francisco. The net gain from the foregoing sources was $47,008,700 to our gold stocks.

The change in the movement of gold this month followed a loss through shipments out of New York of $214,614,600 and an increase in earmarkings of $28,638,500 for June, the climax of an export movement which in seven months drained our supplies of more than $600,000,000 in gold. Foreign countries which reduced to minimum their balances here in their haste to withdraw gold are now adjusting their funds so as to take care of fall trade requirements.

ARMOUR CHIEF CALLS FREEST MARKET BEST

Sees Harm in Help by U. S. Agencies.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Although declining to make any predictions, T. G. Lee, president of Armour & Co., in a statement yesterday pointed out that the recent substantial advance in live stock prices was based on sound economic developments.

Taxation, he declared, is the chief stumbling block in the way of a return to prosperity. Mr. Lee also expressed the opinion that the independent and unsubsidized live stock market had stood the farmer-producers in better stead than had the cotton and grain markets into which the farm board has poured millions in its futile attempts to control prices.

The history of live stock prices during the last year he explained as an interesting study in the workings of the law of supply and demand.

"What has happened in the live stock and meat packing business in the last few years of extreme business depression," said Mr. Lee, "is significant of three very important factors which indicate perhaps clearer than ever before the mutual interest of farmers and packers in helping each other to make a living.

"First, every farmer who wanted to sell his live stock has been able to get spot cash for it whenever he sent it to market.

"Second, every pound of meat that has been produced from this live stock has been marketed so effectively that the channels of distribution from producer to consumer have been kept open without interruption or stagnation and without piling up any surpluses or letting any of it spoil.

Supply, Demand Market.

"Third, nothing, but the natural operation of supply and demand has determined the prices at which either live stock was bought from the farmer or meat was sold to the retail consumer."

Such a service to farmers and consumers during one of the most severe and widespread business depressions in history, he declared, constituted a real accomplishment.

"Let me remind you," he continued, "that during this period warehouses and elevators have been filled to overflowing with cotton, wheat and other farm commodities which no one would buy, although a government board, in an effort to stabilize prices, invested in these commodities hundreds of millions of dollars.

"However, in spite of the best efforts of the government board, the live stock market—unsubsidized and dependent primarily upon the success of the packer marketing system—held up from a price standpoint better than did the markets which had government aid."

Mr. Lee expressed willingness to comment on the recent fluctuations in live stock and meat prices, but he declined to make any predictions.

Supply Larger; Demand Smaller.

"Briefly," he said, "the reasons underlying the recent price advance are these:

"For many months the supply of meat which had to be sold was very large. During the last eight months the total production of meat from animals slaughtered in this country was slightly greater than for the same period of the previous year and only 2 per cent under the five year average, whereas during this period the consumer buying power of the country was the lowest in all our experience.

"Consequently, live stock and meat prices were very low because prices automatically move up or down according to the amount of meat which has to be moved into consumption and according to the buying power of the public.

"Aside from energetic salesmanship and extensive advertising, price is the all important factor in marketing meat.

Market Experts Surprised.

"Toward the end of June there was a decided letup in the heavy hog receipts coming to market. Contrary to expectations of nearly all students of hog production, including government experts, receipts fell off, materially lessening the supply of pork. Naturally, hog prices began to rise, and inasmuch as the smaller amount of pork available reduced the aggregate supply of all meats available, steer and lamb prices also picked up. The result is that we have had the most encouraging improvement in an important business index that has occurred in several years."

All this Mr. Lee found highly encouraging, and he said he hoped it was leading toward recovery, but he said he believed that a return to real prosperity would await solution of the tax problem.

WILLIAM FOX SUED FOR MILLION IN STOCK DEAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 30.—William Fox was sued for $1,000,000 in the Supreme court today on his guarantee for that sum that the Fox Theaters corporation would carry out the terms of a contract made in March, 1927, with Herbert Lubin for the purchase of 750,000 shares of the Roxy Cicrcuit, Inc., and $2,500,000 of the debentures of that corporation.

The purchase price fixed was $2,930,000, for which payments were to be made in yearly installments beginning two years after the purchase. Default in payment due last March is the basis of the suit.

The action was brought by the Chicago Title and Trust company, which recites that Mr. Lubin assigned a share in the payments to Arthur H. Sawyer and assigned the balance to his wife, Marie Lubin, after which both delivered their interests to the plaintiff.

IRVING TRUST TELLS PART IN INSULL SITUATION

New York, July 30.—(AP)—Officials of the Irving Trust company stated today that bank is not a creditor of the National Electric Power company or any subsidiaries for $13,004,300 despite published reports to that effect. In the course of a statement the bank said:

"The Irving Trust company is trustee in bankruptcy of the National Public Service corporation and the Electric Management and Engineering corporation, affiliated Insull companies, and as such trustee filed with the referee in bankruptcy claims against the National Electric Power company on an inter-company note of $13,004,500 and on certain inter-company open accounts in favor of the claimant corporations.

"These claims were filed by Irving Trust company solely in its capacity as trustee in bankruptcy and not as an individual creditor in its own behalf."

CHICAGO STOCKS ARE ERRATIC AT CLOSE OF WEEK

Share prices changed only slightly yesterday on the Chicago Stock exchange. There was some irregularity at the close but it was of a minor nature, little variation being shown from Friday's closing prices. Sales totaled 23,000 shares.

Commonwealth Edison closing at 64¼ was off ¼ from Friday's close. Swift International, Libby, Cities Service and Cord registered fractional losses.

Grigsby-Grunow gained ¼ on a 7,050 share turnover. Bendix was up ⅛. Borg-Warner remained unchanged at 6. Small gains appeared in United States Gypsum and Noblitt-Sparks.

Washington, D. C., July 30.—(AP)—Revenue freight loadings for the week ending July 23 were announced today by the American Railway association as totaling 501,130 cars. This was a decrease of 2,964 cars from the previous week and 241,351 cars under the corresponding week in 1931. BOND MARKET HOLDS STRENGTH IN FACE OF SALES FOR PROFIT

New York, July 30.—(AP)—Flurries of profit taking enlivened the brief session of the bond market today, but reactions were generally temporary and various issues again climbed to new high levels.

There was a substantial rally in German government loans, both the Reich 5½s and 7s advancing more than a point in the face of the important German election which is held tomorrow. British 5½s eased, as did loans of Japan and Australia. The Austrians recovered moderately.

Resistance to realizing was notable among many of the recently buoyant railroad obligations. Chicago and Northwestern 4¾s rallied after losing around a point. Gains were recorded by some loans of Baltimore and Ohio, Erie, St. Paul, Chesapeake and Ohio, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Southern railway. New York Central 5s were up 3 points at one time.

Loans of the communication companies were firm, with Western Union 6s and 6½s advancing about 2 points. Power and light company bonds were a trifle easier.

The industrials were somewhat quiet, but prices held close to the week's high levels. Shell Union Oil 5s resumed their progress, but some of the other petroleum bonds declined.

The United States government list was comparatively inactive with prices slightly under the highs of the week.

NEW YORK CLEARING HOUSE STATEMENT

New York, July 30. — (AP) — The weekly statement of the New York Clearing house shows: Total surplus and undivided profits, $923,186,000 [unchanged]; total net demand deposits [average], $11,162,000 [increase]; time deposits [average], $18,041,000 [increase]; clearings week ending today, $2,452,038; clearings week ending July 23, $2,285,479,052.

Bright Spots in Day's Business News

Consumption of steel in the United States now is at a much faster rate than production, the magazine, Steel, said.

A drop of 40 per cent in the country's bank suspensions was reported for the week ended July 23 by the American Banker.

Pathé Exchange, Inc., reported net profit for the 26 weeks ended July 22 totaled $2,146, against a net loss of $33,382 in the corresponding period of 1931.

The payment Friday of $5,000,000 in Detroit taxes was the greatest single collection since 1929, Treasurer C. L. Williams said.

At Williamsport, Pa., the Lycoming Manufacturing company reported a 103.2 per cent increase in foundry pourings for June over May. Auburn new car shipments for June increased 2,333 over May.

Steel operations in the Youngstown, O., district are expected to be 15 per cent of capacity in the coming week, compared with 13 per cent last week.

At Atlanta, Ga., it was said rising prices have increased the paper value of the 1931-'32 cotton crop by approximately $121,500,000 in the last thirty days.

Silk was one of the commodities to show considerable price improvement for the week. Raw silk quotations closed at New York 5 to 6 points higher.

More than 200 men have started work at the Duluth, Minn., plant of the American Steel and Wire company, with the first steel tapped at three open hearth furnaces. Operations are centered in the wire mill, with work to begin Monday in the other mills, according to L. C. Reis, general manager. Day and night shifts are maintained, with only scrap iron used for making ingots.

HOOVER BEGINS TO REORGANIZE SHIPPING BOARD

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 30.—[Special.]—The first step toward a reorganization of the shipping board as authorized by the economy law was taken by President Hoover today. He announced that hence forth the business of the board would be conducted by three members headed by T. V. O'Connor of New York, the present chairman. Three of the present members of the board will be dropped and one vacancy will not be filled.

The board as it is to be reconstituted this coming week will include O'Connor, S. S. Sandberg and Hutchison I. Cone. All three are now on the board. Those not reappointed are Albert H. Denton of Kansas, Jefferson Myers of Oregon and R. K. Smith of Louisiana. The vacancy was caused some months ago by the death of E. C. Plummer. Under the old law the board has seven members.

Ultimately the plan is to merge the shipping board into the department of commerce. Further legislation will be necessary to accomplish this after a recommendation goes to congress from the White House.

Just how many employés of the shipping board will be dropped at once was not disclosed.

TRIBUNE GUIDE FOR INVESTORS MAKES HISTORY

Queries Top 300,000 in 18 Years.

BY SCRUTATOR.

The Investors' Guide of THE TRIBUNE passed another milestone last week. The number of inquiries received from investors and answered by this department passed the 300,000 mark last Thursday. In addition, information and advice have been furnished to readers of THE TRIBUNE through the daily articles appearing in the financial section of this newspaper.

Moreover, within the last year a division of the department was created for the specific purpose of furnishing information concerning real estate bonds. This extension of service resulted from adverse conditions in the Chicago real estate financing field and THE TRIBUNE'S desire to offer holders of real estate securities the fullest information regarding such investments. More than 1,500 inquiries concerning real estate bonds have been answered thus far this year.

Guide Nearly 18 Years Old.

Almost exactly eighteen years ago THE TRIBUNE created the Investors' Guide to provide its readers with accurate information and impartial advice concerning investments. This service was the first of its kind in Chicago, if not in the country. It proved popular from the start and the department soon became nationally recognized as an authority on investment matters.

The Investors' Guide occupies a unique position, which has won the interest and confidence of investors. It has nothing to sell. It promotes no securities and offers no "tips" on the market. Its sole purpose is to help those who request its service. This service costs the inquirer only the postage stamp on the self-addressed envelope that he incloses with his inquiry. The vast number of inquiries is proof that the services are appreciated and utilized by a constantly increasing number of investors.

The year by year history of the Investors' Guide is interesting and instructive. It has gone through two booms and two depressions. It is a curious fact that more inquiries have been received during the current depression period than in boom times. The logical explanation seems to be that investors seek safety and exercise more care in hard times, whereas in boom times they take "tips" and seek speculative profits.

Records Since 1914.

The record of inquiries received and answered, beginning with the last half of 1914, follows:

1914	5,704	1923	16,230
1915	9,398	1924	14,626
1916	11,498	1925	14,554
1917	14,061	1926	13,253
1918	15,627	1927	14,512
1919	19,383	1928	16,377
1920	20,104	1929	20,571
1921	18,452	1930	21,449
1922	16,185	1931	23,928

Thus it will be seen that 1920, a depression year, established a high record for inquiries up to that time. With the ensuing recovery and boom period the number of inquiries gradually receded until 1927. The real estate boom began to fade out about that time, although the securities markets still were booming. Inquiries increased sharply in 1929, when the stock market collapsed, and they continued to mount in 1930 and 1931 as the current depression progressed. This year bids fair to set a new high mark, based on more than 14,000 inquiries received thus far. This total, however, does not include more than 2,000 inquiries concerning real estate bonds.

Why Await Bad Times?

This eighteen year record brings to mind a question: If investors seek information and advice in bad times, why shouldn't they also in good times? There is no doubt that if they had exercised the same caution and prudence during 1922 to 1929 that they did in 1920 and in the last two years they would not have contributed to the vast inflation of securities and they would have avoided much of the terrific losses that have been a prime cause of the present depression.

The Investors' Guide always has been a service designed primarily for small investors. The information that it dispenses consists of facts and opinions based on facts. There are no predictions or guesses. Where certain facts are not available, the replies to investors so state. But every effort is made to secure such information later and then inform the inquirer.

No attempt is made to aid speculators to get rich quick. Those who play the market frequently write to obtain information concerning companies in which they are interested and this information is furnished. But the Investors' Guide does not attempt to advise them how to speculate.

Who Questioners Are.

The inquiries that come to this department present a varied and ever-changing picture of the affairs of investors. Letters come in at the rate of 60 to 100 daily from business men, doctors, lawyers, bankers, teachers, workingmen, housewives — any one who has an investment problem to solve. In answering these inquiries during eighteen years, the department has accumulated a vast amount of information in addition to current data on active companies.

All letters are held in strict confidence. Most replies are sent by mail. A few that are of public interest are published on week days in THE TRIBUNE, but in such cases only the inquirer's initials are used—never the name. These published replies give facts, figures, and opinions on securities that are of current interest. Articles on matters of interest to investors in general are published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. These are

PRAISE SERVICE DONE BY INVESTORS' GUIDE FOR PUBLIC'S BENEFIT

THE TRIBUNE Investors' Guide service to investors and its coöperation with Chicago organizations to prevent the selling of fraudulent securities have inspired the following comment:

"Investors' Guide, Chicago TRIBUNE:

"One of the largest contributing factors to the widespread stock swindling in this country lies in the fact that the average investor is woefully ignorant of the fundamentals which go to make a safe security. Your newspaper was one of the first business organizations in the country to recognize that it would be a definite service to provide free financial information in investments to your readers.

"We follow your column carefully, and I wish to say that the information which you give to your vast number of inquirers is extremely beneficial. We want you to know that the Better Business bureau believes that this kind of service to the public is of inestimable value.

"CHICAGO BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU."

"Investors' Guide, CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

"We wish to congratulate you on the fine work that your department has rendered to the public since its inception, and on the efficient and capable manner in which inquiries concerning investments have been handled."

"The last three years have been very trying times for the small investor, who, for the most part, is uninformed as to what his security is or where information can be obtained. Your department has rendered inestimable assistance to holders of first mortgage bonds and to investors who have dealt with questionable security houses. No doubt great sums have been saved to investors.

"INVESTORS' PROTECTIVE BUREAU."

"CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

"We take this opportunity to commend you for the publicity given to the formation of bondholders' committees. The publication of the truth in connection with the creation and activities of these committees is particularly helpful in that it tends to curb the volume of receiverships. You give that type of service and publicity to the owners of real estate which is necessary to keep them informed during these changing conditions.

"CHICAGO REAL ESTATE BOARD."

"CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

"The great strength and value of your comments seem to spring from the fact that you are wholly independent and impartial in your appraisement. We have followed carefully your comments on the work of bondholders' committees. Bondholders are undoubtedly influenced by your comments and advice.

"CHICAGO TITLE AND TRUST COMPANY."

Attorney Michael Gesas, representing the company, proposed the organization of a Revell Liquidation corporation to dispose of the affairs of the company and pay off on the 70 per cent basis. The company's assets were classified as follows: Notes receivable, $239,984; accounts receivable, $20,690; merchandise, $59,000; machinery, $24,000, and cash in bank, $215,000.

SUES GILLETTE SAFETY RAZOR FOR $30,000,000

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 30.—A suit asking $30,000,000 damages from the Gillette Safety Razor company and nineteen of its officers and directors under provision of the Sherman anti-trust laws and the Clayton act was filed in the United States District court today by attorneys for the Trophy Tower Sales corporation, operators of razor blade vending machines of Cleveland, O.

The complaint charges a conspiracy between the Gillette company and the Autostrap Safety Razor company and their respective officers and directors to eliminate all competition between Gillette and Autostrop through the merger which took place in November, 1930, and in this way to suppress further competition with others in the razor blade business.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, N. Y., July 30.—The stock market finished the month with an imposing array of brand new highs. Volume was unusually heavy for a Saturday, approximating 900,000 shares, or nearly three times that of a week ago.

Net gains of the day were generally small, amounting to more than a fraction in the majority of cases, but they were sufficient, nevertheless, to keep the list pointing upward and further cement the feeling of confidence which has been gaining headway in the financial community for the last two weeks. It was the fourth successive day of the advance.

From the lowest point of the depression, reached on July 8, following a wave of bank failures throughout the country and a deluge of other unfavorable news, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE average for fifty stocks has climbed more than 40 per cent. The low for this average on July 8 was $33.93. Today it reached a high of $47.75, an advance of 40.8 per cent.

Brokers Are Puzzled.

Traders generally came down to business today expecting a week-end reaction due to realizing sales by those persuaded that the recovery had reached its limit for the time being at least. Brokers' letters overnight had warned, with few exceptions, of just such a probability. Many of them had advised customers to take their profits with the idea of buying back into the market at lower levels. Advice of that tenor was one of the chief obstacles the market found confronting it when it got under way for what probably was the severest test it has encountered since early in the week.

Evidently those out to support the list had anticipated just such an attack, however, and enough buying orders were poured in during the first half hour or so to counterbalance the realizing sales and keep the market on an even keel. Just how determined this support was could be seen from the large number of substantial blocks of high class stock which came out during the period of crisis.

Important Stocks Active.

Sales of 1,000 share lots of such issues as New York Central, Northern Pacific, Union Carbide, Pennsylvania railroad, and National Dairy Products appeared with great frequency on the tape. So spirited did the bidding wax at times that the sales for the first thirty minutes amounted to some 200,000 shares.

After the first hour the market slipped off a bit, but operations for the rise were resumed with vigor along toward the close, and final figures in the main were the best of the day. United States Steel common, old time leader of the list, came back with a whirlwind rush in the last thirty minutes, advancing at one time a full point above its previous closing level. The closing sale on the old bellwether was recorded at 28⅞, up ½ on the session.

ESTIMATE 10 BILLIONS ADDED TO STOCK VALUES ON UPTURN

New York, July 30.—(AP)—The rebound in security prices in the last few weeks has restored some $10,000,000,000 to the quoted value of securities traded in the New York markets, Wall street statisticians estimate.

While the total quoted value of listed securities is a highly theoretical value, for obviously not all of the securities could be sold at that price as a practical financial operation, this quoted value is vitally important to financial institutions, and in consequence to the general public, as well as to individual investors.

The importance of security values in matters of bank credit is manifest in the consolidated weekly reports of the reserve member banks in 101 leading cities. These banks comprise roughly half of the country's total banking resources. The latest statement, as of July 20, showed that of total loans of $11,028,000,000, almost half, or $4,614,000,000 represented loans against security collateral. And of total investments of $7,305,000,000, a substantial portion, or $4,107,000,000, was in U. S. government securities, but the remainder was in other miscellaneous issues.

PLAN EXTENSION OF GOODFRIEND BONDS 5 YEARS

Interest Rate Will Be 6 Per Cent.

BY AL CHASE.

Bondholders of the Goodfriend building, at the southwest corner of Lawrence and Lawndale avenues, have been notified by T. E. Williams, secretary of the bondholders' protective committee, that unanimous consent to the extension of the maturity date of the issue to Feb. 12, 1937, has been secured. This was effected, Mr. Williams states, by proper action of the committee on behalf of the bondholders, and H. H. Goodfriend, owner of the property, without any epense to the bondholders.

WALTER J. M'GUIRE.

Bonds, with proper coupons attached, are now ready for delivery, Mr. Williams states in the letter to the bondholders. The Goodfriend building occupies a site fronting 133 feet on Lawrence and 125 feet on Lawndale. It contains six stores and seven apartments.

Interest Rate Is 6%.

There were $54,000 bonds which matured on Feb. 15, 1932. The interest rate on the extended bonds will be 6 per cent, the first coupon to mature on Aug. 15. The owner agrees to reduce the indebtedness at the rate of $750 semi-annually by depositing that sum with the trustee to be used to pay and cancel bonds to be called by lot or by depositing with the trustee the equivalent in bonds for cancellation.

H. D. Pettibone is chairman of the bondholders' protective committe, which comprises Walter J. McGuire, H. E. Devereaux, Frederick J. Stebbins, Harold M. O'Brien, N. H. Dosker, G. L. Hughes, and C. A. Mueller.

Edward B. Lucius, chairman of the original bondholders' protective committee for the Commonwealth Trust and Savings bank, announces that F. A. Bach, receiver for the bank, has become a member of the committee. The other members are: Charles R. Fuller and Floyd G. Dana. Charles R. Jackson is secretary.

Fischer Apartments.

A decree of foreclosure has been entered and a date soon will be fixed for the sale of the Fischer apartments, at 7909 Normal avenue, according to Carlos A. Life, secretary of the bondholders' protective committee for bonds sold through the Citizens Trust and Savings bank. The reorganization plan provides for the placing of title with a trust company, which will execute a new first mortgage for a sum not in excess of that required to cover costs of foreclosure and reorganization.

The mortgagors already have conveyed their equity to a nominee of the committee and procured the release of the second mortgage. In lieu of any payment the plan contemplates the issuing to the mortgagors, Samuel N. Fischer and his wife, by the trust company, an option to purchase the property at an amount equivalent to the total amount of bonds outstanding and unpaid on Dec. 1, 1930, $121,900 with interest at 6 per cent from that date. This option runs for three years. Mr. Life states that all bonds must be deposited by Aug. 17 in order to participate in the benefits of the liquidating trust reorganization plan.

TRIBUNE GUIDE FOR INVESTORS MAKES HISTORY

Answers 300,000 Queries in Eighteen Years.

written with the aim of instructing the investing public in the things it needs to know. The replies to inquiries and the published articles are written simply for the average investor and reader, rather than in the technical language of the financier.

Strives Against Frauds.

In addition to the information which is given about stocks and bonds of general circulation, the Investors' Guide has several other functions. It coöperates with reputable dealers, with state authorities, and with various organizations in Chicago and other cities to protect investors against loss through fraud. From time to time when some questionable promotion has been particularly active an article has been published warning investors against it.

Other articles have exposed bucket shops and tipster sheets. These services are designed to stimulate the buying of sound securities. The department also assists in scrutinizing financial advertising offered to THE TRIBUNE in furtherance of the aim to maintain the confidence of the reading public.

Here's Typical Letter.

That thousands of TRIBUNE readers have found the service helpful is attested by the fact that many of the inquiries come from people who have written before. Some even state that they never make an investment without first consulting the Investors' Guide. A letter received last week is typical.

"I thank you sincerely for the trouble and time it must have cost you to answer my recent inquiries," it reads. "Much of the information you gave was of such recent date that it could not have been obtained by you by merely turning over the leaves of a manual. The service, rendered to one entirely unknown to you and from whom you could have no possible hope of return, is of a piece with the spirit of disinterested and magnificent public service which has for years past distinguished THE TRIBUNE and those who are responsible for its management."

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer. Answers of public interest will be published; those not of general interest will be mailed if stamped, self-addressed envelope is inclosed. Address letters to Investors' Guide. Answers are based upon information which The Tribune believes correct, but beyond care in securing it The Tribune assumes no responsibility.

Stock Selling on Good News.

Many investors and small speculators have been disappointed and mystified when the prices of certain stocks have declined following announcement of some cheerful bit of news regarding the companies represented. On its face, such action seems entirely illogical. Yet it is quite common for the financial newspaper writers to report that "selling on good news" occurred in a certain stock or stocks.

The explanation for this occurrence is simple and at the same time it offers a warning. As everybody knows, most corporations are conducted by staffs of officers and directors. These men are intimately familiar with a company's affairs and usually they are close students of general conditions. Thus, they know whether the company is progressing or retrogressing, whether it is holding its position in its particular industry or improving it, or whether it is being outstripped.

These men know almost from day to day how the company's volume of business and profits are running. It is their business to direct its affairs in a way to assure profits, which is to their own benefit because usually they are the largest individual stockholders. Moreover, it is their business to know the financial needs of the company and, finally, they must judge the situation of the particular field in which the company is engaged and also the general business situation.

These men may or may not speculate. But if they do, what would be more natural than for them to buy early when a business is prospering and sell later on at a profit when the favorable situation of the company becomes more generally known and demand for the stock sends prices up? Even if the officers and directors do not speculate, there are other large stockholders who do and who keep closely informed concerning the company's affairs.

Then, too, there are the professional traders who follow a stock up or down. They have learned that "insiders" in a company quite often are willing to take profits when good news comes out and so they sell short in this event, which is an added influence to a decline in price. These two kinds of selling are likely to more than offset buying by small investors and speculators who are impressed by good news, which is "water over the dam" for the sellers.

Thus, those who buy a company's stock because it has declared an extra dividend, or is merging with another concern, or is bringing out some new product, are taking a chance that those with more intimate and expert knowledge are unwilling to take. It is advisable for the amateur to know a great deal about a company before buying [illegible] trouble to inform himself. The stock exchanges realize the importance of such information and require companies whose stocks are listed to report periodically the most vital facts concerning earnings, financial condition, [illegible] available to the investor and should be used as a basis for buying stock rather [illegible] news.

FARMER ATTACKS FARM BOARD IN PRICE APPEAL

Taxpayers' Fighting Groups Listed.

a guide for groups of taxpayers in any community. There fifty taxpayers met at the courthouse and formed the Cowlitz County Taxpayers' association. They announced the following as their purpose.

"1. To coöperate with all organizations, persons, and public officials to effect economy and efficiency in governmental activities.

"2. To emphasize to the people of the county and to all public officials the importance of keeping governmental expenses within the means of communities to pay and to further emphasize the danger to our prosperity of permitting such expenses to exceed a reasonable ratio to the collective earnings of the community.

"3. To coördinate the programs of the various localities of the county in dealing with taxation problems of other than purely local nature.

"4. To conduct at all times a vigorous and aggressive campaign before all tax levying, tax spending and legislative bodies for the purpose of reducing cost of government and promoting its efficiency."

St. Louis Offers Example.

St. Louis furnishes an example of what an active organization can do on behalf of the taxpayers. The Public, Inc., recently formed to conduct a drive for reduced governmental costs and taxes, last week broadcast in the newspapers of the Missouri metropolis the answers to ten questions sent candidates for the nomination for United States senate and house. These questions were directed at finding the position of these candidates on economy and the answers furnished will serve to guide the citizens when they go to the polls. The St. Louis papers devoted several columns to the positions taken by the candidates and if the taxpayers refuse to take advantage of their opportunity to choose the right men they can only blame themselves if their taxes are not cut.

Determination to go ahead relentlessly in their fight to cut federal expenditures were announced last week by the National Economy league a meeting at New York and by the United States chamber of commerce at Washington. Maj. Gen. James Harbord warned members of the first named group that unless a halt is called to raids on the federal treasury by former service men the United States will be paying 2 billion dollars annually to veterans and their dependents by 1945.

Press Milwaukee Fight.

In Milwaukee Henry H. Otjen, chairman of the taxpayers' advisory council, warned the citizens of his town that the cost of government must come down. He said salary cuts passed by the common council were inadequate and added: "This 10 per cent is merely a gesture and does not reduce the cost of government or amount of money being spent by the city. It still means that your 1933 tax is going to be from $5 to $10 per $1,000 higher."

GRAIN TRADERS IGNORE NEWS AT WEEK'S END

Wheat Supply Figures Are Issued.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Wheat traders paid little attention to the general run of the news Saturday. Evening up operations were under way and with the Liverpool and Winnipeg markets closed Monday there was little disposition shown to take a decided stand on either side pending further developments.

Speculative interest was much lighter than earlier in the week and the wheat market was easily influenced. Prices held within a range of around 1c and closed ⅛@¼c lower with the July finishing at 50¼c, while the September was 51⅜@51½c, and December, 54⅝@54¾c. Trading against the weekly offers furnished a liberal part of the business during the day.

Crop News Bullish.

There was fairly active buying at one time of the Miller-Bennett crop report which estimated the aggregate wheat crop at 699,000,000 bu, showing a reduction of 38,000,000 bu from the government July 1 figures, and compared with 894,000,000 bu harvested last year. However, outside buying failed to follow the upturn which put the September to 52¼c, and later there was selling on an estimate that Minneapolis would probably have around 200 cars of new spring wheat Monday, causing a break to 51¼c.

There was talk of extremely sensational crop reports from the Canadian northwest, but they were not given to the trade. No rain was shown in the prairie provinces and weather remains dry and hot and it is feared in some quarters that a further reduction in estimated wheat yields will be necessary unless this condition changes. Winnipeg was heavy and closed ¾@⅞c lower with October at 59⅝c in Canadian funds, while Liverpool showed independent weakness and was off ¾@⅞c on the active deliveries with October at 55⅞c.

Export Demand Slow.

Despite delay in harvesting in Europe the foreign demand for North American wheat remains relatively slow and only moderate amounts of Manitobas and hard winters were reported as taken Saturday. Foreigners are said to be in no hurry to buy freely for forward shipment owing to the large stocks now in sight.

According to recent reports world's import requirements of wheat for the 1932-'33 season will be about the same as the previous year when they were 778,000,000 bu, as indicated by world's shipments. The aggregate clearances last season were only 138,000,000 bu in excess of the estimated carryover on July 1 this year.

World's shipments of wheat during the last 9 years have shown a wide range, while there has been an almost steady increase in the world's carryover at the end of the season. Comparisons follow:

	World's shipments, season.	Carry-over July 1.
1931-'32	778,000,000	640,000,000
1930-'31	785,000,000	654,000,000
1929-'30	636,000,000	615,000,000
1928-'29	915,000,000	443,000,000
1927-'28	806,000,000	347,000,000
1926-'27	847,000,000	275,000,000
1925-'26	671,000,000	291,000,000
1924-'25	767,000,000	349,000,000
1923-'24	807,000,000	305,000,000
Average	778,000,000	435,000,000

Corn Irregular.

Deferred deliveries of corn showed a relatively firm undertone, predicted rains failing to materialize, and the weekly forecast, while suggesting showers at times, suggested the possibility of temperatures somewhat above normal. Trade was largely of a local character. The July was off ¼c at the last at 30¾c, while the deferred futures were unchanged to ⅛c higher, September closing at 32¼c and December at 32¾@32⅞c. Country offerings were small, with 28,000 bu booked to arrive. E. H. Miller estimated the crop at 2,995,000 bu, or the same as the government July 1 returns and compared with 2,558,000 bu harvested last year.

Cash oats were in active demand, a house with northwestern connections taking the offerings in the spot market. Receipts were 188 cars, and it is expected that Monday's offerings will be liberal. Futures held within narrow limits and closed ⅛@¼c lower, with July, 16⅝c; September, 17¾c, and December, 20⅜@20½c. The seaboard reported export demand in evidence, but no sales were claimed. The Miller report suggested a yield of 1,254,000,000 bu, or 37,000,000 bu more than the government figures of July 1 and compared with 1,112,000,000 bu harvested last year.

Rye was somewhat unsettled, with the finish unchanged to ⅛c higher. July was 32½c; September, 33¼c, and December, 36⅝c at the last.

Donovan's Crop Report on Northwest Yields

H. C. Donovan, Logan and Bryan crop expert, on his return yesterday from covering the American and Canadian northwestern wheat territory, says: "Condition of wheat is an average to better in the northern sections of Saskatchewan, most of Alberta and Manitoba. There is, however, 10,000,000 acres mostly in southern Saskatchewan and also a considerable acreage in North Dakota that is of poor promise from damage due to drought and heat which continued almost all through the season. Grasshopper damage so far light and rust unimportant. Harvesting has by now advanced to and across the boundary line and farmers in all sections are intending to put forth every endeavor to hold for higher prices."

SPRING WHEAT LOSS

A sharp reduction in the spring wheat crop and a small loss in winter wheat and a cut of 172,000,000 bushels in the corn estimate, as compared with July returns, is given by the August report of J. E. Bennett-E. H. Miller. Reductions are due mainly to heat and drought. Comparisons with the last three ciphers omitted follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Wheat traders at the close were inclined to the belief that lower prices might be made early on Monday followed by an upturn. Traders were liberal buyers of bids after the close and the underlying sentiment is bullish, but has become strikingly apparent in the last two days that more outside speculative buying is necessary and export business should increase if there is to be a good bull market. Action oft he market the last couple of days has been disappointing to the bull leaders.

There was said to be some selling of Chicago wheat futures in anticipation of receipts of 200 cars of new wheat at Minneapolis on Monday. Receipts there on Saturday were 90 cars. This is an unusually early run of new wheat. It is made possible by the harvest being one to two weeks earlier than the average.

Reports from Kansas City said that the farm board interest were selling July wheat in that market.

One of the largest of Chicago cash handlers is said to be over on the bull side of wheat due to unfavorable reports on the crop from their houses in western Canada.

World shipments of wheat are small and supplies on ocean passage have steadily decreased since May 23. Consuming countries are apparently awaiting the movement of new home grown wheat which keeps them from buying foreign wheat at this time, says Broomhall.

The Liverpool grain and cotton markets and the Winnipeg grain market will be closed on Monday.

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

A moderate export business was reported Saturday in Manitoba and hard winter wheat with total sales in all positions estimated around 400,000 bu. There was also foreign interest in oats and barley, but no business as indicated in reports from the seaboard.

Chicago handlers sold 22,000 bu wheat; 11,000 bu corn; 40,000 bu oats, and 2,000 bu barley to the domestic trade with 250,000 bu wheat sold to go to store. Charters were for 100,000 bu corn to Buffalo. Purchases to arrive aggregated 37,000 bu wheat; 28,000 bu corn, and 121,000 bu oats.

Little change was shown in the basis in the local cash wheat market with No. 1 red ½@¾c over September; No. 1 hard, ⅝@1c over; No. 2 red, ¼@½c over; No. 2 hard, ½@¾c over; No. 2 yellow hard, September to ¼c over and No. 2 mixed, September price to ½c under.

Country offerings of corn to arrive were smaller, and with a fair demand the basis in the sample market was steady. No. 2 mixed was quoted at ¼@½c over September while No. 2 yellow and white was ⅝c over the future. No. 3 yellow sold at ¼c over the September.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 100 cars; corn, 109 cars; oats, 193 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 16 cars.

SMALL INTEREST IN COTTON

Cotton markets, although quiet, with price ranges small, displayed a good undertone, considering the weakness in grains. Apparently they drew their strength from the stock market, and the close on futures in Chicago was 1 to 3 points net higher, with other markets up 4 to 7 points.

Spots in New York were 5 points higher at 6.5c, with New Orleans unchanged at 5.85c, Galveston 5.75c, and Houston 5.70c. Liverpool was closed for the bank holiday. Light rains were reported in parts of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, and North Carolina. Temperatures were 100 in Texas, and forecast for showers. Cotton goods markets were fairly active at higher prices. Prices follow:

HIDE FUTURES HIGHER

The upward price movement was resumed in raw hide futures the last week, accompanied by expanded trade and outside participation, and encouraged by the week's advances in securities and commodities.

Domestic hide prices were firm during the week at 5½c for basic grades, a recovery of almost 45 per cent since the start of the month. Top yesterday, $6.50; average, $5.60.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 12,000; hogs, 27,000; sheep, 13,000.

Swine got another setback on the week-end session. Heaviest grades finished at the lowest prices in more than a month's time. Selling was done on a steady to 10c lower basis yesterday, but compared with the high point last Monday light weights are off 25@35c and heavy hogs 40@60c, butcher grades exceeding 275 lbs in weight showing the brunt of the week's decline. The top for the day at $4.80 was paid for light butchers. No fancy light were offered. The general average slid down 5c more to $4.25, showing 40c loss since Monday.

Advance Early in Week.

All live stock advanced in value during the forepart of the week. Hogs slipped after midweek, but cattle and lambs held most of the earlier strength. Liberal supplies of extremey heavy hogs blocked the way up after the middle of the week in spite of the many encouragng reports from the wholesale trade and the better eastern outlet for swine.

Total hog receipts were a trifle larger than a week ago, but eastern houses took out 14 per cent of the arrivals against 8 per cent the preceding week. The drop in temperatures expended consumer demand for pork, boosting fresh loins 2c on the wholesale trade, but this cut is still selling 8c per pound under the high point of July.

Cattle at Year's Best.

Beef cattle during the week rose to the highest levels of the year, top classes showing the sharpest gains on all sessions. An increase in the proportion of plainer canner grades, which is seasonal at this time, drove some of the poorer classes of cattle into lower ground as the week progressed and at the close the top and bottom prices showed the widest spread in five months, with the range wider than in July, 1931.

A tendency to spread out the price range was also reported in the wholesale market for beef where poorer cuts were discounted and top grades marked up during the week. Poorest grades of beef carcasses are selling 3c per pound lower than a month ago while top grades show 2c advance. The week's general average price of live steers at $8.00 stands within 25c of the highest weekly average since last November.

Prime 1,445 lb. beef steers reached $9.75 the top of the market here Wednesday. They were owned by O. M. Bloyer, Carroll county, Ill., and cost him $6.25 last October when they averaged 900 lbs. direct from Montana range teritory. The forty-four head brought the owner $6,200. Similar weights and quality at the middle of last month topped the market at $7.65 paying a total sum of $4,900.

Lamb Market Strong.

The lamb market held on to enough of the gains scored early in the week to boost the general average price to $5.65, which is 25c above the previous week. Eastern demand was light, but supplies were also short and are running far below normal for this season of the year. Range lambs sold for slaughter up to $6.85 early in the week and top natives reached $6.60. Wholesale quotations for dressed lamb carcasses were more inclined to fluctuate early, but toward the close the market became more stable.

Country buyers are making inquiries about feeding lambs and intimate that they are willing to buy up to $4.00 and slightly above. A few suitable range offerings have gone out at $4.25@4.75 for finishing in cornbelt feed lots. However, few of the range lambs are coming in feeder flesh and most of the culls are fleshy enough to sell for slaughter 50c above the price country buyers are willing to pay.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 12,000 cattle, 27,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 7,129 cattle, 22,707 hogs, and 8,006 sheep a week ago, and 15,997 cattle, 33,535 hogs, and 17,899 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 37,000 cattle, 102,000 hogs, and 60,000 sheep, against 44,372 cattle, 95,498 hogs, and 57,420 sheep a year ago, and 28,305 cattle, 114,895 hogs, and 57,206 sheep two years ago.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, July 30.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil was quiet with sales of only one lot. Prices were steady but in absence of business showed little variation with the market closing generally unchanged to 1 point net higher. Crude oil was 3¼c nominal in the southeast, 3¼@3⅜c in the valley and nominal in Texas. Bleachable spot closed 3.90c, September, 4.11c, December, 4.20c, January, 4.28c, March, 4.35c.

NEW COMMITTEE OF REALTORS TO KEEP UP WAR ON HIGH TAXES

To continue the effort for lower taxes and laws more equitable to real estate a newly appointed committee of the Chicago Real Estate board has undertaken a series of studies. As a result of these a program will be developed for presentation at the session of the Illinois legislature which meets in January, 1933.

Lester W. Porter is chairman of the committee appointed by President J. Soule Warterfield. The committee members are Newton C. Farr, Mark Levy, J. J. Fischer, Percy Wilson, Arthur Kruggel, Clarence O. Rosen, and Harry N. Lorish.

The committee expects to continue the past work of the board in an effort to lift a part of the heavy tax burden borne by real estate during the last few years, a large percentage of which is unpaid.

Newton C. Farr was appointed chairman of a subcommittee to study the effect of the proposed relief bond issue upon real estate taxes. Mark Levy was appointed chairman of a subcommittee to determine the changes in Illinois corporation laws affecting real estate.

Special assessments and the requirements to relieve the evils which have grown up in this form of taxation will be investigated by a special committee headed by Percy Wilson.

Banks and banking laws from the standpoint of their connection with real estate will be the subject of a survey by a subcommittee under Chairman Porter.

Louis K. Boysen Outlines Scope of Federal Home Loan Bank Act

BANKER GIVES DETAILS OF NEW FEDERAL LAW

N. W. Professor Called Its Author.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

LOUIS K. BOYSEN.
[U. & U. Photo.]

Uncle Sam's new federal home loan bank act was practically drafted by the building and loan associations, with member stockholders largely limited to that class of organizations though insurance companies and savings banks are included, according to Louis K. Boysen, former president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, now chairman of its legislative committee, and vice president of the First Union Trust and Savings bank. He adds, however, that it's not expected that savings banks and risk concerns will find the act very practicable for their purposes.

Confirming Mr. Boysen's statement, it was announced for the first time by the United States Building and Loan league, national group of building and loan associations, that Morton Bodfish, its executive manager and professor of economics and real estate at Northwestern university, is the author of the text of the new federal act.

"National banks, trust companies, and other banking institutions are specifically excluded from membership," said Mr. Boysen. "The bill undoubtedly will be of material advantage to building and loan associations, as it permits these institutions to borrow from the local Federal Home Loan bank on their mortgages to the extent of 30 to 40 per cent of the present value of the security."

Eleventh Hour Wedges.

At the eleventh hour two wedges were driven into the home loan bank bill, neither of which is considered with much favor by the building and loan associations, Mr. Boysen declared.

"Any home owner who comes within the limits of this act and who is unable to obtain mortgage money from any other source may obtain the same from any bank organized under this act," he said, "provided that this subsection shall not be effective when the federal government has had its stock retired.

"This clause enables borrowers to obtain direct relief if the regular machinery leaves them out in the cold. Attempts will, of course, be made by many home owners to secure direct relief, and it'll be interesting to watch the evolution of this feature so foreign to the general idea of the act

Another Provision.

"The other wedge is section five of the act which provides that no institution shall be admitted to or retained in membership if the combined total of the amounts paid to it for interest, commission, bonus, discount, premium, and other similar charges, less a proper deduction for all dividends, refunds, and cash credits of all kinds, creates an actual net cost to the home owner in excess of the maximum legal rate of interest, etc.

"This doesn't apply to mortgages made prior to the passage of this act. It does, however, provide for all mortgages made hereafter and it'll have the effect of narrowing the profit of building and loan associations and other members to a slim margin."

Mr. Boysen then outlined the scope, personnel, purpose, and operation of the new act.

"The federal home loan bank bill provides for the creation of from eight to twelve regional banks organized primarily to make loans to members on real estate mortgage collateral," he said. "The act provides for an appropriation of not over $300,000 for organization expenses.

Will Select Five.

"The President is now conferring with his cabinet to select the five citizens of the United States who are best equipped to constitute the federal home loan bank board, which, of course, will be located at Washington

"Each member of the Federal Home Loan Bank board will have to devote his entire time to the business of that body. He'll get a salary of $9,000 for the fiscal year of 1933 and $10,000 a year for the balance of his term, which varies from two to six years. The President will designate one of the members as chairman of the board, who will be its chief executive.

"The first duty of the board will be to divide the United States, Porto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Alaska, and Hawaii into not less than eight nor more than twelve districts. A Federal Home Loan bank is to be established in each district, presumably in the most important city in that district. The name of the bank will be the Federal Home Loan Bank of Chicago, or New York, etc., as the case may be.

$5,000,000 Minimum Capital.

"The next important act of the board is to determine, with the approval of the secretary of the treasury, the minimum capital of each bank, which shall not be less than $5,000,000. The board is to open books in each district for subscription to the capital stock of the local bank. If at the end of thirty days the minimum amount of capital is not subscribed by organizations that wish to become members, then the secretary of the treasury is to subscribe on behalf of the United States for the balance.

"The total amount which may be thus subscribed by the United States is $125,000,000, which is to be furnished through the Reconstruction Finance corporation. It's fair to presume that most of the original capital thus will be furnished by the United States. It's expected that the stock owned by the United States gradually will be replaced by member stock.

"The local stockholders of these federal home loan banks will be generally limited to building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, coöperative banks, homestead associations, insurance companies, and savings banks. Before any of these organizations can avail themselves of the use of their local federal home loan bank they must subscribe for stock to the extent of 1 per cent of their outstanding home mortgages. The minimum stock subscription of a member is $1,500.

Eleven Directors.

"The management of each Federal Home Loan bank is to be vested in a board of eleven directors, all of whom must be citizens of the United States and bona fide residents of the district. Two of these directors are to be appointed by the Federal Home Loan Bank board, the other nine are to be selected by members provided the membership stock subscribed for is not less than $1,000,000.

"The Federal Home Loan Bank board will designate two of the directors of each bank as chairman and vice chairman respectively. None of these directors will draw any salaries, but may be paid a reasonable compensation for the time required of them and their necessary expenses in the performance of their duties.

2% Cumulative Dividend.

"If the membership subscription to the capital stock of a Federal Home Loan bank at any time drops below $1,000,000, the Federal Home Loan Bank board at Washington will make appointments of all directors where vacancies are to be filled. All stock subscribed for by the United States shall first be entitled to a 2 per cent cumulative dividend. When that has been earned all stock shall share equally in the dividends.

"Each Federal Home Loan bank is empowered to lend money to its members on home mortgage collateral. Such advances shall be made upon the note or obligation of the member, and the note, Federal Home Loan Bank stock, and the collateral are to constitute the security for all indebtedness of the member to the Federal Home Loan bank. At no time is a bank to lend a member more than twelve times the amount paid in by such member for capital stock. In other words, if a member owns $10,000 of stock in the bank, he may borrow up to $120,000 on acceptable collateral.

"No home mortgage is to be accepted as collateral security if it has more than 15 years to run to maturity, or if the value of the property exceeds $20,000, or if the mortgage is past due more than six months when presented. These restrictions will, of course, be further amplified by rules that will be later established by the Federal Home Loan Bank board.

Regarding Values.

"Values of the real estate shall be as of the time the advance is made, and shall be established by such certificate of valuation as is required by the bank or such other evidence as the Federal Home Loan Bank board may require. By a home mortgage is meant a first mortgage on real estate in fee simple, or a leasehold under a renewable lease for not less than ninety-nine years, and upon which is located a dwelling for not more than three families.

"The advances that the Federal Home Loan bank can make are subject to the following restrictions:

"If secured by an amortized mortgage made for an original term of eight years to a maximum of fifteen years, the advance may be for an amount not in excess of 60 per cent of the unpaid part of the mortgage, but the advance must in no case exceed 40 per cent of the present value of the security.

A Few Illustrations.

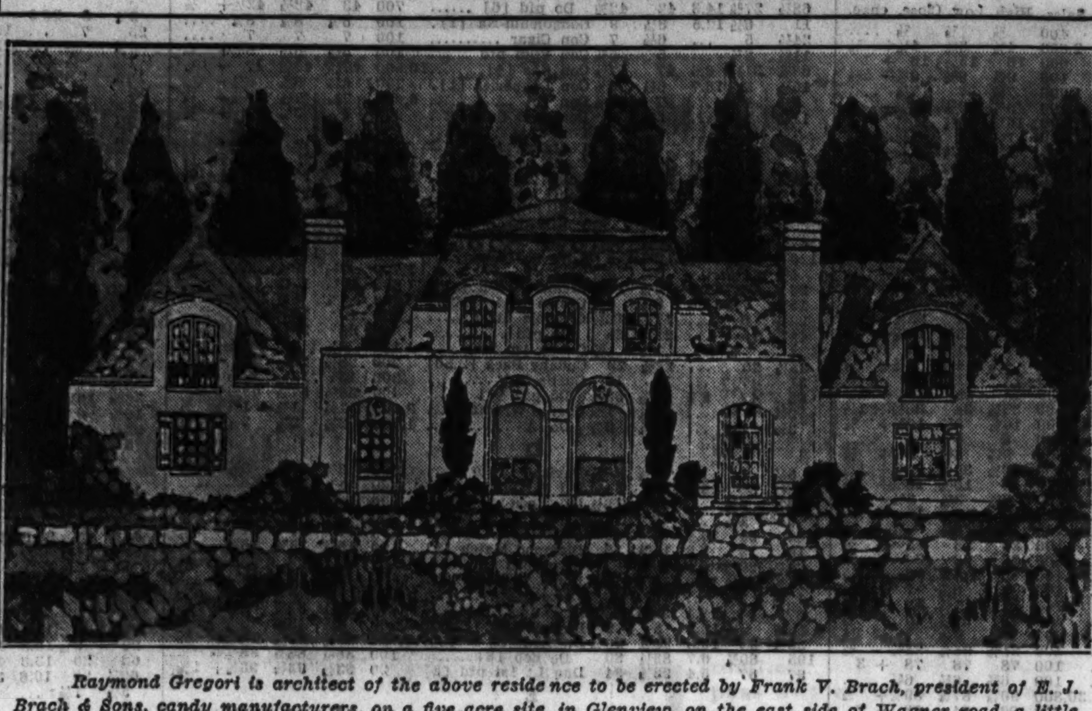
"The question of the amount of advancement is so important that I think it advisable to give a few illustrations. Let us take a $10,000 mortgage made in 1929 which has during the last three years been amortized to $9,000. Since the mortgage was made the security has shrunk in value from $18,000 to $10,000. The 60 per cent factor would justify an advance of 60 per cent of $9,000 or $5,400, but the 40 per cent limit of the present valuation would cut the advancement to 40 per cent of $10,000 or $4,000.

"If a member tenders the ordinary home mortgage which has no amortization the advancement must not be in excess of 50 per cent of the unpaid principal of the mortgage, which in turn must not exceed 30 per cent of the present value of the security. Let us illustrate with a five year mortgage for $10,000 made in 1929 on a home worth at that time $20,000, now reduced in value to $12,000. The 50 per cent factor would justify an advance of $5,000 on the mortgage, but the 30 per cent limit of present value, which is $12,000, would cut the advance down to $3,600."

Federal Grain Service Leases Wabash Ave. Space

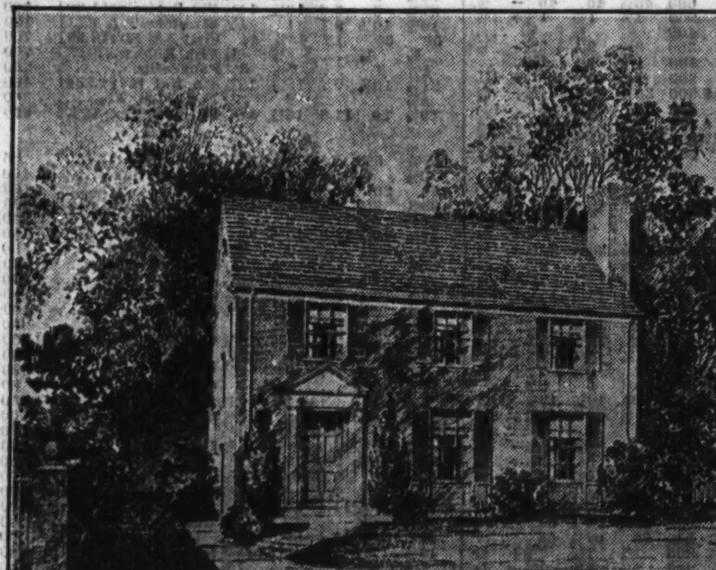
The grain inspection division of the United States department of agriculture has leased space in the Congress Bank building, 506 South Wabash avenue. Arthur L. Hellyer, associated with Philip F. W. Peck, negotiated the deal.

ON A SUGAR FOUNDATION



Raymond Gregori is architect of the above residence to be erected by Frank V. Brach, president of E. J. Brach & Sons, candy manufacturers, on a five acre site in Glenview, on the east side of Wagner road, a little south of Lake street. The design is French. It'll have eight rooms and three baths. The exterior walls will be of common brick, painted white, with plate glass windows and blue wood shingle roof. There'll be a squash court, swimming pool, etc., on the grounds. The site was purchased two weeks ago from Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Everett for a reported $8,500, through Wyatt & Coons.

YANKEE HOME FOR OAK PARK



This early American type house is being erected on East avenue, between Berkshire and Greenfield, in Oak Park, for C. J. Gates Jr., by the home construction department of Sears, Roebuck & Co. The lot is 50x150. The exterior walls will be of dark red face brick, ivory trim, green shutters and variegated colored asbestos shingle roof. Windows will be of plate glass. It'll have three bedrooms. Occupancy is set for Oct. 1.

REAL ESTATE BOND SERVICE

Inquiries must be accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope for personal reply. Answers are based on information received from outside sources and, beyond care in securing it, The Tribune assumes no responsibility. Inquiries should be addressed to the Real Estate Bond Service, Chicago Tribune. Information should not be asked for more than one issue at a time. Give the name of the underwriter and the full title of the bond.

Arwin Apartments.

Will you kindly tell me the status of the Arwin apartment bonds?
D. A. McL.

L. T. Kelley, secretary of the bondholders' protective committee for De Wolf & Co., Inc., which underwrote the bonds, makes this brief comment: "Arwin issue has recently defaulted and bonds have been called for deposit. Bill for foreclosure is being prepared."

Crawford County Farms Company.

Can you give me any information regarding the Crawford County Farms company 7 per cent first mortgage gold bonds, due Nov. 1, 1933. This loan is the direct obligation of the Crawford County Farms company, a Wisconsin corporation capitalized at $250,000. Interest defaulted in May, 1931.
M. S. A.

R. D. Gordon of Bartlett & Gordon, Inc., investment firm of Chicago, writes as follows: "The bonds have been in default for over a year. The farm is being kept in operation, although revenues are not quite sufficient to pay the actual labor charges. A reorganization scheme was proposed some time ago, but has not been carried out, due to the fact that until the farm can at least make its operating expenses it will be unwise to ask the bondholders to subordinate their first mortgage to new money which would have to be raised for working capital. Milk during the last few months has been bringing only 1½ cents a quart and it is impossible to sell cattle for any purpose except beef.

"The physical properties of the farm have been well maintained and it is thought that with any kind of return to normal prices for farm products this company will be able to operate at a profit."

Mr. Gordon states that inquiries sent direct to him will receive full information.

Lake Park Apartments.

Any information available about the Lake Park apartments at 3622-28 Lake Park avenue will be appreciated. They were underwritten by the Terrill Bond and Mortgage company.
J. G. P.

F. V. Person of the Terrill Bond and Mortgage company says this about the Lake Park apartments: "We have brought into the Superior court of this city a protective bill and have appointed a receiver for this property to collect the rents for the benefit of our bondholders, although no foreclosure is contemplated. This is merely a protective measure for the purpose of collecting rents on behalf of the bondholders."

FURNITURE FIRM LEASES ENTIRE 6 STORY BLOCK

G. H. Otto, owner of the Office Furniture Clearing House, a retail selling organization, has leased the entire six story building at the northeast corner of Lake and Franklin streets for five years at an undisclosed annual rental, from the Bills Realty company, Inc., represented by H. J. Betty.

Mr. Otto, a war veteran, living in Park Ridge, started in the furniture business fourteen years ago. His firm is now occupying a four story building having about half the width of the new quarters at 130 West Lake street. He will move in two weeks.

The building just leased by Mr. Otto has been vacant for four years. It previously was occupied by Horder's, stationers, and before that by John Sexton & Co.

SHOWMEN RENT QUARTERS ON WEST MADISON

Negotiations have been concluded whereby the Showmen's League of America, which has had its headquarters at 177 North Clark street for the last decade and a half, has leased the top floor of the four story Childs building at 165 West Madison street. The lease is for five years.

The lessee will use 4,500 square feet of floor space and will move in about the middle of August. Alterations are being made by the lessor. Walter F. Callahan was broker for both parties. Samuel Levy is president of the Showmen's league.

70TH-INGLESIDE LEASE.

W. L. Douser has leased the store at the northeast corner of 70th and Ingleside from John Konstantoudakis for a term of years for use as a confectionery shop. Coen, Berkson & Co. and McKey & Poague were brokers.

UNUSUAL HERBS BRING GARDENS ORIGINAL TOUCH

Medicinal Plants Seek Intriguing Nook.

BY PAUL POTTER.

The outstanding gardens that all flower lovers seek are those which express individuality. This quality encompasses the charm of arrangement, the originality of the gardener, and the completeness with which he is able to carry out his mind pictures in planted realities.

Still another quality is to be sought, and many gardeners at this time of the year are planning for fall treatments to obtain it. This is the development of novel or unusual plants and flowers, those outside the list of a dozen or so which always form the "mainstays" in the season's succession of bloom.

To further this intriguing experience in your garden seek among the ferns, the wild flowers, and the herbs for those which can be placed in one or two spots of the yard to advantage, depending somewhat upon the soil, shade, and color arrangements already a part of the garden.

Felines Admire Catnip.

While the family may not depend upon the medicinal properties of herbs available for home gardens, they will admire the development and botanical background. If mother or grandmother has a cat, she will be quite willing that some catnip be planted in a rather shady, moist location. Catnip leaves are especially relished by the sick felines. It is interesting to know that catnip tea is credited with stimulating the kidneys and general system, some of the old school of pioneer home remedies applying the tea for colds.

Perhaps, however, one will wish to consult the family physician before taking up extensive herb treatments. We here are suggesting the plants for their unusual and botanical interest.

The horehound plant [Maarubium vulgare] has become naturalized to American conditions from early ancestors in the mint family in Europe. Its white, furry flowers develop in clusters and its leaves are somewhat fragrant, possessing tonic and laxative properties when used in a tea.

Tea from Aster Family.

Another wild herb available for gardens and possessing white flowers is the thoroughwort, better known as boneset [Eupatorium perfoliatum]. It is a member of the aster family, both the leaves and flowers being used for tonics and teas.

Of the aromatic herbs, similar to mint, one might choose the hyssop, often used as a potted plant indoors. Rosemary is another fragrant shrub whose tea has a pungent and bitter taste, said to offer relief to headaches.

One might also name the castor oil plants, more like young trees than flowers; the asafetida, a perennial closely related to parsley, and saffron crocus, perennial related to the iris.

Some Herbs Poisonous.

Several of the medicinal herbs possess poisonous substances and must be added to the collection judiciously. The opium poppy, tobacco or nicotiana rustica, monkshood and belladonna come in this category. Indians once used the oils from some of these plants to poison their arrows, and a drop of two of nicotine will kill a dog.

For those who maintain a small flock of poultry, wormwood is a desirable plant to grow. It is perennial, stands about 3 feet high and produces green tinted flowers. There is a form of rhubarb used in Asia for medicines, while licorice can be domesticated in this region as a hardy perennial.

FORM NEW BODY TO REORGANIZE BOND ISSUES

HOWARD A. EMIG.
[Moffett Photo.]

Announcement was made yesterday of the formation of the Chicago Realization Company, Inc., to enter the reorganization and management field. Howard A. Emig is president; John R. Winterbotham Jr. and Laurance H. Armour are vice presidents; Gerard M. Ungaro is secretary, and Milton M. Morse is treasurer. The board of directors includes the officers, together with John Borden, Michael Cantacuzene, and Edward A. Cudahy. Mr. Morse is on the board to represent the interests of the Prudential Securities company, it was stated. Offices have been opened in the 333 North Michigan avenue building.

"The company will assist mortgage holders, bondholders, and equity owners in the reorganization of real estate holding companies, develop new financing for real estate worthy of assistance, but temporarily suffering from the depression, and will operate properties for the purpose of securing a maximum return for those interested in such properties," reads the announcement.

"It's the purpose of the corporation to develop new financing to aid distressed real estate investors of all classes, whether owners of bonds or of equities in large or small properties," said Mr. Ungaro, attorney for the new organization.

Woolworth Leases Store in North Central Avenue

Bids are now being taken for a one story 50x125 building, containing two stores, to be erected at 326 North Central avenue, by Marshall Solberg, an attorney. Lowenberg & Lowenberg are architects. One store already has been leased to the F. W. Woolworth company for twenty-five years The building will cost approximately $30,000.

A FEW QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON DEFAULTED BONDS

Last Sunday we printed several questions received by George F. Anderson of the law firm of Anderson & Anderson, regarding defaulted bonds, and his replies. Following are some more queries and Mr. Anderson's answers:

Why is it necessary to deposit the bonds?

"The depositing of the bonds is the authority for the committee to act, and naturally the committee cannot act without authority. Suppose the committee agreed upon an extension and then one bondholder changed his mind, or disappeared, or sold his bond. Depositing of bonds is necessary to have concerted, irrevocable and final authority."

Can I get my bond back when I've once deposited it?

"When bonds have been deposited the bondholder has no right to demand that they be returned without the consent of the bondholders' committee. The committee ordinarily doesn't refuse to give such consent. Many bondholders' committees provide that before any final reorganization plan is agreed upon the same must be submitted to the bondholders, and the bonds will be returned to any bondholder who desires."

What will happen if I don't deposit my bonds?

"If the bondholders' committee acquires title to the property and there are no other liens, they can go through a foreclosure, buy the property in at the sale at a nominal amount, in which case the nondepositing bondholders will only get a few cents on the dollar, and the depositing bondholders will get the property.

"If the bondholders' committee doesn't succeed in acquiring the title they will not bid the property in at a small amount because if they do the owner may redeem. They'll have to bid it in at an amount great enough to make it unattractive to redeem. In such a case, naturally the nondepositing bondholders will get more for their bonds than in the other case.

"It happens occasionally that if nearly all the bonds are deposited the committee will buy those that are not deposited, but while this has happened in a few cases, it's not done frequently.

"Did you ever stop to think that when all the bonds have been deposited except your bond, and you are holding on to it, thinking that they'll pay you for it rather than go to the expense of foreclosure, you're taking advantage of your fellow bondholders and doing a little racketeering of your own?"

BUTLER BROS. REMODEL THREE ENTIRE FLOORS

MARVIN B. POOL.

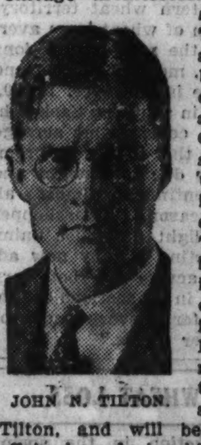
Extensive remodeling operations, involving the entire two upper and main floors of the Butler Brothers building at Randolph and Canal streets, have just been completed, according to Marvin B. Pool, general manager of that firm in Chicago. He states that the alterations have resulted in the complete revamping of 115,000 square feet of display rooms.

One entire upper floor is now devoted to samples of dry goods and another to the display of samples of household goods. This reconstruction program during the present economic conditions is a faith in the Chicago market and an expected increase in sales volume covering fall and holiday trade, according to Mr. Pool.

"These alterations and enlarging of sample display facilities were necessary in handling the firm's greatly enhanced merchandise departments," and G. I. Bailey, assistant sales manager.

"Since the acquisition by Butler Brothers in January, 1930, of the American Wholesale corporation of Baltimore, doing a jobbing textile business on the Atlantic coast, the Butler Brothers organization has been constantly developing its dry goods division so that with the completed reconstruction of the Chicago salesrooms there is added to the middle west a third dry goods distributor of major importance to Chicago. A grand opening has been scheduled coincident with the Chicago fall market season starting Aug. 8."

JOHN N. TILTON PUT ON STAFF OF CORNELL U.



JOHN N. TILTON.

John N. Tilton, a member of the Chicago architectural firm of Armstrong, Furst & Tilton, has been appointed a member of the staff of the college of architecture at Cornell university. He will take up his residence in Ithaca, N. Y., on Sept. 1. Mr. Tilton now lives in La Grange. He is the second generation of a family of architects. He will retain his membership in the firm of Armstrong, Furst & Tilton, and will be in touch with affairs here during his stay at Cornell.

Mr. Tilton is a son of the late John N. Tilton, for forty years a Chicago architect, and grandson of John Rollin Tilton, noted landscape artist. He attended Cornell, where he won the fellowship in architecture in 1913. He took his master's degree in 1914.

Armstrong, Furst & Tilton have been identified with many outstanding religious and educational edifices. They designed the Western Theological seminary at Evanston, Emmanual Episcopal church, La Grange; North and South schools, Glencoe; Glencoe Community auditorium, the large additions to the New Trier Township High school, and others.

Already we have been approached by a Tourist Camp syndicate to contract the service of 200 Beauty operators and 200 Barbers.

Our new concise short course has just been perfected to meet this want. It is something new and entirely different and actually puts you in a shop in as few weeks as it formerly took months.

ALL RIGHT, BOS'N- LET 'ER GO-
WELL, THE DOCTOR SAYS IT'S EITHER A LONG, RESTFUL SEA VOYAGE, OR THE BOOBY HATCH FOR ME- HE CLAIMS I NEED A COMPLETE REST- MY BUSINESS DOESN'T NEED ME- WHY NOT GO AROUND THE WORLD?
BUT, "DADDY"- WILL YOU BE ABLE TO REST ON YOUR YACHT? WITH RADIO TELEPHONE AND EVERYTHING, SOME PEST WILL BE CALLIN' YOU UP ALL THE TIME-
WHO SAID ANYTHING ABOUT THE YACHT? THERE'S THE OLD TUB I'M GOING ON- NO RADIO- NO SCHEDULE- WHEN WE DROP THE PILOT, WE DISAPPEAR COMPLETELY-
GEE- A SAIL BOAT-
YEP, AN OLD SQUARE RIGGER AND AN OLD TIME, DEEP SEA CREW- WATCH YOUR STEP, ANNIE-
WOW! WHAT A LOT OF ROPES AND THINGS-
HOWDY, CAPTAIN- I SEE YOU'RE GETTING THE OLD TUB INTO SHAPE- HOW SOON WILL WE BE ABLE TO SAIL?
WE SHOULD BE ABLE TO SLIP OUR CABLE ABOUT MONDAY WEEK, I CALC'LATE- IT'LL BE LIKE OLD DAYS, EH? IT'S BEEN HARD TO FIND GOOD SAILORS- WE'LL HAVE A TOUGH CREW- BUT WE WON'T MIND THAT-
I'VE HEARD ABOUT YOU AND IT'S PLEASED I AM TO MEET YOU- MANY'S THE TIGHT PLACE YER "DADDY" AND I HAVE BEEN THROUGH TOGETHER, IN THE GOOD OLD DAYS- DID HE EVER TELL YOU OF THE TIME WE RUN AFOUL O' THE PIRATES IN THE CHINA SEA? THAT WAS A REAL FIGHT- YOU SHOULD HAVE SEEN HIM TAKE AN' AXE AN' WADE IN-
NIX-NIX- CAPTAIN- THAT WAS A LONG TIME AGO- YOU'LL BE GIVING ME AWAY-
POOR "DADDY" HAS TO HAVE A REST- IF TRIXIE AND I BOTH GO ON THIS TRIP, NOBODY ON THE BOAT WILL GET MUCH REST- MAYBE IF I DON'T GO, TRIXIE'LL BE GOOD TO "DADDY" AND HE'LL HAVE A PLEASANT TRIP-
BUT HOW CAN I TELL "DADDY"? HE WANTS TRIXIE AND ME TO BE FRIENDS- BUT THIS IS ONE O' THOSE "TWO-IS-COMPANY, THREE'S-A-CROWD THINGS-
I SEE NOW THAT I WAS A SAP EVER TO THINK TRIXIE LOVED ANNIE- IT'S BAD ENOUGH, WHEN THEY ARE IN THE SAME HOUSE- WHAT WILL IT BE WITH BOTH OF THEM COOPED UP FOR MONTHS ON THE SAME BOAT? BUT I CAN'T LEAVE EITHER ONE BEHIND-
ER, "DADDY"- I'VE JUST BEEN THINKING- THIS TRIP AND ALL- ER- YOU'LL WANT TO GET A REAL REST- 'COURSE, TRIXIE'S FINE- BUT IF SHE AND I BOTH GO- WELL- THAT IS-THAT IS WHAT, ANNIE?

"RAINBOW AT NIGHT, SAILORS DELIGHT- RAINBOW IN THE MORNING- SAILORS TAKE WARNING-"
THERE ARE LOTS OF PAT SAYINGS ABOUT ME, BUT DON'T PUT TOO MUCH FAITH IN ANY OF THEM-
FOR INSTANCE, THERE'S THAT OLD LEGEND ABOUT A POT OF GOLD BEING AT THE END OF THE RAINBOW-
THAT'S WRONG- THERE'S NO POT- IT'S BARRELS, AND BARRELS OF GOLD- YES SIR- I'M ONE INSTITUTION THAT HASN'T GONE OFF THE GOLD STANDARD-
HARD TIMES HAVEN'T CHEAPENED ME, EITHER- MY COLORS ARE AS BRIGHT AND DURABLE AS EVER-AFTER THE PERIOD OF STORM I APPEAR ON THE EVE OF A BRIGHTER DAY- IN ME YOU SEE THE PROMISE OF A GOOD TIME COMING-

DICK TRACY
YOU MEAN TO GO RIGHT AWAY, CHIEF?
THAT'S WHAT I SAID, TRACY - TAKE A REST FOR YOURSELF UP IN THE COUNTRY. YOU'VE BEEN LEADING A PRETTY BUSY LIFE LATELY. I THINK IT WOULD DO YOU GOOD
CHIEF, ORDINARILY A VACATION WOULDN'T MEAN A THING TO ME ONE WAY OR THE OTHER - BUT - JUST NOW, THIS MORNING IN FACT, I RECEIVED A LETTER FROM MY GIRL, TESS TRUEHEART, WHO IS WITH HER MOTHER AT THEIR SUMMER COTTAGE UP NORTH - AND, WELL- SHE SAYS THE FISHING IS MIGHTY GOOD UP THERE.
YES SIR, PAT, THIS IS GOING TO BE A REAL REST FOR ME! I'M GOING TO PLAY GOLF, FISH, RIDE EVERY MORNING AND - I MIGHT GO BEAR HUNTING. THEY'VE GOT 'EM UP THERE.
IT'LL TAKE ABOUT TWO DAYS TO GET YOU FED UP.
THINK SO, KID? WELL, BEHAVE YOURSELF WHILE I'M GONE. I'M GOING HOME AND PACK. I'LL TAKE THE NIGHT TRAIN UP THERE
OH BOY, OBOY! THIS IS GONNA BE A REAL VACATION. NO CHASING THUGS — NO FOOLING AROUND GUNMEN - NO BOTHERING WITH COUNTERFEITERS - AND GEE! IT'LL SEEM GOOD TO SEE TESS.
H'M - THE COTTAGE IS LOCATED ON DEVILS' ISLAND - THAT NAME DOESN'T SOUND ANY TOO PLEASANT. - THOSE RESORT SPOTS USUALLY HAVE SOME MONICKER LIKE "DREAMY DELL COVE" OR "HONEY BREEZE BAY." BUT I SHOULD WORRY ABOUT THE NAME!
WONDER IF I SHOULD PACK THIS BABY IN THERE? IT'S SO NATURAL FOR ME TO LUG THE OLD GAT AROUND THAT IT DOESN'T SEEM RIGHT TO GO WITHOUT IT.
NO - NOT TODAY. MISTER AUTOMATIC CAN REST AND RUST RIGHT HERE AT HOME TILL I GET BACK - IF I DO ANY SHOOTING IT'LL BE WITH A HUNTING RIFLE.
AND NOW LET US LOOK IN ON TESS TRUEHEART AND HER MOTHER AT THEIR COTTAGE ON DEVILS' ISLAND. TESS SEEMS QUITE EXCITED OVER SOMETHING.
OH MOTHER - THE MESSENGER FROM ECHOVILLE JUST BROUGHT THIS WIRE FROM DICK. HE'S LEAVING FOR HERE TONIGHT. ISN'T IT GRAND?
GEE, YOU'RE CRAZY ABOUT THE KID, AREN'T YOU TESS?
LISTEN, MARGE YOU'LL BE WILD ABOUT HIM TOO - BUT UNDERSTAND ME - NOT TOO WILD NOW.
H'M - TRACY - THAT'S THE DETECTIVE CHAP, EH, TESS?
THAT'S RIGHT! SURELY YOU READ ABOUT HIS WORK ON THE "BUDDY" WALDORF KIDNAPING CASE.
LET'S SEE - IT SEEMS I DID SEE HIS NAME MENTIONED - MY, MY, THESE POLICE FELLOWS ARE HOUNDS FOR PUBLICITY AREN'T THEY - ALWAYS BREAKING INTO THE NEWSPAPERS
OH YEAH?

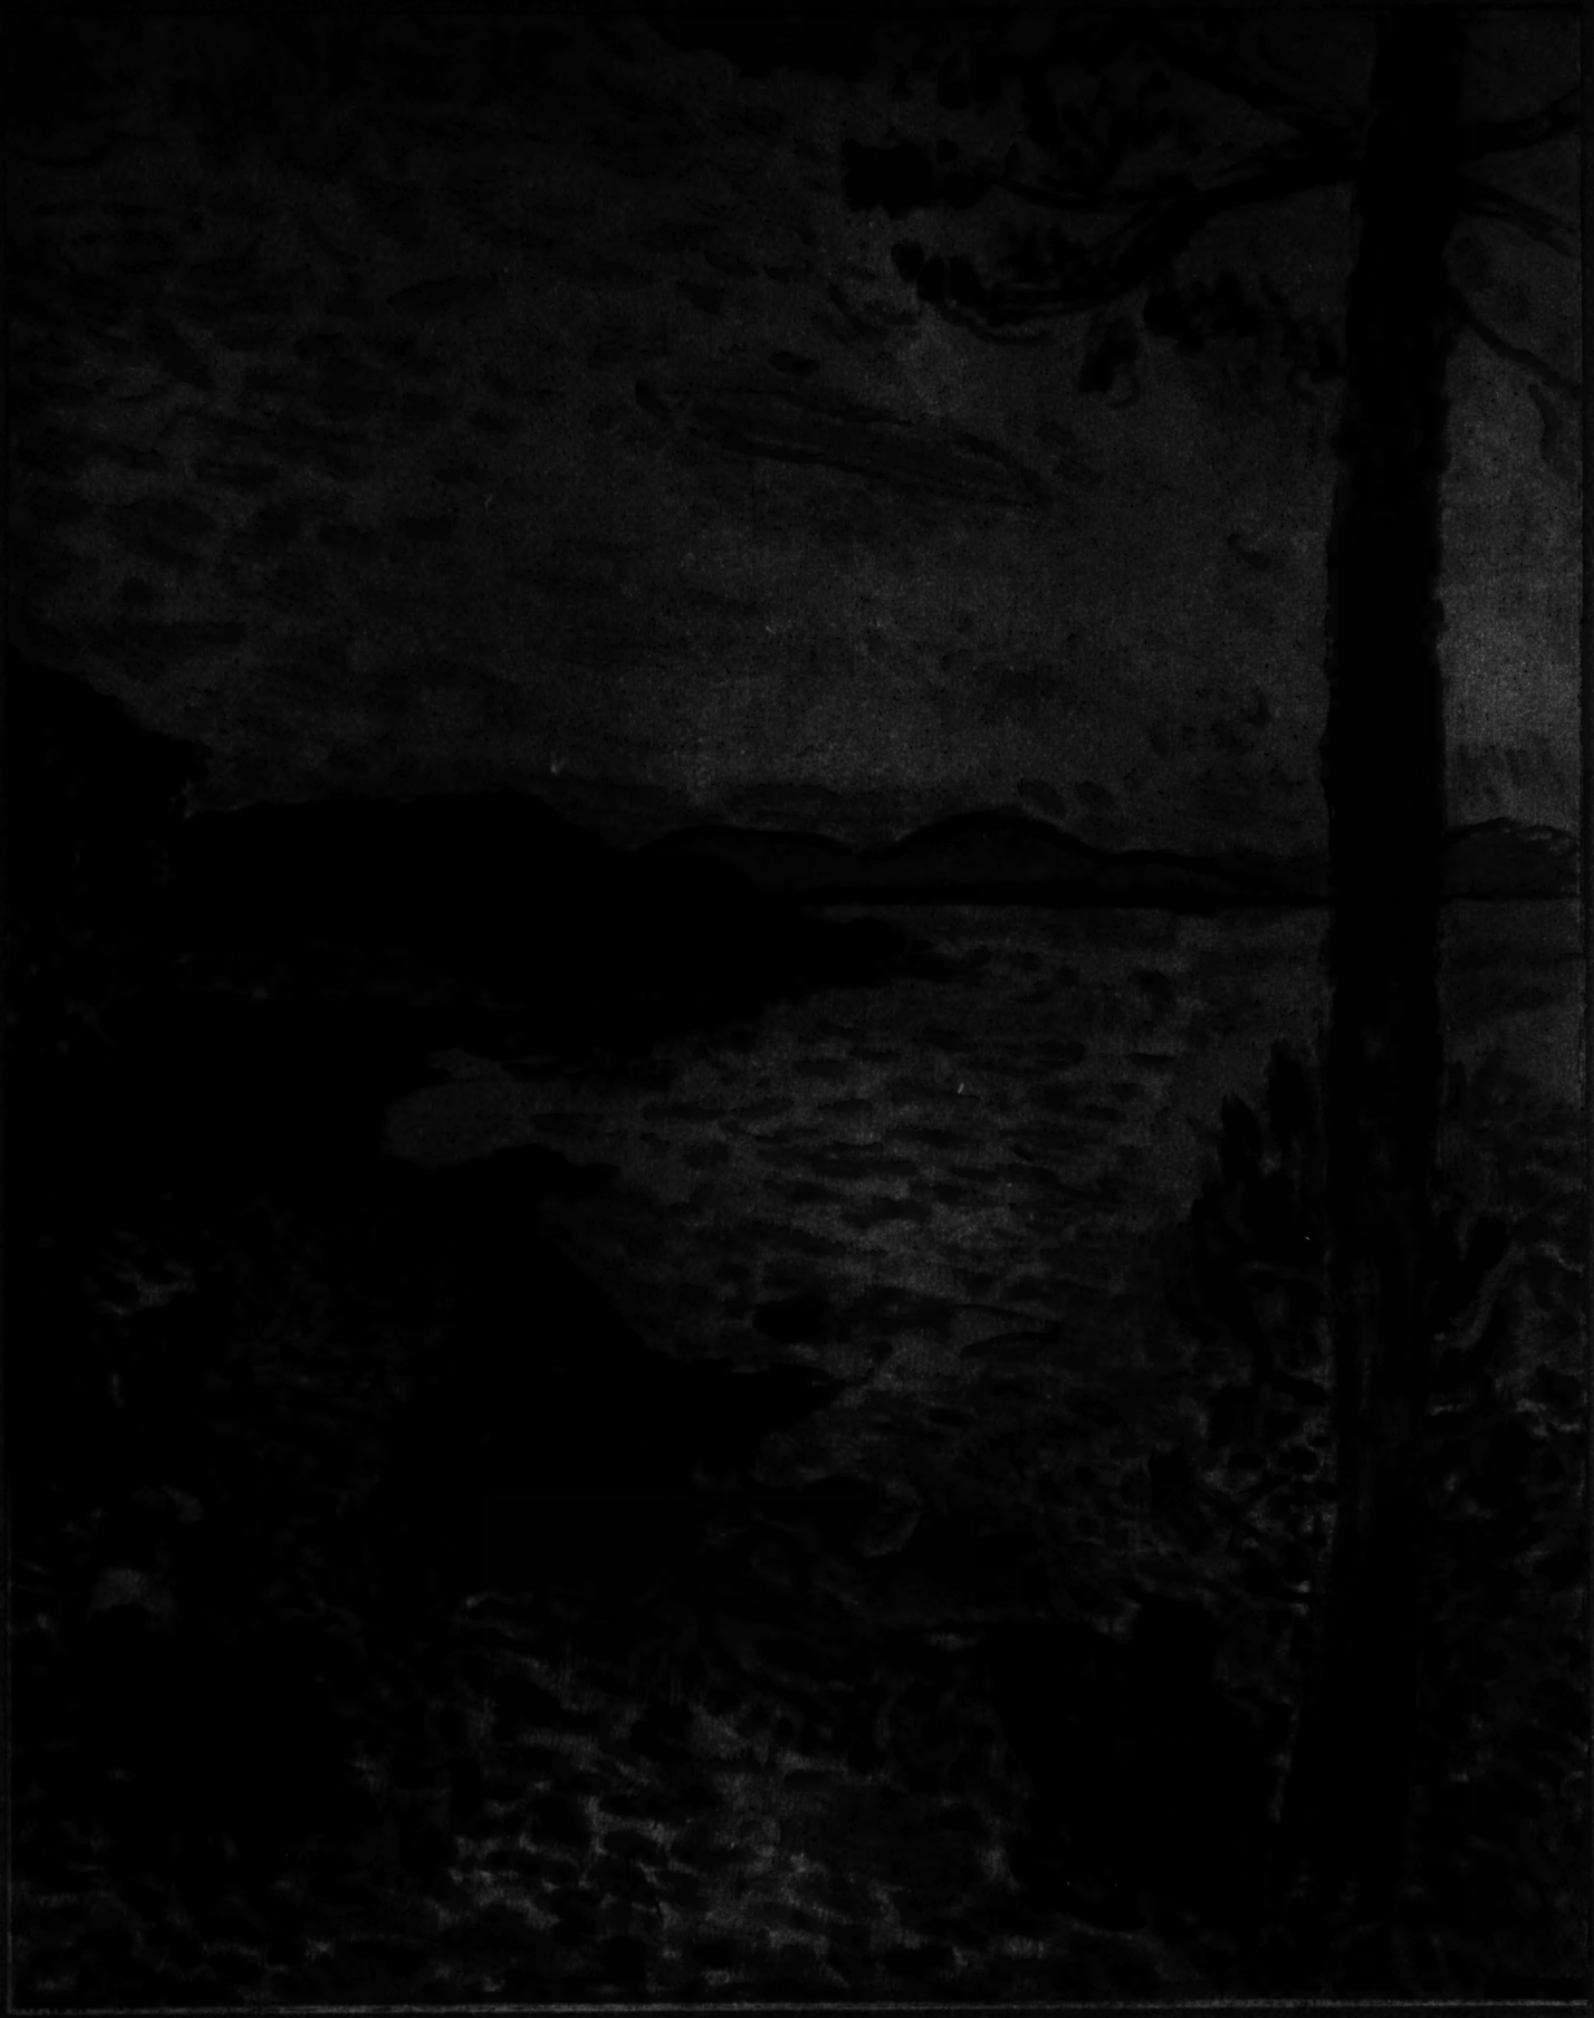
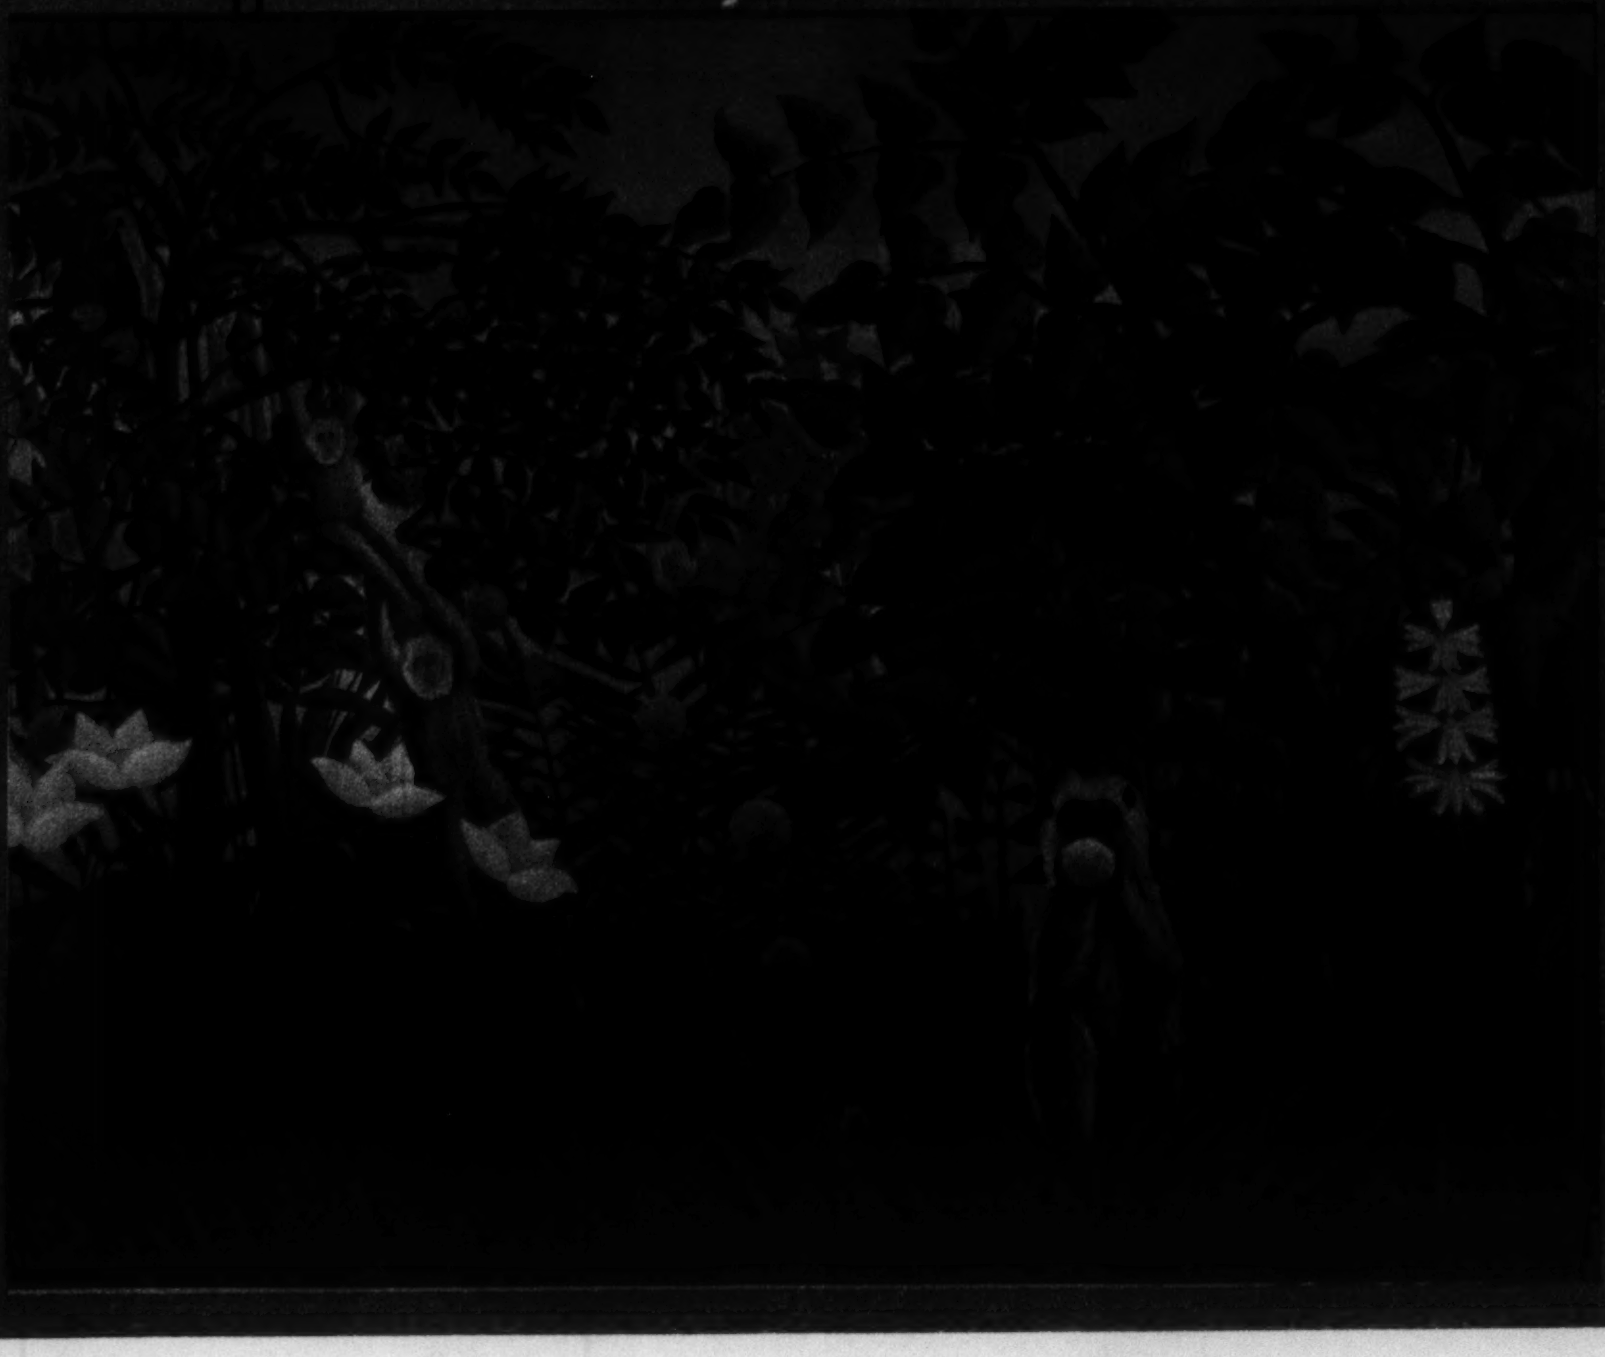
THE TWO PAINTINGS REPRODUCED ON THIS PAGE, BOTH OUTSTANDING WORKS OF TWO MASTERS OF THE MODERN SCHOOL, ARE OWNED IN CHICAGO. THE PICTURE AT THE RIGHT, A SEASCAPE BY HENRI MATISSE, IS IN THAT PAINTER'S RICHEST VEIN. MATISSE WILL INEVITABLY BE CLASSED AMONG THE FIRST OF THE GREAT MODERN PAINTERS, EVEN THOUGH HE DID NOT EMBRACE MODERNISM UNTIL WELL PAST HIS SIXTIETH YEAR. HIS EXTRAORDINARY FIGURE STUDIES ARE WELL KNOWN, AND WHILE HIS LANDSCAPES HAVE MADE A LESS STRONG IMPRESSION, THE BRILLIANTLY PAINTED WORK PRESENTED HERE ILLUSTRATES ADMIRABLY HIS SKILL WITH A VARIED PALETTE. AS ALL MODERN PAINTERS ACKNOWLEDGE EITHER A VERY LOW OR A VERY HIGH KEY IN COLOR, MATISSE KNOWS THE HIGH NOTES AND KEEPS TO THEM, AS EXEMPLIFIED IN THE BRIGHT RED FOREGROUND RUNNING BACK, IN DEEPENING BLUES AND GREENS, TO THE LIGHTER BLUE-GREEN HILLS RISING OUT OF THE WATER.





HENRI ROUSSEAU AND HIS JUNGLE PICTURES ARE KNOWN WHEREVER MODERN ART HAS BEEN INTRODUCED. HE WAS A LITTLE TAX COLLECTOR IN A FRENCH FOREIGN COLONY AND PAINTED FOR HIS OWN AMUSEMENT ON SUNDAY AFTERNOONS. HIS PICTURES DRIFTED BACK TO PARIS, OFTEN IN PAYMENT FOR MORE CANVAS AND PAINTS, AND HE NEVER THOUGHT THEM OF PARTICULAR IMPORTANCE. HOWEVER, WHEN A CRY FOR THE MODERN PRIMITIVE WENT UP, HIS PAINTINGS BECAME AT ONCE OF INTEREST AND VALUE. HIS WORK IS UNSOPHISTICATED, NAIVE, AND ORIGINAL. PROBABLY HIS FINEST JUNGLE PICTURE IS THIS, REPRODUCED AT THE LEFT, IN WHICH MONKEYS AND ORANGES ARE THE ELEMENTS OF A HIGHLY DECORATIVE CANVAS.

IN HOLLYWOOD, where movie stars are merely fellow townsmen, one would imagine that a motion picture premier would cause no great commotion. On the contrary, police reserves have all they can do to keep order in the surging masses of bystanders who gather to watch the industry's great and near great arrive at the theater. THE FIRST FRENCH EVENING MODES FOR FALL APPEAR

Rich Materials, Dark Colors Are in High Favor

Feathers Being Used for Trimming; New Wraps All Luxuriously Furred

Paris Snapshots

Antoine helps the "Don't Dress" movement along by finding a new way of avoiding having your hair dressed for evening. He makes bandeaux of little ringlets and all you have to do is to slick your hair back and pin this band of curls around your head to look as if you came fresh from the coiffeur.

One of the famous forty smartest Parisiennes to befriend feathers is the Honorable Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, who wears a feather necklace that fits closely around the throat and hangs almost to the waistline. It is steel blue in color.

Young Parisiennes are pinning up their Basque berets with huge gold or silver safety pins.

Ducharne, the famous French silk manufacturer, is launching a new velvet for fall which he calls cobra. As the name suggests, the velvet has the same pattern as the skin of the cobra.

Ducharne is also launching two new crepes made of silk and wool, looking like wool, with a diagonal weave. The heavier weave of this crepe is called Crepe Greta and the thinner or lighter is called Crepe Marlene.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Dark velvets, rich colors and ampler skirts give glamour to the first French evening fashions for fall, 1932. Waistlines come down. Sumptuous furs border the style-scape. Feathers and ringleted hair supply an adornment of curlicues.

The sleek and straight silhouette of this summer, with its high waistline, is wiped out. Dull crêpes languish on the shelves of Paris dressmakers' storerooms. The materials that are being cut up to make these autumn evening frocks are rich and royal. There are lots of new, fancy velvets with the surface broken up into tiny designs, stripes, and brocades. Lyons and crêpe velvets are plenteous. Velvet and satin with pebbly surfaces are coming in. Lamés woven with steel, gold and silver threads are used to make formal frocks. Crinkly crêpe has a satin sheen.

Colors that make these fabrics look their richest are the Paris choice for fall and winter evenings. Dark reds, like plum and garnet, are featured shades of great French houses. Amethyst, iris, and violet at their darkest pitch are smart colors. Prunelle and the brown of black coffee are two new tones for evening. Stray light shades like orchid, hyacinth, magnolia white, and water color blue, pink and green contrast prettily with the predominating sober shades. Hundreds of the new evening dresses and ensembles combine two colors, or two tones of one color.

Fewer Bare Backs.

The brazen display of bare backs is vastly less, going into eclipse with the sleek and slinky dress. Women who follow the whims of fashion in Paris seem determined to look different the coming season. They all wear their hair curly, either in Greek ringlets or with soft curls around the face, and these heads with the newest frocks, which have skirts that fit no farther down than the hipline, and that are wide below, give an aspect of prettiness quite different to that of this summer. The modest bodice makes this effect even more striking.

Out of their jewels fashionable women choose to wear only one or two pieces at a time, and jewels with old fashioned settings are more popular than those done in the modern way. Garnets, worn with dark red frocks, are a smart fancy.

When evening gloves are worn they are whimsical and feminine. Velvet gloves to match the velvet frock are on tap in France. Some women have both their evening gloves and slippers made of the stuff of their frocks.

The evening wrap is copiously befurred with silver fox, with sable, sable-ized marten, or with ermine. At the moment these wraps are not much worn, because it is too warm, but they are a definite part of the style scene for fall. Fur trimmings for dresses are also on the autumn program. Lamé dresses trimmed with sable, for instance, and velvet frocks tricked out in ermine or fox.

Feather Trimmings.

Feather trimmed evening coats and capes are being worn at the moment. The Hon. Mrs. Richard Norton is wearing Schiaparelli's short evening cape of royal blue velvet with a wide band border of blue coque feathers. Mme. Ramos wears a gray evening coat with epaulettes of red coque feathers. A number of chic women have appeared in Chanel's black evening frock having an ostrich feather boa around the neck.

The scalloped hem of the skirt is a clever Chanel device for avoiding the rigid line at the bottom. The bias bands that curve downward around the front of the hipline have full length sash ends at the back which you can see in the small sketch at the

The Molyneux frock at the extreme left is made of reddish velvet. it has silver fox cuffs but no sleeves, the cuffs being held on by straps around the neck. The girdle is made of rhinestone leaves. Vera Borea makes the next frock of orchid velvet, the cape and mitts being of the same material, but darker. The bodice is shirred at the sides and has a low waistline. Mainbocher created the stunning frock shown third of black and white, combining a white foundation frock with an over dress of black, tied on at the neck and waistline. Last, Chanel gives the frock a daytime bodice, buttoned up the front, a full skirt having a scalloped hem, and adds a detachable ostrich feather boa.

Cultivate Child's Good Taste

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

"ONE night we were in town alone—Jake and I," said a man I know. "The girls were away" [the girls being their wives] "and we had a couple of hours to kill before the next train left. Neither of us had ever been to a burlesque show, so we decided we'd take one in—and we did.

"Well, I was never so embarrassed in my life. And Jake was, too. We didn't know which way to look. At last, with one mind, we got up and left. And, do you know, I believe I actually blushed!"

Both these men were very real men, married, with families, of rather wide

Rarely do you pick up a magazine or newspaper without finding in it some hint of the new theme song "Make Marriage a Career!"

Distinguished careerists among women who are married and women who are not are asked to voice an opinion on the subject. Nine out of ten

Appetizers in All Countries Pleasant Fare

Generally Served First, but English Insist on Theirs at End of Meal.

By Mary Meade.

CALL it antipasto . . . call it smorgasbord . . . call it zakuska, orektika, hors d'œuvre, or in good American, salute it simply as "appetizer."

But whatever the name and the nation, if you would be quite smart and knowing in the magic of coaxing hunger even at languid summer tables, take counsel from gourmets of the continent and call often on tantalizing pre-meal services—appetite rousers cunningly calculated to fillip palates to a peak of appreciation for good things to come.

And if you are a bit weary of being appetized by tangy tomato juice or chilly fruit cups—our own native hunger teasers—why not cast an appraising and appreciative eye over meal openers from continental kitchens—and dine a while after the foreign fashion?

A plate of crisp fieriness splashed with color is the first offering from overseas. Antipasto (before the meal) as it is appropriately named, comes from Italy, but adapts itself graciously to American meals and palates. Our antipasto course may be as simple or as variety-minded as it suits us. With a few of the essentials kept always on hand, and the others turning up differently with each day's cooking, antipasto gives us a gay opportunity for exercising imagination.

Delightful Italian Service.

One delightful service, on a small oval platter, with a true Italian savor comes to each diner. Nibbling "from left to right" we meet three small, green pickled peppers, halves of soft scarlet pimientos, slivers of savory green beans, two thin slices each of red beets, of tomatoes, of cucumbers and of Italian salami, small plump pickled onions, and, to top it off, half a dozen thin fillets of anchovies as the final touch of tanginess.

Or if you have a warm spot in your heart for Italian ham, the thinnest of thin slices may be substituted for salami. Assorted mixed pickles, a delicious variety of which is packed right in Chicago, is another added attraction. Pickled cauliflower and mushrooms, hearts of celery, and even thin wedges of carrot may any or all be added. Seasonings and oils to lend zest to antipasto are up to each family of diners. A marinade prepared like French dressing but seasoned a bit more with pepper, drops of onion juice, a hint of garlic, a suggestion of capers and a dash of spice, makes foods flattered by it real hunger raisers.

Assorted antipastos, by the way, may be bought by the tin at reasonable prices and are delicious lifesavers for the feeding of suddenly descended relatives. A few curls of lettuce, thin slices of hard cooked egg, and tidbits of tuna fish will finish the trick. Just be sure the plates are not overcrowded, and are pleasantly balanced in color and flavor. And then watch the appetites mount to do justice to that luscious, juicy roast and "trimmings."

Swedish Favorite.

Smorgasbord, beloved of Swedish connoisseurs of good food, is quite a different matter—but likewise delicious. Like the antipasto, it is a course composed entirely of appetizers. But unlike the Italian service, smorgasbord usually is placed on a side table from which each diner helps himself to his choice of delicacies before being seated. Sometimes this service is varied, and large trays holding a dozen or more different relishes are brought by a maid to each diner, who selects what suits his fancy. Among the most typical of these dishes—and ones which could readily be supplied from our own kitchens—are cheeses, various smoked and pickled fish, cottage cheese and caper salad, highly seasoned meat loaves and small meat balls, stuffed and toasted celery, mixed pickles, jellied egg salad . . . no end, you see, to the possibilities.

However, the preparation of many such snacks takes a good deal more time than most American hostesses are ready to donate, even to the noble end of whetting appetites. A few, however, grouped on the sideboard some night, with little spoons ready for service and plates stacked neatly, will be a pleasant shock to a surprise-loving family, or a novel way of starting off a party dinner.

German diners go in for their appetite piquers in rather a heavier fashion. Various sausages—notably liverwurst—are inevitable. These often keep company with potato salads, shredded vegetables, herring, and, of course, with the national beverage.

But if you would be Italian in your appetizers, then at the same time you will be Greek. For orektika, the Hellenic word meaning "to give an appetite," labels the Grecian pre-meal course, which is a close cousin to the Italian antipasto.

Order Reversed in England.

In England, where presumably the more rugged climate and athletic natures of the people make appetizers unnecessary, we find the order reversed and a similar course, known as savouries, served at the end of the meal to shock the appetite into life again, and quite properly send the diner away hungry.

Hors d'œuvre and zakuska, the French and the Russian ways, respectively, of zestfully opening a meal, are so intermingled that what is good in Moscow is equally good today in Paris—or, for that matter, in Chicago. For social and professional interests, and surely of an average degree of sophistication. What they saw and heard was repellant to their good taste. Their relations with their own wives, their attitude toward women in general, their interests made them impervious to any "moral" influence from the suggestiveness or "broadness" of what they saw and heard on that particular stage—and their taste was already formed.

As I walk to an occasional destination of mine in town I have to pass the displays of photographs which advertise some of the burlesque shows. And I try to imagine just what the minds of our boys make of them. As I look over some of the new crop of magazines characterized by a sort of flippant, pictured indecency, I wonder—and wish I could sweep them off the counters into a huge bonfire, so our boys and girls could never see them.

The Parents' Task.

Perhaps at this point you get impatient and say: "But these things have nothing to do with my children. They aren't taken to such shows and such magazines don't come into our house." Perhaps you say that—perhaps you go on and say that you are able to order your child's life, his or her reading and friends and amusements. You may bridle at the mere thought of burlesque shows and objectionable magazines as being things your sons and daughters won't see and won't want to see.

The answer to that is that it is impossible for any father and mother to direct every influence that will come into their children's lives, even if they do exclude certain books and plays and people. So what we need to do to protect our children is to give them stamina and sturdiness by supplying them with interesting, positive, worth while ideas, instead of by leaving blanks for anything and everything to rush into.

We do this with their bodies. We are not negative about that. We don't merely avoid harmful foods and keep away from disease. We supply the good things in food and habits, and air and sunshine and surroundings which build up a positive physical state and a resistance to the diseases to which all children are exposed.

We must do the same thing with the children's mental and emotional life. We must fill his life with good things. We can let him see what we care about. We can help to form his tastes so that he does not want trash in ideas or people or things. Good taste is a great protection. It often serves as a sort of morality. It certainly does not leave blanks.

And especially where a child's sex education is concerned, this is important. We don't want to leave blanks there for chance to fill in. In that direction we must build a sturdy structure of normal understanding which will not only fit easily into the picture of life, but which will be in a large degree impervious to the unwholesomeness and suggestiveness that often come their way. [See our "Sex Education" booklet.]

Ward Against Idleness.

When I was a little girl, beginning to study physics, I remember that the truth which made a great impression on me was this law that we had to learn: Nature abhors a vacuum.

I remember it made a picture for me of nature having to fill up spaces, of her not tolerating emptiness. And when it did exist, of something rushing in—and that something being whatever was nearest.

That physical law about vacuums made an impression on me then. And lately it's kept slipping back into my mind as a comparison. Nature abhors a vacuum not only in the world of substances, but in the world of thoughts and feelings. Particularly where our children are concerned is it important for us to sense this. It will help us a lot.

It will help us to realize that we can't expect a vacuum to be satisfying to a child, nor can we expect a vacuum to stay a vacuum. "Satan still finds mischief for idle hands to do," isn't necessarily true always, but the old saw points out the fact that hands don't stay idle. Neither does the place where thought and feelings live stay a blank. Children are going to do something with their brains and muscles and what we call their souls. What we must determine is that that something shall be a wholesome, constructive thing.

Emptiness Avoided.

Now, there isn't any use in trying to put over the idea that when good things flow in it's only because of deliberate management, because that isn't so. In most families their way of living, the interests of the grownups, the school life, the children's friends, the actual geography of the place, fill a child's life with the right things. Usually there isn't an emptiness.

But sometimes there is. Sometimes the parents create an emptiness, a boredom, by the way they allow a child's day to be passed—and then troubles begin. Here, for instance, is one obvious kind of emptiness—the vacuum created by constantly saying "Don't touch" and "Sit still." The child is expected to stop what he's doing, and since nothing right is provided for him, what is called mischief flows in.

With older boys and girls the vacuum may be caused by lack of sports, or recreation, or by the aimlessness of a crowded city street. And what rushes in to fill that space may be trashy books and excessive and sensational movies. Nature abhors a vacuum, and if nothing else lies at hand, these things rush in to fill the space.

This principle is well understood by those who deal expertly with children. It has been interesting to me lately to notice how it is applied where people are trying to break up gangs, usually of young delinquents. A bunch of youngsters left idle on a city street decide to go exploring in darkest Africa. What will they need? Money for their passage and their guns. But they're not thieves. So they decide to become stowaways—no fare needed. They can get ammunition in a place they know of, if they watch their chance. Which they do.

Then what do the authorities do? Punish them? No.

They understand the emptiness caused by idleness and a longing unfulfilled, so they try to fill it with something that is constructive and satisfying. Clubs and camps that make adventure their object and men who understand change these boys from what we call delinquents into happy, active kids working with, not against, society and law.

So, then, if we are concerned about whether this or that trashy or sordid book or play, or talk, or amusement will affect too much our sons and daughters, our cue is this: Not to leave blanks for chance to fill in. If a child's life is filled with affection, wholesomeness, beauty, cleanness and naturalness he won't care about these other things. Or if he does, it will be a passing interest until he has measured it up against the worth while, established values and found it wanting.

Canapes—modish, piquant, hunger-tempting. Serve them at the midnight spread with a supporting case of cheeses, pickles, curled celery, pate de fois gras, et al. Also at the knowing little dinner to whet appetites for good things to come. Recipes are given today.

it is from among the delightful canapés and relishes of French origin that we most often draw our American inspirations for appetizers. Hors d'œuvre and zakuska differ mainly in service. The Russian appetizers, consisting frequently of pickled or smoked fish, red and gray caviar, sardine paste on toasted bread rounds [canapés], tiny sweet pickles and lemon slices, are served usually in a separate room where the dishes are set on a side table and accompanied by liqueurs.

But if we would be appetizing in the French manner, hors d'œuvres will be passed around to the diners as soon as they are seated. Such appetizers may run to pickled vegetables, thin sausage slices, sardines and goose livers—with, of course, a background of crunchy canapés.

Two Classifications.

Actually there are two kinds of hors d'œuvres—hot and cold. You may meet the hot in the form of tiny pastry rollups filled with highly seasoned meat. Or as small toasted "croutes" [small French fried boxes cut from bread] filled with some savory mixture. Or it may be a more elaborate hot canapé, with bread rounds glorified with oysters spread with a savory mixture, or a canapé spread with highly seasoned, minced mushrooms. But whatever our hot canapé, if we would be properly French we will serve it after the soup course. Cold, daintier hors dœuvres are the true appetizers, coming before the soup.

But before we start cutting up canapés and fabricating other savory tidbits, let's not forget that there is another mission in life to which appetizers may be put besides being used as ushers to the meal. After theater hors d'œuvre suppers supply an ideal way of entertaining with but a small amount of work ahead of time. For the simplest and gayest suppers, let your guests do their own creating of things delicious. Your job will be simply to supply a table or sideboard with a platter of assorted hors d'œuvres [relishes, sliced meats, little salads, celery, pickles, olives, cheese, etc.], a toaster with sliced bread at hand, a pot of coffee ready to perk, and silver, linen, and china laid out.

Spurs on Imagination.

Oftentimes a meal simply cries for just one zestful canapé to await each guest as he enters the dining room—or perhaps a tempting plate of assorted tidbits to be passed around as soon as the guests have been seated. And that is the time to bring forth our most ingenious brain children and make form, color, and flavor all do their bit in stirring up laggard appetites.

As we've said, the cold canapé is usually founded on a thin bit of bread. This may be oblong, round, oval, or cut in any fancy shape. It should never be over 2⅛ inches at its widest part and never more than ¼ inch thick. Cut these bread forms to suit, then spread lightly with butter and toast on one or both sides in the oven until crisp and golden brown. Or if you wish, drop into deep fat and fry a delicate brown. Drain quickly on unglazed paper and cool.

And now what's to go on our crisp canapés? Popular allegiance is divided between a delicate spread of anchovy paste, an intimate mixture of hard cooked eggs and smoked fish pounded together with minced pickles and moistened with mayonnaise—and a more elaborate appetizer featuring a toasted rounds of bread covered with a thin slice of tomato and crowned with half a deviled egg, in which minced ham and minced gherkins have been blended with the sieved egg yolks and moistened with cream and vinegar for the egg white stuffing. Or, perhaps, one of the following would tempt you:

MUSHROOMS AND HAM CANAPE.

Toast thin rounds of bread on one side only, and spread the untoasted side with a mixture of deviled ham, chopped pickle and tart mayonnaise. On each canapé place several slices of fresh or tinned mushrooms, dot with butter and broil quickly in the oven under a flame. Spangle with paprika and serve with lemon wedges.

SMOKED HALIBUT CANAPE.

Cut and toast thin squares of bread. Cut thinly sliced smoked halibut in the same shape, though a bit smaller, and place on each canapé. Pipe the edge with a rim of finely minced parsley and place a thin slice of lemon in the center. Sprinkle with paprika.

SARDINE CANAPE.

Skin and bone canned sardines, mash or pound the meat to a paste, and season with a pepper sauce, minced chive, and a little lemon juice. Spread over dainty strips of toasted bread, leaving one end unspread for the fingers to hold. In the center place hard-cooked egg yolk moistened with mayonnaise. Around the edge sprinkle a border of finely minced pickle, or pipe a neat rim of parsley butter. Serve with half slices of lemon dusted with pepper.

Leadership No Cure-All for Human Ills

Individual Responsibility the Ideal to Aim For, Says Rev. S. K. Wilson.

Each Sunday for the next few weeks the Tribune will publish brief sermon editorials on questions dealing with current religious developments. These discussions will be written by well known Chicago clergymen selected by the Rev. John Evans, religious editor. The following was contributed by the Rev. Samuel Knox Wilson, S. J., Ph. D., recently appointed dean of the graduate school at Loyola university.

FROM the frequent use of the term in contemporary writing one might think that leadership were a cure-all for human ills. Whatever the demand in government or business, the great need today in the spiritual life of mankind is not leadership, but individual re-awakening to a consciousness of man's dignity and duty in the scheme of creation. To secure this consciousness we have first to get rid of a widespread and subtle influence in modern life that this is out of date and remote from the realities.

For almost as many centuries as history can reckon not the community but the individual was exalted. The individual must be free; free to think as he pleased, free to do as he pleased. Self was the sun around which the individual's world revolved. What was the result? A few strong trampled with unrestrained selfishness upon the rights of the many weak so that most men and women, their human rights denied, their human dignity outraged, were only slaves driven and harried at the whim of their masters.

Christianity introduced an entirely different philosophy of life. Teaching very definitely the immortality of man and man's accountability to his Creator, in addition to this, Christianity taught that it is man's duty to strive for spiritual union with his Creator. Man's duty is affected only by the fact that the individual does not stand alone in such relationship. The human being is surrounded by other human beings and by a vast body of nonhuman creation called into existence to minister to his comfort and to assist him in attaining union with his Creator.

Consequently, men must use the goods of creation with this single purpose in view and if any such goods become a hindrance to union with God, they must be resolutely shunned. Another consequence is that man must respect the rights of his fellow human beings even as he must respect the rights of his Creator. Moreover, he must be to each of his fellows as they are presumed to be to him—a help towards union with the Creator. Such duties appear to restrict individual freedom and they do if freedom means license. It was because these restrictions were resented that in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries the ancient theory of individualism regained widespread approval and today influences so many million professing Christians.

Paradoxically, the old philosophy of individual freedom ended in bondage. Whenever every man has unrestricted liberty in theory, in fact all but one of a few become abject slaves. And whenever the individual is confined in the exercise of undoubted rights by corresponding duties to respect the rights of his fellow men, then the greatest amount of liberty is enjoyed by every man. Thus in practice individualism submerged the individual. When Christianity became the rule the individual for the first time in history really emerged.

Nor is this all. Character is achieved by steadfast adherence to principle in the face of obstacles. The old philosophy could find no finer synthesis of its principles than in the mandate: "Know thyself." Christian teaching transcends the field of mere knowledge in the more knowing: "Master thyself."

Thus today we seem to face a problem deeper than the finding of capable leaders, for if the Christian view of life were generally adopted, not only would justice prevail, but each individual would become in a real sense a leader in the cause of truth and righteousness.

Moscow Children Neglect Studies for 'Social Work'

MOSCOW. — (AP) — The commissariat of education has called a halt on "social work" by school children, limiting it to 24 hours a month.

This form of activity, peculiar to the soviet state, is a contribution by conscientious individuals to the "construction of socialism" and usually takes the form of free labor on days off.

School children are not exempt from it, but the younsters have been going too far. One seventh grade group, it was found, had been devoting 66 hours a month to committee meetings and planning their part in the socialistic scheme.

Forty children of another school spent their weekly holidays cleaning locomotives, and another school devoted the entire day off from studies to discussion of how the day of rest should be spent.

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF CHILDREN

Please address all bright sayings of children to Aunty Bee, The Tribune.

One day Freddie, aged 3, decided he'd comb his hair. After combing it he couldn't part it, and coming to his mother, handed her the comb and said, "Mother, please put a crack in my hair." P. P.

Little Dick, just learning to talk, on hearing his elder brother tell about the fierce lions he had seen in a circus, ran enthusiastically to his grandmother's davenport and said, "This is grandmother's lie-on," and then pointing to a small love seat nearby, "That is little Dick's lie-on."

Answers to Beauty Queries

Personal replies to beauty queries require a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Chicago Tribune.

MELA: NOT X-RAY ON THE face, Mela, unless it's done under the most expert medical direction. Doctors don't recommend it promiscuously, you know.

MRS. ROSE: THE EYEBROWS should be kept groomed and shaped even if glasses are worn. Yes, eye makeup can be used with glasses.

RHODA: HOW CRUEL OF YOUR mother. It isn't a waste of money to take expert medical treatment for a bad case of acne. Better write me personally.

C. R.: I'M NOT SO SURE THAT the meal masks clear the complexion. They tone it, but have more or less temporary value. If there are blackheads and pimples, better give them the treatment I recommend in my skin care booklet, which is yours for a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

MARGE: THE PEROXIDE SOLUTION, or peroxide and ammonia, will bleach the fine hairs on the face. Some claim eventually the hair roots are deadened.

THIRTEEN: NOW IS THE TIME to check the pimples and the oiliness. You have to be careful of your diet, too. Better send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for skin care booklet.

CATHY: YOU WOULD GO STRESSING the deficits! Don't we all, instead of being thankful for the good hair, the good legs, the good hands. Those other things can be improved, every one of them.

S. W.: YOU SHOULD SEE A PHYSICIAN at once. An 18 pound loss in two months means something wrong constitutionally, especially with the other condition you name.

FEATHERED PUMPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(AP)—Tiny tufts of black feathers on her black velvet shoes were a novelty displayed by Miss Barbara Davis at a debutante tea. The feather were in the center of crossed velvet straps over the instep. Her dress was black satin and the small black velvet hat had a ruffled brim of grosgrain ribbon.

Sub-Debs Rave Over Beautiful Play Outfits for Summer Days

Ten Year Olds Spurn Frills and Fanciful Models and Vote for Pajamas, Polka Dots, and Stripes.

By Rhea Seeger.

WHAT the very young feminine clothes hounds think of their summer apparel as planned by regular and understanding designers ought to be able to be heard, and even printed for the benefit of those slightly curdled and soured souls who insist that the very young have no proper respect and appreciation for the blessings they accept. For at last young clothes with lots of dash and individuality are arrayed in resplendent abundance in every shop where they may chance to enter. And maybe you think these discriminating youthful shoppers don't know their shops! . . . Your 1932 sub-debs are just as hard to please as you are, and they are just as thrilled as you are, and do a lot more shouting than you do when they find clothes that are clothes!

Life simply must be infinitely more interesting these days when youngsters can be clothed in fetching frocks, in colorful play clothes that are clever adaptations of your own swanky sports clothes, compared with the more than restricted wardrobes of pre-war childhood days when a well dressed child wore the inevitable Peter Thompson sailor suit, both summer and winter with the peak of sartorial splendor achieved with innocuous party frocks of limp silk.

You're in Luck.

If you are a girl and possessed of a flair for clothes, an appetite inherited from frivolous grandmothers and great grandmothers, you are in luck. You can start training when you are as old as 8 and still be shopping enthusiastically at 88 because everything is being done to encourage such a delightful habit. You will find cunning little party frocks of crisp dotted swiss with narrow bands of plain color for contrast. . . . Tailored linens are made by hand, trimmed with buttons and exquisitely sewed buttonholes, and some have clever appliqued motifs of colored linens. Sheer lawns and printed handkerchief linens for daytime wear and school days are practical enough to suit older people and different enough to suit the most critical small young shopper.

Ten year olds spurn frills and fanciful models. . . . Competing with the boy next door and half a dozen other kids in games that wear out clothes faster than a budget expires on a buying binge, they call for good sporting apparel that should be made of something as strong as sheet iron. Dresses of poplin, broadcloth, pique and sturdy linen crash will be accepted with shrill and generous thanks.

If you are a successful shopper for your children you have been expertly trained about likes and dislikes for certain colors. . . . Nothing is more tragic than a new frock of a hated shade. If stripes are loathed with as much fervor as the daily ration of spinach, the smart parental shopper brings home dots and checks and mutiny is adroitly avoided.

Simple Assignment.

Since very young Americans, both male and female, do their best to become saddle brown savages during the summer, shopping for summer clothes is reduced to an easy collecting of beach and bathing togs, some cool daytime frocks, and a few new frills for an occasional party. Whether you bravely but knowingly shop for these important things alone or with your exacting progeny who want what they want [a bit more childishly, but just as firmly as you do], the shops are filled with the very things you and they have finally agreed upon.

For instance, beach clothes. . . . You'll find some mighty good looking beach pajamas of jersey as illustrated at the extreme left of the photograph today. Slacks, sloppy, nautical and smartly copied from the models as worn by the grown-ups are fashioned of a soft, fine jersey. They fit tightly at the waist and have cuffs on the trousers. The striped jersey blouse or sweater is available in every color: red, blue, yellow, green and brown, and is usually worn with jersey slacks of the same color as the stripes crossing the white background of the sweater. If you are interested in ensembles, you will find roll-your-own caps also of the same striped jersey.

Linen Pajamas.

Second from the left in the picture is illustrated a pair of linen crash pajamas that go in for dots in a big way. . . . The background is a light tan with dollar size dots of deep, dark brown. These pajamas have a regular grown-up sun-tan backless arrangement with a single center strap shooting up the back and buttoning on the halter like neck collar. Dark brown bands of a plain material are used for contrast. Big, floppy hats, also of matching dotted material, or of tan and brown straw can be used for head covering and to complete this smart beach outfit.

The female of the species frankly goes wild about stripes, this season. . . . The youngest fashion hound wears stripes where ever and when ever she can.

FIRST EVENING MODES FOR FALL ARE APPEARING

At the extreme left and the extreme right you may see the back and front view of an evening frock Molyneux has created recently, and which in Paris has made a sensation. This dress is made of dark red velvet. The skirt is a streamline, falling loose but not flared, from the hips. At the center back seam Molyneux places a circular godet to give an outward movement like that of a train, though the skirt has no train.

Silver fox bands around the tops of the arms suggest nonexistent sleeves, these bands being held on by straps that make a loop around the back of the neck. The wide shoulder straps of the frock are joined and twisted at the back, and fall in two sash ends below the waistline at the center back. The girdle is made of rhinestone leaves.

Three Pretty Cotton Frocks Simply Made

By Clotilde.

ONE can hardly have too many pretty evening dresses, and this year it is an easy matter—especially for women who like to make their own dresses—because so many wash materials are used, and the cost is comparatively low. Pattern No. 3177 is for one of those charming dresses that will be lovely for either afternoon or evening wear. The design is simple, and just the thing for organdy, eyelet handkerchief linen, washable crêpe de chine, linen, and batiste. Making dresses of these materials means they can always be fresh and clean.

Chiffon is, of course, lovely for evening wear, and the original model was in a lovely yellow printed chiffon with the ruffles of plain yellow and the sash of brown velvet ribbon.

The bodice is perfectly easy to make. First, put in the darts on the front at the underarm seams, then finish the seams. Next, the ruffles must be cut and finished, either using the narrowest hemmer on the machine or having the edges picoted. There is a ruffle for each arm hole and two for the neck, perforations on the bodice showing where the second ruffle is to go.

The skirt is made of three tiers of ruffles, the top of the second ruffle being sewed to the bottom of the upper ruffle and the third or bottom ruffle being sewed to the bottom of the second one. For size 16 the skirt measures at the bottom about 3⅞ yards.

The pretty girlish dress made by pattern No. 2891, easy to make and darling to wear, is suitable for many different materials. Skirt and waist are cut separately and joined at the normal waistline. Short sleeves and a round neckline complete it. The skirt is cut with a panel front and back extending at the top to form a hip yoke at the sides. The seam edges of the panels should be turned under a seam's width, basted down over the edges of the side sections, then stitched twice on the machine—once close to the edge, then one-quarter inch above.

For the figure hard to fit the dress made by pattern No. 2791 is fine. And all because of the clever placing of the bias bodice lines. The skirt, too, gives the impression of length cut in slightly circular gores that fit smoothly over the hips.

If you have a dress that fits perfectly compare the principal length and width measures with those of the pattern and mark for any changes that are needed. These must be allowed for and the pattern chart shows the most economical way of placing the pattern pieces on the material.

Transfer all marks to the dress pieces and follow exactly. Put the bodice together first and turn in an even seam's width on the bottom edge of the upper part of both back and front. Baste over the lower sections and stitch twice on the machine—first exactly on the edge, then one-quarter inch above. Remove the bastings and press well. Baste the seams together and try on. The seams may be stitched together on the wrong side. the seams overcast separately and pressed open, or French seams may be used.

The short sleeves are finished with cuffs of the dress material and a soft girdle of the bodice material covers the joining of skirt and bodice.

The skirt is cut in six pieces and the gores are slightly circular. This makes the skirt swing gracefully at the bottom when in motion. The width at the bottom for size 36 is about 1⅞ yards. Printed and plain silk crêpe or one of the crinkle crêpes will be attractive looking.

Marriage Voted Best Vocation for Womankind

of them vote marriage, as a career, the best vocation for women.

But, understand, it is not just getting married—setting up furniture in a house or an apartment, two adults sharing the same roof and name—that is understood by the marriage career idea.

There is more dignity than there ever was to a domestic vocation run on the slap stick order of marrying to keep out of spinsterhood, or marrying to escape working, or marrying with the idea of demanding as much and contributing as little as possible.

Hits the Happy Medium.

It's interesting to note how the pendulum has swung back into a straight middle course road. For more than a decade we've been treated to a certain lowly appreciation of the woman in the home as compared with the contributions of the woman outside of it. It must be said in all fairness that no one, so much as the woman herself following the domestic pursuit, has been deprecatory about her vocation. True, the successful sister out in the business world had a way of making the homebody feel her position as a slightly inferior one. There was an undercurrent of feeling, spoken or not, in which the domestic woman allowed herself the unhappy indulgence of underestimating the true value of her home performance.

Not all married women, but too, too many, were inclined to the belief that marriage stood in the way of a "useful" career. Like any other duty performed in a spirit of rebellion, the result in many instances justified the charge that the work was inferior in the eyes of the world. There is no denying that marriage, as it involved the creation of a home and the care of husband and family, has seen some pretty bad days in the last decade or so.

If it was need of a greater pride in the duties of the home that affected so many of our married women, they no longer have that alibi for half hearted performance.

The problem beginning with this year of our Lord, 1932, women are not choosing between a home or a career, but choosing between getting married or making a career of marriage.

An Alternative Overlooked.

Making a career of marriage is the very pleasant alternative domestic debaters of yesterday overlooked. Perhaps it required an economic situation such as we are suffering at the moment to focus attention on the career possibilities in marriage. Or perhaps it was the time for the pendulum to swing steadily, and swing married women along with it, into a concentrated form of home occupation.

We are not trying to say, of course, that careers for women outside of the home are going to be curtailed because of the new dignity applied to the marriage career. We are not saying that women are yet prepared to give up their struggle for independence and large accomplishment outside the domestic walls. We are not predicting that the struggle will ever be abandoned. But we do say that the world is beginning to realize that being a wife and mother and a good homemaker is a career deserving of the highest prestige.

Marriage stood badly in need of the ballyhooing it is receiving nowadays. This most important of all careers, in so far as the national good is concerned, had a break coming to it. And it's getting it right now. In the long run, however, it is with you married women upon whom the decision rests whether its promised high prestige is to remain.

You have to feel that in your marriage you have the making of a glorious career. You have to be willing to accept the good with the bad in the pursuit of said career. You have to be willing to apply your best brains, your best efforts, your best disposition, your best everything to making a success of that job of yours.

Must Prove Worthy.

You have to expect ups and downs, discouragements, petty irritations. You have to realize that there is no living happily ever afterward unless on gives the best that is in her. You cannot hope to win a place of honor on the marriage career roll unless you prove worthy of that place.

As Miss Ida M. Tarbell recently said: "The country's crying need is for an enormous crop of the type of woman willing to give over her life to creating a graceful, wholesome, well disciplined home for a man, herself, and a group of children."

Until you adopt that plank into your marriage career you shall remain only a married woman.

Your virtues, as a marriage careerist, you should realize, are not insignificant gifts. You are not being old fashioned performing your domestic duties well. You're the new fashioned careerist. Important. In step with the times. With a grand and glorious chance of restoring marriage to the most envied of careers.

With those children of yours it is within your power to set new standards of thought. You can apply new ideals of success to replace the raucous, cheap, nonsatisfying ones of the era we are now leaving. You can establish new ideals of life so that your youngsters will be able to extract the sum total of happiness from life.

As a careerist you have a large order!

But a grand and glorious career!

Wool Corduroy Makes Debut for Summer Sports

PARIS.—(AP)—A new wool corduroy has made its debut for summer sports wear. It is woven with a wider rib than the velvet variety and is generally used in white.

One of the smartest summer sports costumes is a little jacket suit of white wool corduroy worn with a purple beret and scarf of knitted wool.

Murder on the Glass Floor

By Viola Brothers Shore

SYNOPSIS:

Colin Keats and his wife, Gwynn, leave Paris with a group of acquaintances and sail on the Albania for New York. The party includes Bill and Anne Fairchild and Bill's seventeen year old sister, Echo, and Lily Diaz, to whom Bill has been paying a great deal of attention, to the irritation of his wife. Jerry Leith, a brother of Gwynn Keats' first husband, Noel Leith, becomes engaged to Echo Fairchild. Michael Dare, who was a school friend of Gwynn's is at swords' points with most of the women in the party. She and Gwynn had quarreled over Noel Leith years ago and had never really made up afterwards. All the women feel unfriendly to Lily Diaz. A gay party is given in the new deck cafe on Christmas night.

INSTALLMENT IV.

The Shot in the Dark.

I REMEMBER thinking how beautiful the women looked snatching at the floating bubbles of color and trying to keep them out of reach of the marauding tips of enemy cigarets, and that Dr. Kramer's blond pointed beard and gentle eyes gave him the strangely incongruous look of a saint suddenly gone pleasure mad as he reached around the parrot cage, suspended near the companionway, for a red balloon.

"Change partners!" I called to tease Echo, who had been dancing continuously with Jerry Leith.

The idea seemed to appeal to Bill and "Change partners," he called again. Anulesco switched the record to a foxtrot and we all had a drink and then began to dance more wildly to the tune of "Without Love." All over the room balloons were popping.

It was Lily who said, laughingly, "You could fire a shot and nobody would know."

"Don't give anybody any ideas," warned Echo and cried "Change partners!" in order to take Jerry from her.

Suddenly the lights were switched off entirely. "Hey!" I called, "Who did that?"

"What's the difference?" replied Michael's voice. "Are you afraid in the dark?"

"Not me—I'm dancing with my——" An exploding balloon popped off the last word and everybody began to laugh.

The record was pushed back to the beginning and the dancing continued in the dark, punctuated by the occasional flare of a cigaret tip. It was a noisy dark, peopled with gusts of laughter, sudden shrieks, the jazz rhythm of the phonograph—and outside, trying to get in, that indescribable noise of the sea.

"Change partners!" a man's voice called and there was a scrambling and shrieking, and I found myself dancing with Anne, who asked me, "Where'd Gwynn go?"

I hadn't known she was gone.

"O, yes—while we were changing partners she slipped through the door. I felt the velvet of her dress."

At the next change I groped my way into the darkened writing room, and down the lighted but deserted corridor to our stateroom. I fully expected to find Gwynn there. But the stateroom was empty and I started back.

I stood in the darkened writing room, irresolute, waiting for I don't know what, listening to the laughter—the popping of balloons—the monotonous rhythm of the record and the insidious accompaniment of the sea.

Whenever I hear "Without Love" it comes back to me—that battle of sounds going out to meet each other, alternately triumphing and retreating—until that one unforgettable cry drove all the other noises before it. It was not exactly a scream, but something more poignant, followed by a call for lights.

"What is it? What happened?" I cried, opening the door into the café. As I did so the lights under the glass floor went on and outlined in their greenish glow stood Jerry Leith holding on his left arm the limp form of Lily Diaz. Her knees were bent and it was only Jerry's arm which kept her from slipping to the floor. I thought she had fainted.

Anne was saying in a dull tone, over and over, "I knew it—I knew it—I knew it——"

Good Old Curse.

"LIFE'S a match that doesn't strike," chanted the record, then grated into silence as Michael Dare put out her hand.

Dr. Kramer had carried Lily Diaz to the settee, backed against the service door. Some of us crowded round him in a futile, helpless way. But Jerry remained where he was, saying in a small voice, to any one who would listen, "She must have fainted—I didn't know——"

Something in Dr. Kramer's face as he straightened up slowly from his examination caused an apprehensive stillness in the air around him. His lips seemed unable to frame any words until he noticed Bill fumbling with one of the windows and muttering thickly, "Must have air—damn thing won't open——gotta have air——"

"Don't bother about that, Mr. Fairchild—it's no use." And he added, looking at our frozen faces, "She's dead."

Bill, clinging to the window frame, found words—thick words—flung jerkily across the paralyzed space between us. "You mean—she——?"

"O God—O God——" moaned Anne under her breath as she let herself drop into a chair. And Echo's voice cracked brittlely against the hushed wall of our incredulity as she said, "Good old curse."

"Be still!" I commanded sharply and found, through the outlet of my irritation, a return to reason.

"What is it?" I asked. "Heart disease?"

The doctor spread his hands in a gesture of uncertainty and his eyes remained riveted on them, staring.

There was a little choked cry from Anne and then Michael Dare stepped up to him and whipped a handkerchief from his pocket.

"Blood," she announced matter-of-factly, her tone an accusation of our horror. "He examined her, didn't he?" And she began to wipe the unprotesting hand.

"Thank you," murmured the doctor, as though contact with her had restored his professional poise, and turned once more to the settee. Echo, Michael, and the night steward—stronger nerved—closed in around him.

It was the night steward who said, finally, "Shot," and the doctor added, "Through the head."

There was a little choked cry from Jerry and my stunned eyes traveled from him to Bill, still clinging to the window frame as though he were going to be ill; to Anne, sunk in a chair, her face buried in her hands; to Echo staring at the settee; to Michael looking fixedly at the doctor, as though waiting for him to say or do something further, until the night steward asked "Where's the captain?" That simple question, or perhaps the tone in which he said it, brought us back to a sense of menacing reality.

A queer little moaning sound at my elbow caused me to turn. Elsie Graham, who had been standing as though petrified into a pose of classic horror, swayed suddenly as if some force had melted the rigidity of her knees.

"O Lord," Echo muttered impatiently, "what's she got to faint about?"

As I lowered her into the chair which the steward pulled forward, Elsie Graham opened her eyes. For a moment they smiled gratefully into the solicitous ones bending over her. Then she pushed away the glass which the night steward was pressing to her lips.

"Thanks—I'm quite fit," she murmured, "I just felt—dizzy."

"Of course," soothed the night steward, pressing her back into the chair, while the doctor urged, "Don't try to get up." He looked around at the rest of us. "Please stay here—everybody—I'm going to wake the captain," and started toward the stairs.

"He's not asleep," said Anulesco, a strange note of conviction in his usually suave voice.

I had little use for the man. He was good looking enough, with a high patrician nose and a lot of crinkly tan hair brushed straight back, and he carried himself in a rather distinguished way. Perhaps it was the incongruity of his carriage coupled with the servility of his manner which displeased me. The very first evening on board I had found him hovering about, anxious to supply anything we wanted—caviar or champagne—at any time between seven and seven. I have never been on a boat where I could not have those delicacies in my room at any hour, and the fact that he made a point of it annoyed me. I had never traveled with a night steward who found so many excuses for insinuating himself into my room.

Elsie Graham rose unsteadily to her feet. "I'm quite all right," she told the night steward stiffly when he sought, solicitously, to restrain her.

The Man at the Helm.

THE captain stood in his doorway, fully dressed, except for the soft felt slippers on his feet.

"Sorry to disturb you, sir," Dr. Kramer was saying, "but there's been an accident——"

The captain looked down at us and coughed—that dry, hacking cough of his—then started swiftly down the red carpeted stairs. We separated to make a little pathway for him. Nobody broke the silence in which he stared at the still form of Lily Diaz, his face grown grayer than his hair.

The doctor cleared his throat. "She's dead," he said quietly.

"Dead," repeated the captain mechanically. Then suddenly the word seemed to connect with its meaning and the color surged back into his face.

"Who did it?" he demanded hoarsely. "Who killed her?"

"Killed?" somebody gasped and somebody further away repeated "Killed?"

The doctor shook his head. "We only know—she was shot——"

The captain had turned once more to the settee and stood hunched over, looking down at it for so long that I whispered to Michael Dare, "I wonder what he's going to do——"

"He'd better do something," she muttered impatiently, "before we all go dotty." And suddenly she raised her voice. "What are you going to do?" she inquired practically.

The captain stared at her and she repeated her question a little impatiently. "Do?" he asked dully.

Anulesco stepped forward. "Miss Dare wants to know what you're going to do about finding out who killed Mrs. Diaz."

Angry color flooded the captain's face, and Elsie turned on the night steward with a little cry. "Why do you say that?" and Michael Dare added sharply, "Do you know what that would mean? That one of us was a murderer!"

"Murderer?" screamed Bill. "One of us?"

"Of course, you fool," snapped Michael. "Nobody else is up on the boat!"

Bill subsided dazedly into a chair. Anne, who had not stirred, buried her face deeper into her hands, and moisture began to trickle through her rigid fingers.

Michael turned to Anulesco. "What makes you think she didn't kill herself?"

He shrugged. "I did not say that—I only suggested——"

"That will do," the captain cut in sharply, "you will keep your suggestions until I ask for them."

"Yes, sir," replied the night steward—but in back of his servility there was something antagonistic—and mocking.

AND suddenly my attention was turned from him to the captain, who began to purple ominously, his breath growing audible and labored. He opened his mouth, but no words came. Instead there was something like a gasp and his hand flew to his throat.

In a moment the night steward had pulled forward a wicker arm chair, with cretonne cushions, which stood between the windows, and the doctor, letting him into it, began to loosen his collar. Elsie rushed to her father's side, pushing away the night steward, who joined us where we stood, utterly bewildered by this additional upset. I could not see the captain, but only the grave face of Dr. Kramer as he bent over him.

"It's bad for him," murmured Anulesco, "another murder on his boat."

"Why do you keep saying murder?" Jerry demanded. "Who could have murdered her—here?"

"It's crazy," snapped Echo, "there was nobody in here but us—and we've all been right here together, haven't we?"

"Of course," began Michael Dare, then stopped as though her train of thought had suddenly encountered an obstacle. She turned, then her eyes moved slowly around the room until they encountered mine. "By the way, Colin, where's your wife?"

"She went out at the beginning of the dance—she's gone to the stateroom."

"O, really?" asked Michael, and I began to feel vaguely uncomfortable.

"Nobody could have killed Lily Diaz in this very room," protested Jerry, "under our eyes! How could they?"

"It was dark," Michael Dare reminded him. "Any one could have come in."

"No, they couldn't," I pointed out, "I was outside in the writing room."

"All the time the lights were out?"

"Yes," I lied, under that instinct which makes us all lie in a moment of stress. I did not want to admit that I had followed my wife to the stateroom—nor that I had not found her there. "I went out there to wait for Gwynn. When I heard Jerry cry out I came running. Nobody could have passed me without my being aware of it."

And I was certain that was true, even though the lights in the writing room had been switched out. Because anybody entering from the corridor would have let in the corridor lights.

"Then," assumed Anulesco, "either she killed herself or she was shot by somebody in this room—since the service door was barred by the settee and Mr. Keats was outside the other one."

"AND there is no other entrance."

"Except that companionway leading up to the captain's quarters."

None of us had noticed Elsie Graham and we all turned guiltily to face her. "Nobody could have come down those stairs!" she blazed. "They lead right into my father's sitting room!"

"Certainly—nobody could have come down those stairs if the captain was in his sitting room."

"He was!" cried Elsie, her voice raised angrily.

The captain stirred and opened his eyes.

"What?" he asked, feeling rather than seeing our concentrated gaze.

"I was just saying that you were up in your sitting room—since midnight."

"Don't exert yourself, sir," the doctor warned, his finger on the other man's pulse.

The captain appeared not to hear him. "Why, yes—I was writing——" he began vaguely, putting up his hand in the gesture of feeling for his spectacles. Not finding them, he let his head roll back again and the doctor bent over him anxiously.

"Would you like me to help you to your room, sir?"

"No—no——" murmured the captain. "Be all right—have to have—'vestigation——" However, he permitted the doctor to force a white tablet between his lips.

It struck me as pitiful that the captain of a liner should not be able to meet any emergency with calmness and decision. Suppose we had encountered an iceberg, or a fire, or any sort of calamity of great proportions! Wasn't a captain supposed to take command and keep panic from the others?

"What is it? What happened?"

Gwynn Turns On the Light.

Full of impatient resentment, I started for the door.

"Where are you going, Colin?" Michael Dare asked.

"To get Gwynn." I could feel myself changing color. "I thought she'd want to be—in on this."

"She is," laughed Michael, "as much as any of us. And so are you, Colin."

"I don't think anybody should leave this room," suggested Anulesco, "until the captain permits it—at least not alone."

"All right," I agreed sulkily. "Any objections to Mrs. Fairchild coming with me?"

ANULESCO took it upon himself to handle the situation. "No doubt Mrs. Keats should be here. But perhaps it would be better if I went with Mrs. Fairchild." Nobody seemed to notice the absence of his customary servility. "Being a stranger, there would be no question of collusion."

"What do you mean?" I began furiously.

"Easy there," admonished Michael, and added, "Better take every precaution."

I subsided sulkily, my eyes following the night steward and Anne, who had risen unsteadily and accompanied him without a word.

Michael was summing up in a low tone. "I don't believe there's anybody else up on the boat. And if there were, who would have known that the lights were out? And been able to get in, past Colin or the captain? It stands to reason that none of us killed Lily Diaz. In some way, for some reason, she must have committed suicide! That's pretty evident."

"Is it, Michael?" We all turned sharply to see Gwynn standing in the doorway, surveying the room. "Don't you think we ought to have a little light?" And as she reached for the switch I realized that we had been floundering around in the dull greenish glow from under the glass on the dance floor.

We were a sad looking group—the captain sunk back against the white arm of his daughter—the doctor watching with some anxiety his labored breathing—Bill slouched down at the table, his fleshy hands dangling impotently between his knees. And if I looked as shaken as Jerry or as pale as Echo, we were also a pitiful looking trio. Even Michael Dare had trouble connecting her cigaret with the wavering flame in her hand.

"O, Gwynn," began Echo, "the most terrible thing——"

"I know," interrupted Gwynn, coming toward us, "Anne told me."

"Where is Anne?" asked Bill, rousing himself.

Gwynn's mouth twisted into the semblance of a smile. "They'll be right along. What's the matter with the captain?"

We told her and she looked at him a moment, thoughtfully. Then she walked over to the settee. The doctor crossed to her quickly.

"I think it would be better if you didn't touch her."

"May I look without touching?"

I wondered what was going through her mind as she stood there staring down at Lily Diaz. Was she as baffled and bewildered as the rest of us? Or had she already seen something that had escaped our notice? But she looked quite grave and troubled as she turned her back to the settee and regarded us. "Has anybody any idea how it happened?"

"She committed suicide," volunteered Echo, "while the lights were out——"

"O, really?" said Gwynn, "and did you find the gun?"

Involuntarily we all looked down at the floor as though we expected to see it lying there.

When I looked up again I could have sworn I saw a light in Gwynn's eyes, as though something had ignited a spark of thought in back of them. But in a second it was gone. Whatever she had seen, or surmised, she meant to keep to herself. Her face was absolutely expressionless, she continued as though the current of her speech had not been interrupted.

"DON'T you think that if she shot herself there'd be a gun—somewhere?"

"Naturally," replied Michael tartly. "We've been too upset to look for it."

I had an idea. "She had a gun in her purse. Perhaps it's still there." I started toward the table that held the victrola, on one end of which lay Lily Diaz's brocaded bag. But Gwynn stopped me.

"She would hardly have put it back and closed her purse after shooting herself."

Embarrassed by a sense of my own stupidity, I was glad of the diversion created by the captain, who now was sitting up, but looking ghastly.

"It's been a shock to my father," Elsie explained to Gwynn. "He's been under a frightful strain. His heart isn't very strong."

"He'll be himself in a few minutes," added the doctor. "His pulse is getting stronger——"

"You're sure you don't want Dr. Masters?" Elsie asked her father anxiously.

He shook his head. "No sense. Enough in already. Can't do anything—for her?"

The doctor replied with grave finality, "Can't do anything for her."

It seemed to me I saw tears in the eyes which the lids now covered, as the captain murmured something to the doctor, who crossed to us.

"The captain wishes you all to remain where you are for a few more minutes——"

Gwynn asked him a question in an undertone.

"No," he answered, in the same low key, "I didn't see any trace of it."

"She hadn't done or said anything—to make anybody believe she was depressed or——"

"Not her!" exclaimed Echo, with a little laugh. At Gwynn's warning, "Sh—Sh——" she lowered her voice. "She was in fine form. She seemed to be having everything her own way."

"That's all you know!" snapped Bill. "She was just acting that way to hide a breaking heart."

The silly theatricalism of the words was lost in the terrific earnestness of the whispered tone. We all spoke more or less in low rumbles, out of regard for the captain. "She was a very unhappy woman."

"O, yes?" sneered Echo. "How do you know that?"

"Because I——" He stopped abruptly. "I know it," he concluded sulkily.

"Would you mind telling us what she was unhappy about?" inquired Gwynn gently. "You see, if it should be murder, I guess we'd all be held. So if you know any motive she may have had for doing away with herself——?"

He did not answer and Echo surmised contemptuously: "He doesn't know anything. She had him so hypped——"

"Is that so! I happen to know that she was eating out her heart for a man she couldn't have!"

Echo laughed, but Gwynn silenced her. "Granted she may have had a motive, what could she have done with the gun?"

"She might have dropped it, don't you think?" and there was more than a suggestion of a sneer in Michael Dare's voice.

"Through the floor?" asked Gwynn.

"No, but in this sea it might have rolled," and seizing on that simple explanation we started around the room, looking under chairs and tables. Some of the more energetic ones, like Echo and Michael, went further and lifted up the cushions in the arm chairs and poked around generally.

Meanwhile Gwynn continued to speak under her breath to the doctor, and I saw his hand travel to the back of his head, pointing to a spot at the base of his skull. "Death was instantaneous," I heard him say.

"But could she have shot herself in the back of the head?"

"It hardly seems likely, but, of course, we haven't probed for the direction of the bullet."

"Which side of the head is it?"

He made a little motion with his forefinger in the air and then carried it once more to his head. "The right," he replied.

"Isn't it possible to point a gun at the back of your own head and pull the trigger?" I demonstrated with my pipe how it could be done.

"Possible, but not probable. It would be simpler and more natural here," he pointed to his temple, "or here," and his finger traveled to the roof of his mouth.

"But still," I persisted, "you could take a gun in your right hand and——"

"You could," interrupted Gwynn, "if you were right handed."

Of course, Lily Diaz was not.

"Besides," Gwynn went on as the searchers came up and joined us, "you didn't find any gun rolled into any corners, did you?"

The question was addressed to Michael, but it was answered by Echo. "There's no sign of a gun anywhere in this room. There aren't many places where you could hide one, and I've looked in all of them."

"I guess," said the doctor, "that somebody on this boat will be wanted for murder."

Christmas!

"WHAT happens in a case of murder on a boat?" asked Gwynn, when our natural excitement had abated.

"This is my first trip," replied the doctor. "I guess there will be an investigation by the captain, and that the police will board us somewhere down the line. And I guess everybody will be detained and questioned."

I think the idea of being personally involved shocked us more than the tragedy itself. But Gwynn continued to talk quietly to the doctor.

"You know, doctor, you speak remarkably good English for a foreigner Were you born in Germany?"

"I was," replied the doctor, "but I was educated in England."

"Weren't you ever in America?"

"Never—why are you smiling?"

"Because I never heard anybody but an American say 'I guess.'" She looked around at the rest of us. "I guess we would save ourselves considerable inconvenience if we found out how it happened."

"Perhaps you can tell us how it happened," prodded Michael Dare.

Gwynn checked the obvious impulse to reply and said instead: "We can't sit here helplessly and wait to be taken ashore. We have to do something."

"What would you suggest?" drawled Michael Dare, her tone a challenge.

"I suggest we get busy, among ourselves, and try to check up on this thing."

"O, I daresay the captain will look into it," Michael reassured her.

"WE'VE got to do more than look into it—we've got to solve it. Do you know what it will mean to us if we don't?"

"What can they do to you?" asked Echo. At seventeen the prospect of an inquest is more thrilling than appalling.

"Well, for one thing, they can haul you through an awful lot of mud. I know there are things I wouldn't want dragged out of me at a public hearing."

"Really, now?" taunted Michael.

Gwynn never loses her temper. "It might be inconvenient for you to explain why you came on this boat, for instance."

Only for a second Michael Dare's green eyes darkened. Then she replied calmly, "Not at all. I came because I haven't seen my family in years. We're really quite devoted."

"Really now?" retorted Gwynn. "Since when? You didn't by any chance resurrect that devotion very suddenly, the night of Anne's party?"

"Come on, girls," I pleaded, "don't let's——"

"Here's the captain," interrupted Echo.

He had risen unsteadily and was coming toward us.

"Do you feel better?" the doctor asked.

"Yes—thank you." And aside from his pallor he was no longer a pitiful spectacle. "I think, perhaps, before we begin we had better have Parsons in."

"The stenographer," explained the doctor.

"If my shorthand will be of any help," I volunteered, and Gwynn assured them: "Colin is a first class stenographer. Don't you think it might be better if we didn't bring in anybody else?"

The captain thought that would be very wise, if Mr. Keats didn't mind.

"How about the secret service man?" asked Echo.

"What secret service man?" The captain wheeled on her so sharply that she looked positively frightened.

"The—the one on board."

"What makes you think——?"

Echo backed down. "I'm sorry—I just thought—there was one——"

"We will avail ourselves of his services if necessary," rejoined the captain stiffly.

New Idea Saves Floors

Your beds won't mar the hardwood or varnished floor and they won't be a bit hard to move if they are equipped with this new device shown at the recent show at the American Furniture Mart. Four metal legs with rollers are placed out of sight under the bed. They carry the weight of the bed, making it unnecessary to have side rails. And the wooden feet are there just for looks.

Mussolini Considers Fascism to Be Creed of Religious Force

ROME.—(AP)—Fascism is essentially religious, says Mussolini in an article he has written for the Encyclopedia Italiana.

"Fascism," defines Il Duce, "is a religious conception in which the man is viewed in his relationship to a superior law, to an objective will which transcends the particular individual and elevates him to be a conscious member of a spiritual society.

"Whoever in the religious policy of the Fascist régime stops at consideration of mere opportunism has not understood that Fascism, in addition to being a system of government, is also, and above all, a system of thought."

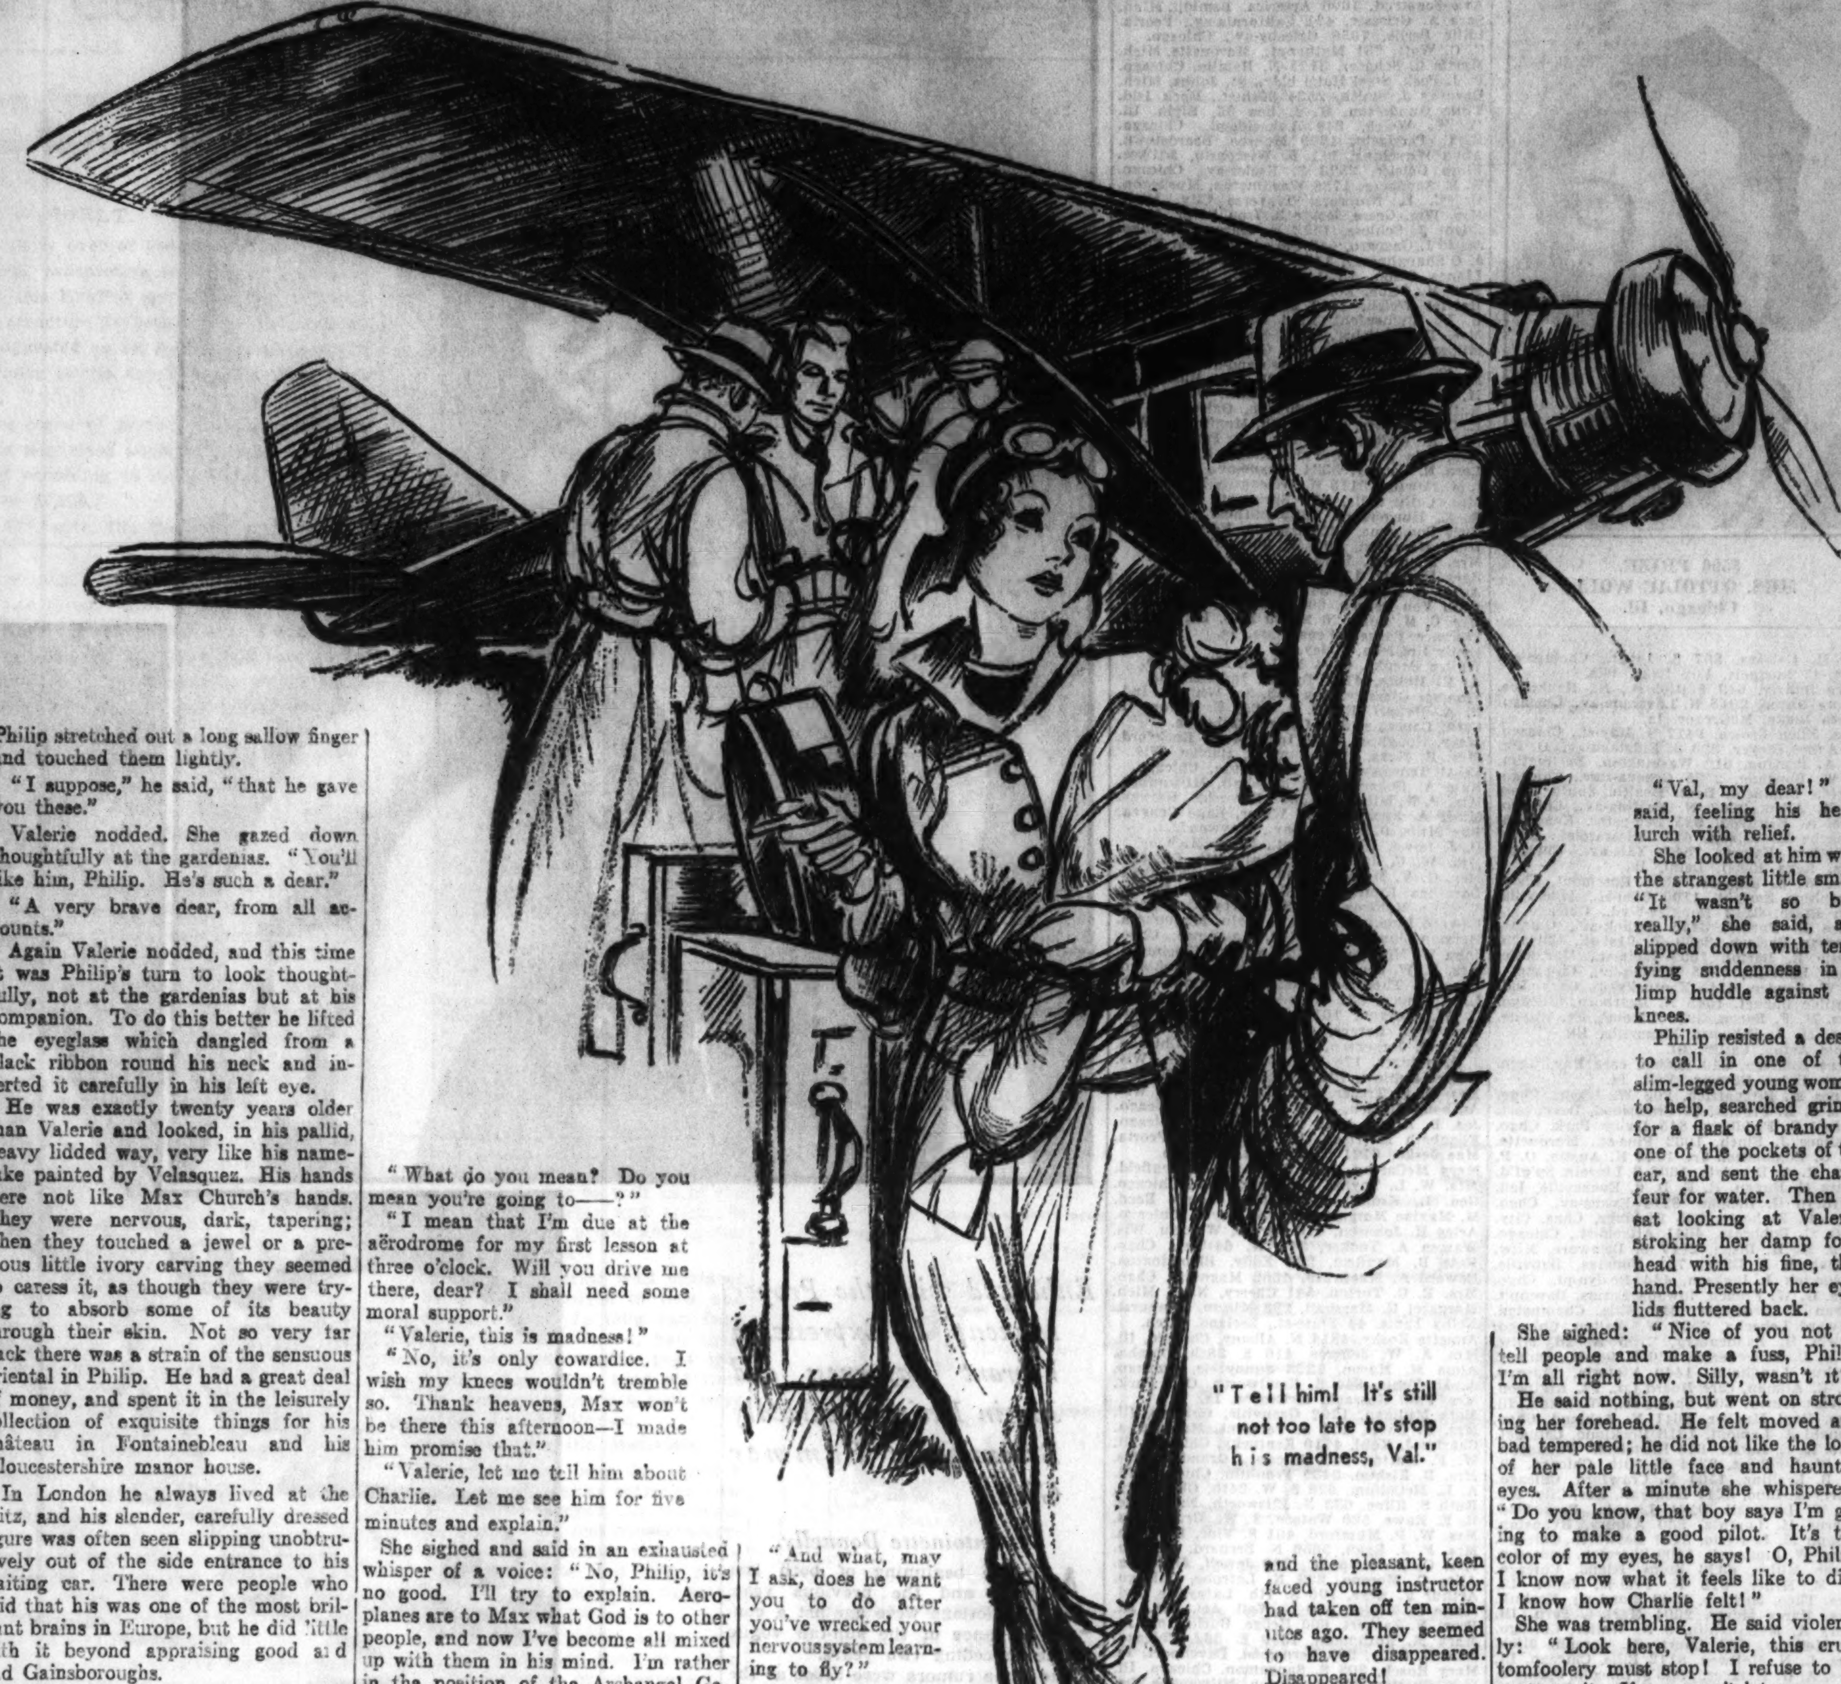
The Story of Valerie Church, Who Conquered Terror in a Great Undertaking; Whose Iron Will Helped Her Pilot the Airplane That Was to Carry Her Straight Across the Atlantic.



"Tell him! It's still not too late to stop his madness, Val."

By now the whole world is familiar with the name and face of Valerie Church. It has come to symbolize an age, a spirit, a generation, just as the beautiful naked youth, discus in hand, symbolized the glory that was Greece. The sensation worshiping world of the twentieth century, third decade, seemed to find expression of all its best virtues in the face of Valerie Church. It is, from every point of view, a curiously interesting face—the large, sad eyes and childish modeling of cheek and forehead, tapering to unexpected strength in the mouth and chin.

Nearly always the photographs show it clipped in the nunlike coif of a flying helmet. They seem to like her that way—standing, shapeless in padded leather, by the machine that she piloted on her epic Atlantic flight, with its name standing out in black letters over her head. The name of the machine was Courage.

And from the beautiful naked youth, discus in hand, it seemed but a stone's throw to Valerie Church soaring up among the clouds, a lonely, intrepid speck in a winged thing called Courage. The world lifted its face and watched her; held its breath; screamed its stupid throat hoarse when she came to earth again, and stepped out of the cockpit, helmet and goggles in hand, asking in that cool, unemotional little voice of hers, "Any one got a cigaret?"

That, too, had become an epic. When the Courage had swooped down toward the flooding white arc lights of the New York aërodrome, to be engulfed instantly by an enormous, swaying, hysterical crowd Valerie Church had pulled off her helmet and had asked in a tired little voice, "Any one got a cigaret?" The crowd sobbed, laughed, roared. A score of hands pushed packets towards her, and the manufacturers of the chosen cigaret cabled next day with an offer of ten thousand dollars for the use of her name and the slogan.

They were refused, politely and firmly. The next day, too, the press of two continents recorded that Valerie Church's first remark after the now famous request for a cigaret had been, "I must cable my husband," and then, very wearily, "I want to go to bed."

Valerie Church had been born Valerie Bosanquet, youngest daughter of old Lord Marsh, the shipping magnate. It was easy to see the family resemblance, although she was slim and dark, and old Marsh was a great red man with salty blue eyes and the nose of an imperious vulture. But there was steel in both faces. Sometimes, in the most startling way, it seemed to be old Lord Marsh staring grimly out of the nunlike coif of Valerie's flying helmet

She was twenty-four when she first met Max Church. It was not difficult to imagine him piloting a frail winged thing through the air, mounting to dizzy heights with the world slipping drunkenly away below. There was a suggestion of something keen, reckless, and buoyant about him. He was four inches over six feet, blond as a Viking, with the blunt-edged, sensitive hands of the born mechanic. The music of a sweetly running engine was to him what the Fifth Symphony may be to another man.

Over one fair eyebrow was a neat white scar, a three inch, zigzagging record of his motor racing days when his car, traveling at ninety miles an hour, had hurled him like a human catapult across Brookland's track. Those clever hands of his were covered in scars, too, but his luck was amazing. After his escape as sole survivor from a blazing cross-channel plane they started calling him Lucky Max Church.

He had an extraordinary fascination for women and knew it, and traded on it blithely. Not every man liked him, in spite of his reputation for good sportsmanship. But when he met Valerie he ceased to be the charmeur; he ceased to be Max Church, the particular lion of the moment, the air ace who had broken nearly every record there was to break. He was quiet; sent that great laugh of his booming out less often; spoke with a beautiful, abstracted courtesy to the other women in the house party, and looked at them as though they were rag dolls prettily painted and dressed by artists.

The day after the papers went into headlines with the engagement of the famous airman, Capt. Max Church, to the beautiful youngest daughter of Lord Marsh, Valerie lunched at the Ritz with her friend, Philip Lester. It was an October day, crisp as a wafer flavored with honey and champagne. Beyond the swinging doors Piccadilly swam in sunlight deliciously hazed with autumn; women strode in and out, cheeks bright over leopard and silky caracul, leading French bulldogs with stiff ruched collars and emerald green leads. And presently, to Philip waiting in a dim corner of the lounge, came Valerie walking quickly and lightly, standing alertly poised for a moment, and then spying out Philip in his lair.

She was dressed in black with a ridiculous little broadtail jacket like the jerkin of a Florentine page, and to the lapel was pinned a great cluster of creamy, thick fleshed gardenias. Philip stretched out a long sallow finger and touched them lightly.

"I suppose," he said, "that he gave you these."

Valerie nodded. She gazed down thoughtfully at the gardenias. "You'll like him, Philip. He's such a dear."

"A very brave dear, from all accounts."

Again Valerie nodded, and this time it was Philip's turn to look thoughtfully, not at the gardenias but at his companion. To do this better he lifted the eyeglass which dangled from a black ribbon round his neck and inserted it carefully in his left eye.

He was exactly twenty years older than Valerie and looked, in his pallid, heavy lidded way, very like his namesake painted by Velasquez. His hands were not like Max Church's hands. They were nervous, dark, tapering; when they touched a jewel or a precious little ivory carving they seemed to caress it, as though they were trying to absorb some of its beauty through their skin. Not so very far back there was a strain of the sensuous oriental in Philip. He had a great deal of money, and spent it in the leisurely collection of exquisite things for his château in Fontainebleau and his Gloucestershire manor house.

In London he always lived at the Ritz, and his slender, carefully dressed figure was often seen slipping unobtrusively out of the side entrance to his waiting car. There were people who said that his was one of the most brilliant brains in Europe, but he did little with it beyond appraising good and bad Gainsboroughs.

He was very fond of Valerie. He had loved her ever since he went to stay for the first time at Marsh, and the nearest possible approach to an elf, made human by scratched knees and blue serge bloomers, had rowed him on the lake in a leaking old dinghy and had asked him seriously what he thought of Darwin's theory of evolution. To this day he remembered her enormous eyes staring solemnly at him from under the thatch of a battered chip hat, and the pink water lillies with dripping, slimy coils of rubbery roots that she had tugged out of the mud and piled confidingly into his shrinking lap. Dear Valerie! Perhaps if there had been no such person as Max Church he might have tried . . .

"Give me a cigaret, Philip," she said.

He sat and watched her smoke four in quick, nervous succession, stubbing out the ends, ringed with her lipstick, in vicious little darts of the wrist. He sat and watched her insult good food by smoking while they waited for the courses. Then he jerked the monocle out of his eye and passed a hand once or twice over his dark, carefully shaved chin.

"What's the matter, Val?" he asked.

Her eyes were not gray at all. They were black—shining, terrified black in a white face.

"He wants me to fly," she said.

"Ah!" said Phillip thoughtfully. "He wants you to fly. And you feel——"

She looked at him. "Have you forgotten Charlie?"

"No," said Philip. "No, my dear, I haven't forgotten Charlie."

How could any one forget? Young Charlie Bosanquet, her brother, a spirit no less fearless and far more delicately fibered than Max Church. Before he was killed he wrote three or four war sonnets that would live long after those who remembered the poet was dead. He had been every one's darling, in particular Valerie's darling. He was in the air force, stationed at a camp not twenty miles from Marsh. And by some dreadful irony of fate it had been the child Valerie who, dreaming on that very lake where she and Philip plucked the water lilies, had seen a plane circle over the old house, falter suddenly, and spiral into a spin, right itself for a sick moment, and then crash down, down with a thin blade of flame shooting out like the tail of a crazily gyrating kite.

It had been Valerie who, suddenly clairvoyant, had shrieked, "Charlie!" and scrambled out of the dinghy and started to run, stumbling, and screaming "Charlie! Charlie!" to where the rooks in the elms were squawking hoarse terror at the twisted, charred mass of wreckage flaming on the ruined lawns.

She looked at Philip with a pale, bright smile. "Do you know, I haven't dared to tell Max, but for years after that I used to be sick every time I saw a plane. Even the sound of one humming above the clouds used to throw me into a cold sweat."

"Does he know about Charlie?"

"He may do. I never told him. Even if he did, it wouldn't make any difference. He wouldn't understand—would be quite incapable of understanding how a thing like that can shatter one's nerve. Max doesn't know the existence of such a word as 'nerves.'"

"Well," said Philip a little sharply, "he can be made to learn."

"No," said Valerie softly, "I don't think so."

"What do you mean? Do you mean you're going to——?"

"I mean that I'm due at the aërodrome for my first lesson at three o'clock. Will you drive me there, dear? I shall need some moral support."

"Valerie, this is madness!"

"No, it's only cowardice. I wish my knees wouldn't tremble so. Thank heavens, Max won't be there this afternoon—I made him promise that."

"Valerie, let me tell him about Charlie. Let me see him for five minutes and explain."

She sighed and said in an exhausted whisper of a voice: "No, Philip, it's no good. I'll try to explain. Aeroplanes are to Max what God is to other people, and now I've become all mixed up with them in his mind. I'm rather in the position of the Archangel Gabriel, and if Max learns that I'm terrified of what he loves best in the world—O, how heavily I shall fall! I don't mean that he would stop loving me, but it might spoil things and change them fatally. Max is such a baby, Philip. He adores playing with the air as a baby plays with bricks, and he wants me to play, too. That's all."

Philip had a sudden sensation of helplessness, both disconcerting and unusual. The memory of a genuine Rembrandt that he had lost to a Chicago stockyards millionaire slipped irritatingly through his mind; he gazed with dislike at the Moselle he was drinking and a note of exasperation crept into his voice.

"But surely, my dear girl, the young man is human. He loves you. He wouldn't want to cause you all kinds of mental suffering. If you'd let me explain about the shock of poor Charlie's death he'd understand——"

"He'd understand that I was a coward. You don't know Max. He's the most utterly fearless creature I've ever known, bar Charlie. Do you think I might have a brandy with my coffee? I'm told it helps sometimes."

"And what, may I ask, does he want you to do after you've wrecked your nervous system learning to fly?"

Valerie got out a flat onyx case and examined her complexion without interest and laughed a little.

"He's going to buy a new plane and we're going to fly to Africa for our honeymoon. And now let's talk of something else, please. Tell me, Philip, did you get that Rembrandt you were after the other day?"

"Tcha!" said Philip irritably.

The aërodrome was large and brown, and on the parched looking grass three or four planes rested negligently, looking like immense insects that had fluttered out of some gargantuan machine age. A gay little model painted vermilion and cream was trundled out of the sheds. Philip stood watching it for a few moments as it teetered delicately over the ground and rose into the sunshine. Then, once more he lifted his aching neck and searched the sky for any signs of the plane in which Valerie and the pleasant, keen faced young instructor had taken off ten minutes ago. They seemed to have disappeared. Disappeared!

He fretted his way back to the clubhouse. Two or three groups were sitting about having tea. More young men with pleasant, keen looking faces; girls in tweeds and gay little sweaters, slim legs crossed, nursing flying helmets on their laps together with their bags and powder puffs and Sealyham terriers. Philip, loitering miserably heard scraps of conversation.

"Where's Rosemary?"

"She's up with Capt. Benson. She's going to do her solo tomorrow——"

". . . had a spot of engine trouble just as he——"

". . . got to Le Bourget slap on the stroke of seven o'clock. Pretty good, wasn't it? So I hopped into a taxi and——"

Philip went to wait in the car. He was so absorbed in his own nervous thoughts that he did not notice Valerie until she opened the door and sat down quietly beside him.

"Val, my dear!" he said, feeling his heart lurch with relief.

She looked at him with the strangest little smile. "It wasn't so bad, really," she said, and slipped down with terrifying suddenness in a limp huddle against his knees.

Philip resisted a desire to call in one of the slim-legged young women to help, searched grimly for a flask of brandy in one of the pockets of the car, and sent the chauffeur for water. Then he sat looking at Valerie, stroking her damp forehead with his fine, thin hand. Presently her eyelids fluttered back.

She sighed: "Nice of you not to tell people and make a fuss, Philip. I'm all right now. Silly, wasn't it?"

He said nothing, but went on stroking her forehead. He felt moved and bad tempered; he did not like the look of her pale little face and haunted eyes. After a minute she whispered: "Do you know, that boy says I'm going to make a good pilot. It's the color of my eyes, he says! O, Philip, I know now what it feels like to die! I know how Charlie felt!"

She was trembling. He said violently: "Look here, Valerie, this cruel tomfoolery must stop! I refuse to be party to it. If you won't let me speak to Max I shall speak to Lord Marsh."

"No," she said. "No, darling, you won't."

He was silent. She sat up, searched for her hat and bag. As he watched her, angry and uncertain, she looked at him over the poised scarlet tube of her lipstick.

"Got a cigaret?" she asked.

Philip went to see them off on their flying honeymoon that was destined to break yet another record from England to the Cape. It was a bitterly cold day and the bridesmaids, with fur coats flung over their chiffon dresses, laughed and huddled together like a flock of bright birds strayed out of their own temperate zone. In the background was the plane, powerful and glittering. Max Church stood beside it, laughing, his fair head uncovered; a little army of press and cameramen surged round him.

Philip found himself alone for two minutes with Valerie. She was dressed in a flying suit of green leather; she was composed and smiling.

"Bon voyage, Val," he said, "and all the luck in the world, darling."

Then he looked at her closely and saw that her eyes were the eyes of a drowning woman. She said in a frantic whisper: "It's as bad as ever, Philip. What am I to do?"

"Tell him! It's still not too late to stop this madness, Val."

She looked thoughtfully across at her husband. He lounged against the plane, still besieged by eager pressmen, but his blue eyes were watching Valerie. He laughed and waved a hand. He looked extraordinarily handsome, gay, confident. Philip stared at him bitterly.

Valerie said in a tired little voice: "No, I can't tell him. I shall be all right. If only I didn't die a thousand deaths every time I go up! How do I look? Not too pale?"

Somebody called, "Val!" She fastened the strap of her flying helmet and gave Philip a smile that he would remember all his life. Max Church seemed to shake off the newspaper men with one slow, indolent thrust of his big shoulders, as a large dog shakes himself free of water, and moved towards them. He lifted his wife in his arms and hoisted her up into the cockpit. He laughed his great booming laugh. Overalled mechanics ran out onto the field. There was a roar and the plane leaped into quivering life. Some one flung a satin shoe; a bridesmaid's thrown bouquet hit the tail of the machine, and arum lilies scattered on either side.

Philip stood with inscrutable raised face, watching them out of sight. A silver bird; a moving speck in a cold gray sky; a cold gray sky empty of bird or speck. One of the bridesmaids cried, "Let's go back to Claridge's and have lots of cocktails and dance! I've got that flat, after-the-funeral feeling."

In the next year Philip Lester saw little of the Churches. He was at the Fontainbleau château most of the time; when he went over to London they were usually making or breaking air records in some distant corner of the globe. He saw their photographs in the papers a good deal. Valerie was getting publicity on her own account now; already the public mind was being educated into familiarity with that delicate, stubborn face, those sad eyes beneath the severe leather coif. Philip's jaw always hardened a little when he saw those photographs.

He was in Paris when he found Valerie's eyes staring up at him again from an English paper. Side by side with her photograph was one of Max, hatless and laughing. The headlines glared:

CAPTAIN MAX CHURCH
SERIOUSLY INJURED.
FAMOUS AIR ACE CRASHES
ON EVE OF PROPOSED
ATLANTIC FLIGHT.

Philip searched for his eyeglass. His hands were a little unsteady.

"Capt. Max. Church, the famous airman, was seriously injured when the plane which he was piloting crashed yesterday afternoon near Westerham, Kent. The accident came on the very eve of Capt. and the Hon. Mrs. Church's proposed attempt to fly the Atlantic in their plane, the Seagull . . . luckily did not catch fire, but Capt. Church sustained severe spinal injuries . . . his wife, who was not in the plane at the time, was immediately summoned by telephone and made a dash. . . . Mrs. Todgrass, the wife of a local farmer and eyewitness of the accident, gives her own account of . . ."

Philip left for London that night. Valerie was staying at her father's house in Park lane. Her face seemed to have got smaller and her eyes, enormous in contrast, reminded Philip uncomfortably of the elf with scratched knees who had sat opposite him in a leaking old dinghy and talked solemnly of Darwin.

She said: "He'll never be able to fly again. Of course, you knew that."

Philip had not known. He was horribly shocked. It was impossible, indecent to think of that buoyant spirit broken and earthbound. Valerie said quietly: "Thank you, dear."

He looked at her sharply for a moment. Then his eyelids drooped. He murmured, swinging his eyeglass, "So that ends your flying days, too, Val. For him I'm desperately sorry. For you I feel nothing but thankfulness."

"No," she said composedly, "I shall go on flying."

"Are you mad, Valerie?"

"Max wants me to. His one fear was that he'd spoil my flying career and that I wouldn't be able to try the Atlantic. We'd talked about it so often, poor darling! His spirit is wonderful, Philip. He's cheerful and full of plans for the flight. Do you know what he said when he came round after the operation? He laughed and said, 'You'll have to do the flying for both of us now, Val'."

Philip threw up his hands, raised his shoulders, and was silent.

They had managed to keep the date of the Atlantic attempt a secret, and there were no newspaper men at the aërodrome to see the little Courage off. For this Philip felt devoutly thankful. He glanced round the small group of people who had come to wish Valerie luck. Two or three friends; old Lord Marsh, redder than ever, trying to hide intense emotion with bluster; Max Church being wheeled about in his invalid chair, his great voice booming, his face ablaze with excitement.

It struck Philip a little sourly that he seemed to spend his life in aërodromes, standing foolishly gaping at the silver speck that was Valerie vanishing into a cruel, empty sky. No doubt she didn't realize the strain and anxiety it was to him! And then he saw her walking towards him. She looked very slender and small in her green flying suit; a big spray of white heather was pinned to its breast. She swung her leather helmet in one hand and her dark curls blew about in the breeze.

"Got a cigaret, Philip?" she asked.

He lit it for her. His hand was unsteady. She whispered: "Dear Philip, don't worry! I've put such a burden of responsibility on you, haven't I?"

"God bless you, Val. Take care of yourself, darling."

She puffed frantically at her cigaret for a moment and threw it away. She looked at him with a pale, brilliant little smile.

"Have you noticed the name of my new plane?" she asked.

He stood dumbly watching while she fastened her helmet and walked away. She bent over her husband's chair for a minute, then walked steadily towards the machine. For a moment he had an agonized vision of stretches of sullen waiting sea, of Val flying alone through the endless night. Excited mechanics were running over the field. There was a muffled roar, and a tremor shook the little Courage; it started to run forward, gathering speed, skimming off the ground, rising beautifully into the air. A hand waved over the edge.

Some one shouted "Good luck, Val!" and Max Church, his face very pale, his blue eyes blazing, raised himself in his chair and started a cheer. It was taken up heartily by the mechanics. An hysterical woman in a mink coat started to sob, and Lord Marsh turned away, his red face twitching. Perhaps he was thinking of young Charlie crashing down beneath the elms at Marsh.

Philip remained standing, his sallow face upturned, his monocle glassily staring. The Courage was the size of a seagull now, speeding relentlessly into the clouds. Max Church, his great body huddled up in his chair, stared wistfully after it.

Beside Philip one of the mechanics said hoarsely, wiping his sweating face with an oily rag: "Gawd, sir, if she gets through she oughter 'ave the Victoria Cross."

Philip, white to the lips, stood there straining his eyes.

"Yes," he said heavily, "yes."

The Courage was out of sight. There was nothing to do now but wait. . . .

A Friend in Need

Discarded Garments in Your Home May Be the Means of Assisting Unemployed Back to Self-Supporting Work.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Do you know that there are hundreds of people in the city today who are suffering from the lack of clothing? They belong to that great army of unemployed; and it has been so long since they were able to buy any wearing apparel that now they either must borrow a coat, suit, or a pair of shoes when they go job hunting, or wear the rags that are the only things left from a once fairly extensive wardrobe.

Whatever chance they may have of securing work is utterly ruined by a ragged appearance. Do you wonder, then, that they are besieged by a feeling of hopelessness and despair? What good does it do to walk the pavement, day after day, in weather that's rainy or sweltering or freezing, depending upon the season, when a prospective employer, even if he had work to offer, wouldn't give it to a ragged applicant?

A number of you probably feel that the question of clothing is of minor importance in the summer time. It isn't. A fairly decent appearing outfit would make all the difference in the world to many of the people who have grown numb from privation and disappointment in the last two or three years. Their unkempt appearances indicate not only the state of their finances, but, in many cases, their mental attitude, as well. You can do much good by giving these men and women the garments you no longer need.

And there's hardly one of us who doesn't discard some piece of wearing apparel from time to time. A suit that has grown a bit shiny would be a welcome gift to some fellow without a job. The shoes which are a trifle scuffed at the toes or down at the heels could be repaired for some one else. Shirts frayed at the collar, socks with mending possibilities, dresses which can be altered, hats which can be cleaned—all these are needed, and needed desperately to take care of the hundreds of requests we have on file for clothing.

Won't you search the far corners of your house for potential gifts of wearing apparel? When you've done this just drop me a note telling what you have to give, and I'll see that it's placed in deserving hands.

Would Like Doll Carriage.

"I have two little girls, aged 5 and 3 years, who are eager to have a doll buggy, and I cannot buy it for them. They'd be so happy to get a carriage that some little girl may be discarding. My husband has been paralyzed for the last two years and we do not have money for anything except actual necessities. "MRS. F. K."

The little girl who must be deprived of a doll buggy is missing a great deal of the fun that most little girls have. If your young daughter has grown tired of hers or has fallen heir to a new one, perhaps you can donate the carriage which will make these children happy.

Needs Help with Decimals, Fractions

"Would one of your readers be kind enough to teach me elementary arithmetic? I need work in decimals and fractions, and an hour a week would help me immensely. W. K."

If you would like to devote some of your free time to a philanthropic enterprise, you might keep this in mind. Our correspondent would greatly appreciate your assitance.

In Need of Clothing.

"I am the mother of four children and expect to have another soon. My husband is out of work and I have no clothing for the new baby or gowns for myself. If you can help me with these things I shall be very grateful to you. MRS. T. L."

Can you relieve this mother of some worry and insure at least a little comfort for the infant when it arrives by giving any tiny garments you may have.

A Bag for Formal Evening Wear

Black, sleek satin is dramatically contrasted with chalk white braid embroidery on this formal evening bag that goes out of nights with long clinging evening gowns. The bag, shown in a Chicago shop, is sufficiently capacious to hold all the what-nots and gadgets for restoring the complexion, the chiffon handkerchief, money, and the inevitable key.

Imitation Spider Webs Trim Smartest Frocks

PARIS.—(AP)—The spider's web furnishes the inspiration for trimmings on a number of the summer's smartest frocks. Large round motifs of dark blue, black, or brown traced with fine white lines resembling a spider's web are applied on sleeves and bodices of both light and dark dresses.

A school of oratory for women has been opened in Paris. The school, directed by Mme. Kraemer-Bloch, one of the prominent women lawyers of Paris, will assist young women law students in acquiring eloquence and train the students in parliamentary procedure.

Mrs. Edward Eslick, wife of the late United States congressman from Tennessee, is seeking election to congress to fill the vacancy caused by her husband's death. Representative Eslick died on the floor of the house from a heart attack while speaking on behalf of the soldiers' bonus.

Eleven women are engaged in the United States trade commission—three trade commissioners, four assistant trade commissioners, and four clerks.

CHICAGO WOMEN WIN FIRST AND SECOND PRIZES IN $5,000 "PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES" CONTEST

Entrants Enthusiastic in Tribune Game of Nominating First Citizen.

THE number of entrants in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S $5,000 "Presidential Candidates" contest, offered to the readers of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE from April 3 to June 5, suggested an enthusiastic interest not alone in the thrills of the game but in the selecting of our great republic's President.

Prizes were offered to the 430 contestants sending in the finest complete sets of pictures wherein the composite parts of presidential nominees' photographs were assembled accurately and joined in perfectly matched lines. Neatness was a considerable factor in the pasting and joining of these trisections.

The rules called for a letter of fifty words or less from each contestant naming his choice among the candidates for the presidency and giving reasons for his selection. It was in these statements that patriotism fired utterances of intense feeling for or against a nominee.

Ritchie, Hoover, and Smith seemed to be the favorites, though each name was lauded by an appreciable number.

The first prize money of $1,000 was won by Mrs. Helen Johannes of 3168 Pine Grove avenue, Chicago. The entry, simple, accurate, and flawlessly neat, won the top award from among a large group of finely competitive entries.

The second winner, Mrs. Ottolie Woll of 4124 North Meade avenue, Chicago, receives $500, while third prize of $250 goes to Oliver B. Allen Jr. of 402 Third avenue South, Evansville, Ind.

Strong Views Much Better Left at Home

It's Wiser to Remain With Them Than to Attempt Their Raucous Defense.

By Helen Bartlett.

TWO stormy political conventions in one season have just about ruined social intercourse in some parts. That cool reserve, or rather polite indifference, which one displays in society about politics, religion, or nationalities has been badly shattered on occasion.

The fiery partisan or the ardent soul who lives for raucous argument should leave his partisanship and his ardor at home when he goes out to dine. Discussion is the staff of social life—but argument is its arsenic.

It seems incredible in this sophisticated age that a place at the dinner table should be mistaken for the rostrum by any one, but that often happens, particularly during national conventions when politics is in the air.

One Tale of Woe.

One hostess, telling her tale of woe, practically wept. Her troublesome guest was a man (although we've noted that they aren't always men) whom she included in her party to one of the sessions. Before the convention recessed for the day she was awfully sorry he'd come. Packed tight in a crowded hall, filled with persons of many views and persons who were certainly entitled to their views, the gentleman held forth at length. Religion, politics, and nationalities were the three sweet subjects he chose to discuss. Personally, we prefer our dynamite in packages that are plainly labeled.

His hostess has all our sympathy on two counts: First, that she'd made such an unfortunate choice in that one guest, and, second, that among her other guests there was not one savior in the person of a man or woman who could stem the tirade by a thrust of wit. It could have been done, should have been done.

A long and partisan oration by a guest presents a social situation similar to the one known as the "deathly pause." Either a sharp bit of wit or a change of the subject is the only remedy. Neither will be interpreted as a cold snubbing if it is presented cleverly.

Bar Controversial Subjects.

At a dinner table where diners are other than members of the family all heavy subjects heavily discussed should be taboo. And, above all, politics and religion should be avoided. These are subjects on which any one has the right to strong feelings, but the utterance of convictions is unpardonable. If one guest is so bad mannered as to introduce the subjects and expound upon them the other guests can only listen politely and at the first possible moment leap into the breach with a change of subject.

Discussion of personalities is equally taboo. At a social gathering it is neither polite nor sensible to express one's opinion of any one else. Conversation as an art does not consist in violently expressed opinions; at parties conversation should be animated, witty, and interesting, but never strongly partisan. More parties are ruined by opinionated guests than by poor food and service; guests who talk too much are surpassed in deadliness only by guests who don't talk at all.

The responsibility probably all goes back to the hostess. It is up to her to select her guests with care. Unless she is sure of their social sophistication she doesn't invite political enthusiasts for different causes to the same parties.

Rare Gift of Kindness.

The good fairy can dispense no more wonderful gift to her children than a spirit of kindness—the kindness that means tact and good manners, the things that smooth down life's sharp corners. Kindness in conversation is not the least of these. The kind person never asks "How old are you?" "How much did you pay for your hat?" or "Where did you buy it?"

No friendship in the world can survive prying or curiosity. The person who wants to know where you were, what you did, and what's in the package you're carrying is the sort of busybody who never takes a hint. It's usually a she who must be given pointedly evasive answers.

All these conversational bores exhibit abominable taste and an entire lack of knowledge of what's what. What to do about them may be a difficult problem—but we can at least strive not to be one of them.

Natural Flowers New Decoration for Gowns

PARIS.—(AP)—Natural flowers without leaves or ribbon streamers are the smart set's newest decoration for dinner and evening gowns. A cluster of orchids or gardenias with every leaf plucked away is worn at the shoulder or waistline of many smart frocks.

Golden Honey Tan Is Likable Asset

Rochelle Hudson exposes her back to the sun in the hope of acquiring the golden honey tan which sensibly displaces the Nubian tones which were the goal of last year's sun bathers. Dolores Del Rio, on the deck of the boat which carried her back from Hawaii after filming a recent picture, takes precautions against the too violent coloring activities of solar rays.

Enhanced with the Proper Makeup, It Expresses a Vibrant Eagerness and Joy in Living Decidedly Becoming a Summer Girl.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

AT the beginning of both last year and the previous year, predictions were against a continuance of the sun-tan vogue of the preceding two years.

The same rumors were afoot at the beginning of this summer season. It was said that women would be seen at the beach this year buried in sun and tan preventative lotions in order to preserve the creamiest of skins.

As the season progresses, it's plain to be seen that it's one thing to predict before the beach parade is on and another to watch woman's antics during said parade. Certainly, as many girls are getting in the way of having their camellia skins darkened by sun and wind as are sitting in cabana shade to preserve delicate colorings. Perhaps it is only the girls who do not tan well. Girls who burn a sunset red, who prefer to remain in the shade. There's something about a tanned skin that girls like. That everybody likes. It suggests the life of the woods and camps and great outdoor spaces that we all long for. And to certain types of girls, the bronzed tint lends a vitality and eagerness for life that sets them up at their very best.

Avoid Nubian Hues.

The danger with the younger women lies in their own enthusiasm for the bronze coating. Instead of remaining nice gold or pale bronzed girls, they keep on until their skins have Nubian hues. The very dark hued skin is rarely becoming. When the autumn shadows fall, this coloring becomes in the nature of a liability to be fought out the whole winter long.

One of the early summer predictions that seems to be bearing the most tan fruit is that the tanning shall not be the deep, deep bronze—but a golden, honey color shade which blends in with every type of skin and eye and hair. That glowing sheen of golden tan is lovely with summer sports frocks, also with the white evening clothes. So try it, girls. Leave the Nubian coating for the boys. Let them go native—but you try to look the 1932 smart natural tan.

Those of us whose summer heritage is more apt to be blisters, burns and suffering than the coveted pale bronze tint had better look into the cosmetic market to find just that new, satisfying oil that reduces summer sun troubles to nil. The trade has fine products to offer in sun tan preparations, both provocative of a becoming coating and artificial in nature, the latter so that your tan is earned without an hour's stay on the beach.

Modern Skin Protections.

The oils for beach wear are greatly improved this season. Former heavy, sticky preparations are replaced with light oils, some of them exquisitely perfumed with lilac or some suggestive summer scent. They're so much nicer to use and make a perfect foundation base for makeup. The oils and other sun tan preparations in paste form not only serve to protect the blistering type of skin, but they help along a smooth, even tanning.

A note of warning might be given here. The summer season is going to last a short time and there are going to be long months of dinner and evening gown wearing when you will wish your skin were tanned so evenly that a break will not show when you put on the formal frock. So, cover the back well with the oil for this emergency.

The artificial tan products are still running strong. Those who welcome the opportunity to become smartly tanned without having to go through any outdoor process would do well to look into these products. Women whose fair skin is their great beauty asset should cling tenaciously to that asset. When the urge possesses them to go just a little native, they have the artificial suntan powders and complimentary rouge to resort to.

If the skin coloring changes to pale bronze, honey or golden, in all probability you are going to have to interview new powders, rouge and lipstick for complimentary colors. With skin taking on the golden glow of a summer tan, winter makeup is not smart, as a rule. A darker makeup to harmonize with the new bronze colorings will be needed.

Makeup Suggestions.

A deep rachel powder will be found better than the light rachel, for instance, with the tanned skin. The rouge will have to contain a certain amount of orange to fit in becomingly. Purple tones in rouge or pinks or raspberry reds are most out of place on a sunkissed cheek. The lipstick, too, has to be chosen with an eye to the new skin shade. Here, too, you'd better see if lipstick on the orange tone isn't better than the brilliant reds. The darker the tan cultivated the darker the cosmetics used. In any case of tanning, one or two shades darker in makeup will be found necessary.

The eye makeup is something to be studied over, too, in connection with the changed skin tone. A certain shade of eye shadow used with fair skins might make the eyes appear large and luminous. The same shadow used against the deep bronzed skin would appear to make the eyes recede and lifeless.

We cannot speak of summer tan getting without being reminded of how hair is likely to suffer under the tanning rays. It doesn't profit much if the skin is a fine bronze shade if the hair is dried out looking, which is often the case. There is not any reason why sunburn hair preventives should not be applied to hair and scalp. A bit of brilliantine brushed into the hair helps. A bit of it rubbed into the scalp is good, too. Or olive oil or almond oil. Anyway use some good hair conditioner every day during the swimming season. This will save you a lot of trouble later.

A certain amount of sunning is fine for the scalp. It is recommended heartily for any sufferer from excess oiliness of hair and dandruff disorder. The sun rays act as germ destroyers. But hours on end of exposure during the hottest part of the day is warned against.

Circus Is Next on Party List for Children

By Sally Joy Brown.

HASN'T this been a summer of interesting parties, boys and girls! There have been excellent movies, a marvelous day at White City, a major league baseball game—and there's another to come—a magician, and that interesting day at the World's Fair. One wonders if there can be anything left to equal these good times, and then one is reminded that it's circus time.

Yes, Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey are planning to make Chicago the next stop in their summer itinerary, and consequently there's much excitement and whooping for joy in these parts. Because our schedule of parties wouldn't be complete without one under the big top, we hastily made arrangements for one hundred boys and girls to see the circus on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 11. Isn't that good news?

I've heard, too, that this grand and glorious show is bigger and better than it's ever been—and that's saying a great deal, for it's always been the most complete thing in entertainment on record.

There are one hundred of the funniest clowns imaginable . . . equestriennes and bareback riders on thoroughbred mounts . . . aerialists who fly through space at dizzy heights . . . acrobats who do the most amazing things . . . fearless wire walkers who perform high above the heads of the audience . . . rare animals, wild animals, trained animals, and just so many other features in this "biggest show on earth" that it takes many cars to transport the circus from one town to another.

In another week the big canvas tents will be pitched in Grant park, lending a festive air to the city, and on Thursday, Aug. 11, we'll have our party there. I want to have as my guests the hundred boys and girls who really are thrilled at the thought of the circus, those who would have a perfectly marvelous time under the big top.

If you are one of these, let me see it in the letters you write me. I shall select those of you who write the most enthusiastic and convincing ones, for you'll be the ones who really love the circus. As usual, the letters must reach me no later than next Thursday morning, and our simple rules remain the same. You must write your own letter and in it do not ask for an invitation for any one except yourself. Have your name and address plainly written, and be sure to tell me your age. In tomorrow's TRIBUNE I'll tell you more about this exciting party and more about the things you may expect to see when Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey come to town.

Here are the names of the boys and girls who wrote winning letters for our baseball party at Comiskey park on next Thursday, Aug. 4. If your name is included in this list of lucky ones you will receive an invitation to see the Chicago White Sox when they meet the New York Yankees on the south side diamond:

The Gull

By Eleanor Jewett.

I had a boat with paper sails
That floated on the tide,
And when I pulled a guiding string
It ran back to my side.

One day my boat went out of sight,
My string snapped right in two—
I watched and waited on the shore.
What else was there to do?

I ran down to the point behind
Which boats can float away,
And there I saw a plume of foam
And waves that broke in spray.

My boat was nowhere to be found,
But farther out at sea
A gull flew high; I'm almost sure
He'll get my boat for me.

House in the English Manner Has Steel Structure Framework

This Sturdily Built Home, Using Modern Materials, Costs $5,900

Many New and Attractive Features in Two Story Dwelling; Basement May Be Added if Desired

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

WITH evidences apparent the country over of the interest and use of steel in the home building field, prospective builders of homes of their own will be interested in this English spirited house with outside walls which are of steel structure framework to carry all of the floor load. Brick veneer is then suggested as an exterior treatment. If the house were in a different style cinder blocks could be used as a basis for stucco, plaster, siding, or shingles.

In this way a substantial, low cost home of great permanence may be had, for the expense attendant on this suggested construction is not high. Its cubage is 19,500 cubic feet, and built according to the designer's proposed methods and finishings it will cost some $5,900.

Designed by James J. Gathercoal, Wilmette, Ill., the exterior is possible in a variety of materials. For where selection and application is proper and restrained, a variety of materials in English architecture is an advantage. This is particularly worth while, it may be added, in this era of economy and efficiency, when one may express architectural beauty by a slight change in materials.

Brick and Timber.

Here the suggested outside materials are common brick, half timber and plaster, scarf boards and batten stone. For the roof wood shingles may be used with galvanized iron gutters, downspouts and flashings. If the owner preferred to have a slate roof, at somewhat added cost, copper would be used instead of galvanized iron. In observing the chimney mention should be made of the door on the outside. This is a place through which cord wood may be taken and stored until it is transferred through an inside door in the living room.

This little home is to have concrete foundations and footings. There are a growing number of experienced men in the building field who feel that the vital importance of the foundation of even the small house necessitates an experienced structural engineer to design and superintend its construction properly.

The outside walls are given first a steel structural framework to receive all the floor load, over which brick is laid. The inside wall or backing of steel, and also the room partitions are to be of precast cinders and cement. These can hold nails and make an excellent plaster base. On cinder blocks it is always well to demand a Chicago underwriter's stamp of approval. In the kitchen, motor room, and basement, steel joints and reinforced concrete slabs are used.

The walls and roof are insulated, and in the living room there is a beamed ceiling effect. Large stained wooden beams are employed with precast reinforced concrete slabs in units 2 feet by 8 feet.

Flooring Costs Vary.

The floors in the living room and bedroom portion of the house may be of oak, linoleum, carpeting, or rubber tiling. Cost of different floorings vary. The estimate of this house cost is based on oak floors laid throughout excepting in the bath, which is of tile, and the kitchen, which has linoleum.

It is interesting to observe how the motor room at the left is hidden by the large chimney base. As can be seen from the floor plans, the first floor contains living room, dining room opening on a terrace, breakfast room, and kitchen, while on the second floor there are three bedrooms and bath.

The construction of homes is at the moment receiving the thought of many of the best minds in the country. More actual progress has been made in building construction and equipment in the last five years than in the previous fifty years. Even five years ago the trend was to improve materials and to cut labor. Now we see materials continuing to improve and labor, too, becoming a more favored and important factor.

For building new homes and for modernizing and bringing older homes up to date, new materials and equipment have appeared. There has also been seen a steady improvement in the use of old and tried materials. Manufacturers have been appreciating the value of research work and have produced materials in a wide variety which are certain to play an important part in the homes of tomorrow.

Lumber Classified.

Supposing one wishes to add a porch or a new room to one's house, or to enlarge an old room, or add a wing for garage and quarters above it. Lumber now has precise sizes, qualities in definite grades, good seasoning, and marked pieces.

If one wishes to give the exterior a new coating, or overcoat, for added warmth and beauty, this overcoat may be of any of the standard materials, such as wood, stucco, brick, or stone. Where the overcoat is to be of brick, this may be had in a wide range of shapes, colors, and textures to harmonize with the house design and to fit the environment. Here again workmanship counts mightily in the proper laying as well as in the harmonizing of mortar and brick, in the bonding of the brick, and in the pattern worked out.

Flooring and interior wall surfaces are being manufactured in new and in new-old forms. In long ago days floors, very often of wood, had their ends pegged with wooden pegs into the joists. Now again that old time style is seen, with the peg now more decorative than utilitarian.

New Uses for Old Materials.

Slate, which has been for years a roofing material, makes entrance now into the house proper, in sunroom and sun porch, hall, and conservatory. Tile and linoleum, rubber tile and cement, formerly one and two room floorings, are now appearing in many other rooms in the house.

There are also metal walls and floors, glass walls and floor, the glass being either opaque or transparent.

Heatproofing, scarcely known a decade ago, is fast becoming universal, and consists of thorough insulation of walls and room in storm sash and weather stripping.

Air conditioning, too, is taking phenomenal strides forward in its already brief span of life. Scientists have conducted extensive investigations proving what kind of atmosphere is best for human beings, and determining the effect of indoor climate on health, capacity to work, mental as well as physical efficiency. There are air conditioning systems which not only contribute to the house heat in winter but control its relative humidity summer and winter, cleaning, purifying, freshening the air.

Damp Cellars Unnecessary.

Always in modernizing old houses or in building new ones the selection of methods and materials depends on how the house is built and how much the family can spend. Proper cellar construction has become so general and knowledge thereof so expert that no one need have a damp cellar any longer. Even though one live in quite swampy land, advanced methods of waterproofing can make it dry while linings of insulating materials can keep it free from that vexatious thing called condensation, which is caused by the contact of damp air with chilled foundation walls. Because of this conquest, as it were, of conditions under the house, modern basements are livable spots. And if they cost quite a bit to build they can now be made to pay their way and take upon their shoulders their proper share of the expense.

Even house plans, themselves, are being drawn up with new ideas in mind, and where a house is being remodeled the old arrangement is giving way to the new. People are realizing that just "any old plan" won't do and that plans can age and drop out of the running like anything else. This fact in itself is responsible for many a remodeling.

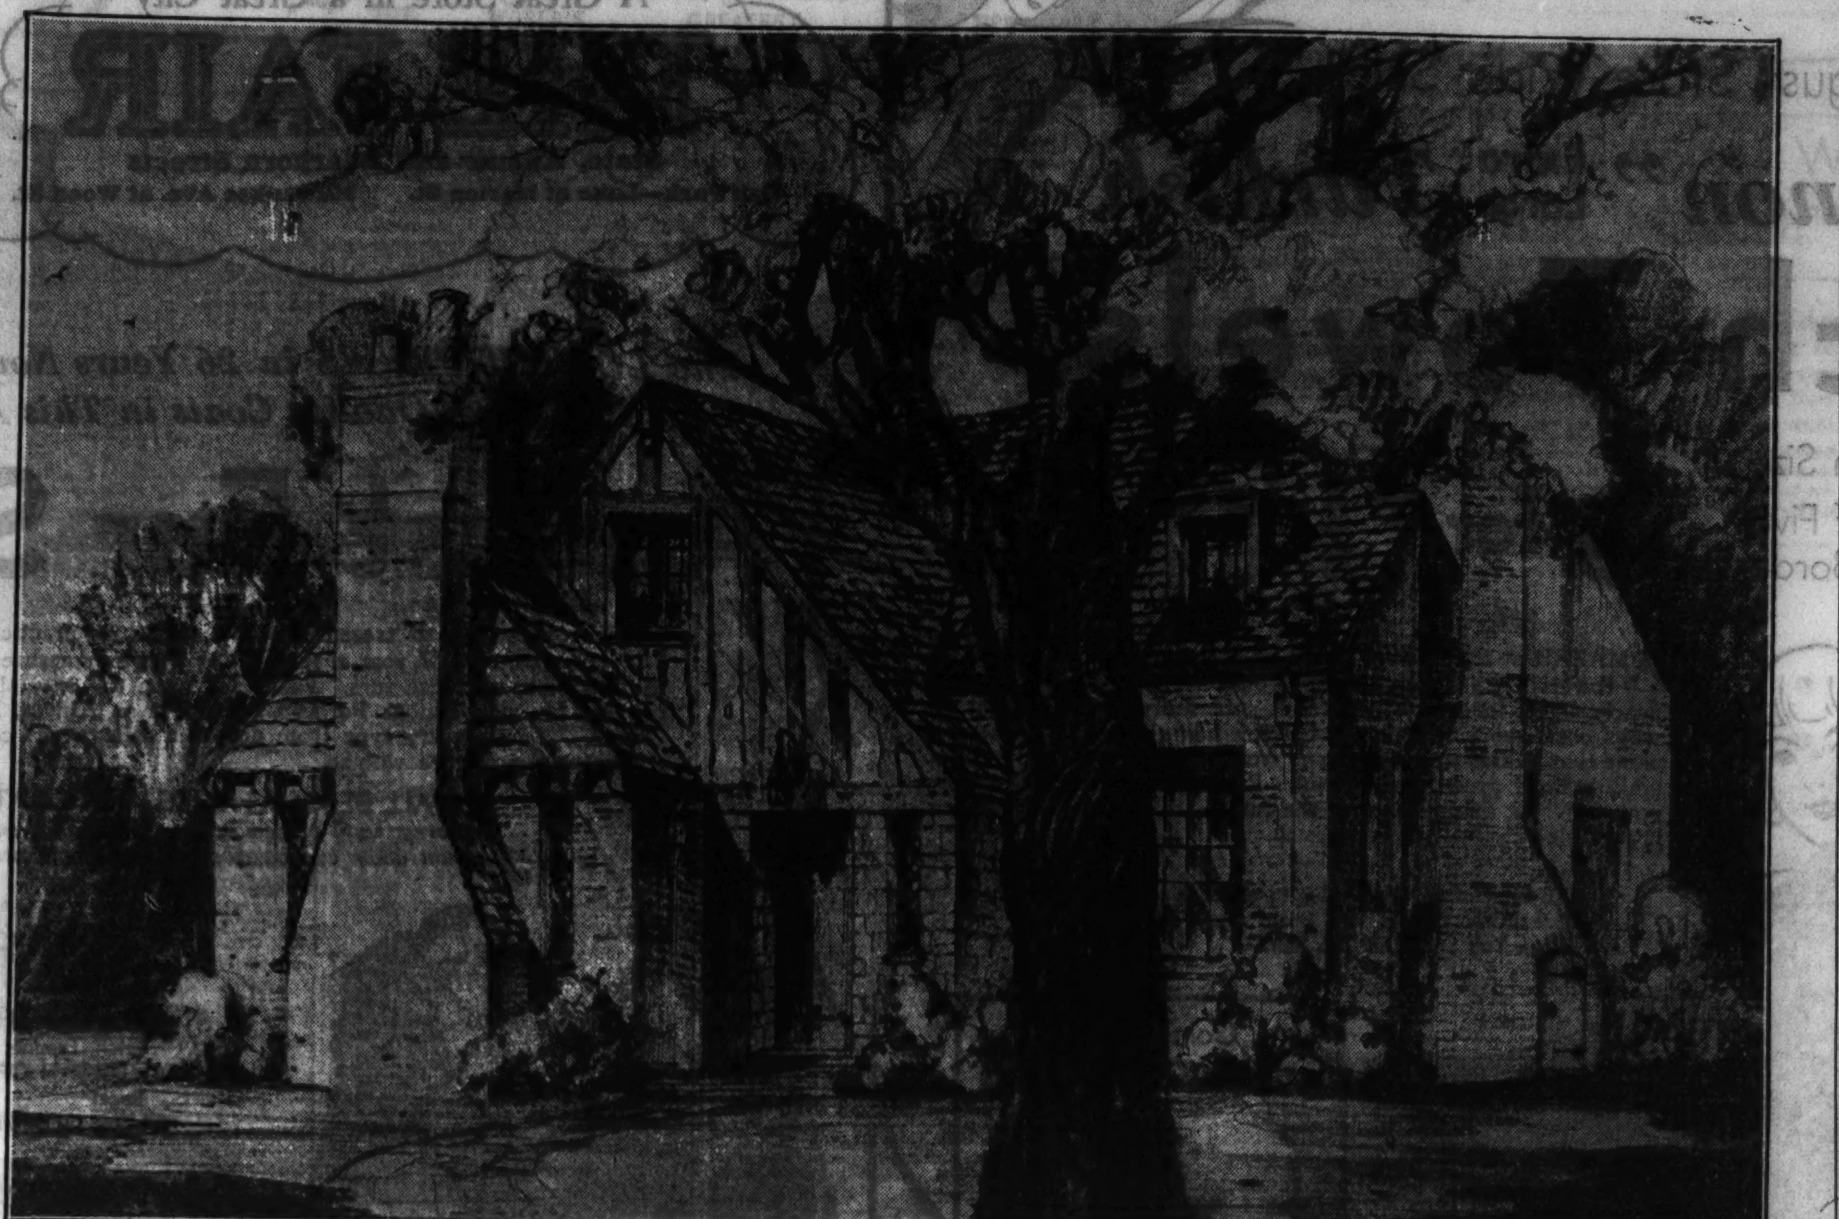
The house that once was quite sufficient in space and satisfactory in room arrangement for the family's needs becomes in time entirely inadequate. More bedrooms are needed, a sleeping porch is badly wanted, the front and back parlor cry out to be joined together in one large living room. Sometimes, too, the old house is unfortunate in its architectural style. Expert judgment is brought to bear on the problem and it is found that its architectural character can be greatly improved by adding a wing, extending a porch here, removing another porch somewhere else and giving the dwelling a new front entrance.

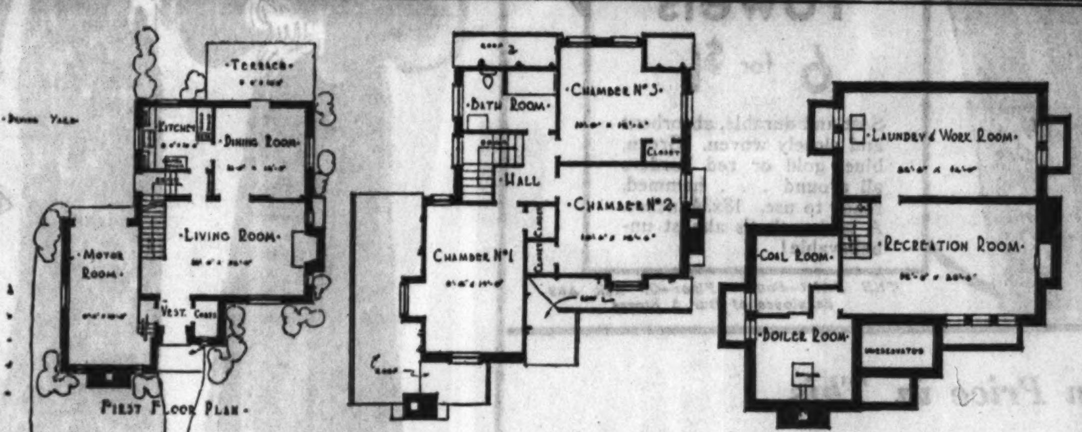
Extra Space Needed.

After all is said, it is extra space most often which is needed in the older house in order that it may be better adapted to the present needs of its owners. Where this is so, where extra rooms, more baths, porches, lavatories, and play space are required, and where the location of the existing house suits the family tastes and requirements, remodeling is the solution of the problem.

It means that the family will not need to break its social ties, give up grounds and shrubbery, planting and trees which are perhaps the growth of years, and move to a strange environment. That this remodeling may be accomplished at the present time so economically and that, in expert hands, it may also be achieved so artistically and deftly, is the reason for much of it today.

General overall of rooms is as follows: Living room, 12 feet by 22 feet. Dining room, 12 feet by 13 feet. Kitchen, 8 fet 6 inches by 10 feet. Motor room, 9 feet by 18 feet. Bedrooms as follows: Chamber No. 1, 9 feet by 14 feet; chamber No. 2, 10 feet 6 inches by 12 feet 6 inches; chamber No. 3, 11 feet by 12 feet 6 inches. Basement recreation room, 12 feet by 22 feet 6 inches. Basement laundry and workroom, 22 feet 6 inches by 12 feet.





This little six room English spirited house, with attached garage, has outside walls of steel structure framework to carry the floor load, while brick veneer is suggested for the exterior treatment. For the roof wood shingles may be employed. Thorough insulation of walls and roof is specified, with one pipe steam system fueled with oil or gas. Designed by James J. Gathercoal, Wilmette, Ill. The floor plans show a suggested basement, the first floor layout and the second story plans.

Bed Equipped with a Medicine Shelf

IN the establishment of Ferdinand Keller in Philadelphia is an interesting bed. It is peculiarly of Pennsylvania Dutch manufacture, and along the headboard, under the tester, is a shelf which Mr. Keller asserts is designed for medicines. The bottles and phials which contained the remedies considered indispensable by the household were placed along this shelf, where they were easily accessible in time of need.

Change of Heart Serious Misdemeanor in Serbia

Breach of promise has been made a serious offense in Serbia under a new ruling. Men convicted of jilting a maiden are to receive a sentence of six months' hard labor and pay $100 damages.

Industry in Great Britain will benefit to the extent of nearly $2,500,000 by the decision of King George to hold the customary four courts on May 11 and 12 and June 23 and 24. American debutantes spend as much as $1,250 each for their court dresses and $75 each for fans.

INVENTIONS INCREASE FURNITURE COMFORT

New Webbing Makes Chairs Twice as Soft

Ingenious Tricks Result in Beds Easier to Move, Tables Easier to Extend.

By Edith Weigle.

THE recent exhibition at the American Furniture mart was notable because of some things besides furniture. Sounds funny, but it's true. At this market it seemed to us that inventors had played just as important a rôle as designers and manufacturers. Never have we seen so many clever, practical little furniture gadgets planned to give greater comfort and ease to the consumer.

There were rollaway beds that were so light a child could move them; attractive day beds that became twin or double beds by intriguing new devices; there were tables that carried extra leaves below the surface, requiring a mere twist of the wrist to open them and snap them into place. There were chairs with adjustable backs and others with backs that automatically took the position most comfortable to the sitter; there were modern sofas with broad arms which were used to conceal smoking accessories; there were tables with new finishes which defy hot liquids, milk, lemon juice, and even alcohol, and high chairs for children equipped with a new type of tray that is much more practical than the old metal or enamel variety, for it is all in one solid piece. is stainless, and may be quickly washed off with a sponge and water. These are just a few of the many new tricks the nimble minds of inventors have perfected for the semi-annual display at the mart.

The most interesting device of them all is being used by a well known Michigan manufacturer of upholstered and porch furniture. Instead of the usual old style webbing, tacked to the bottom of the chair frame and serving as a foundation for the spring cushion and seat, a new steel core webbing is employed. This is strung across the chair frame fore and aft and is fastened to it by a clever device that takes up the slack, so that it is extremely flexible without sagging. Next comes a cushion with inner spring, new type, patented construction. Hair filling is placed above this.

Now, what happens? When a person sits in this chair the weight is not all on the cushion, you see. It is on the flexible webbing at the base, which gives evenly. The chair cushion will never be lumpy, or have a depression in the center because one's weight is not on it alone, but on the webbing. The result is such real comfort that you wonder why some ingenious person never thought of this idea before.

It impressed us as being much like the construction used in a bed. By getting rid of the stiff, unyielding cloth webbing and using the new, steel suspension base you have a springy foundation, like the box springs of a bed. Then add the chair cushion with its inner springs, like the popular inner spring mattresses, and on top of that the hair filling cushion and you get all the ease and comfort you have when lying on a bed. Sounds simple, but apparently no one ever thought of it before.

Housewives will like this new type of chair, for it has no dust pockets at the sides. Due to the steel webbing which goes only two ways, front and back (unlike the cloth webbing which went four ways) the chair base is not sealed, and you may easily put your hand down the sides and touch the floor underneath.

This chair is so soft and comfortable that you get all the pleasure of down filled cushions without ever having to shake them back into shape and without that hot, feather bed surrounding they do create in hot weather. If you've ever sat in a down filled chair on a torrid day you know just what we mean. You feel smothered.

The steel, flexible webbing is also being used for couches and sofas and is extremely successful here, too, for each cushion takes care of its own weight independently of the others. There will never be any sagging in the center cushion, or any rising of one end when a heavy person sits on the other. It's impossible with this new invention.

And what a grand idea it is for rattan furniture! Now your porch couches and chairs can be just as restful and soft as your living room things. We saw a stunning new porch group, a settee and two chairs and table, gleaming white painted rattan, with cushions of glazed chintz having a white background with stripes of gray, black, and crimson. It looked simply enchanting—so cool, and smart and gay.

Another summer group, called the George Washington bicentennial set, comprised a large, luxurious couch (with the flexible webbing base), chairs, and a round table. The upholstery was glazed chintz and the pattern white stars against a sky blue ground with tiny stripes of red. The rattan frames were painted to match the blue, and the arms of the chairs were very broad, and dark gray instead of blue.

This chintz, the best looking we've seen all season, is made by an eastern firm and may be bought by the yard at Chicago stores. It has been used by decorators for window draperies, for cushion covers, for slip covers, and for upholstering. It is ideal in an early American room or one with French provincial furniture. Of for the porch.

The picture today shows a new dining room group of maple, made by an eastern furniture manufacturer and sold in Chicago stores. It made its debut at the recent furniture show and is ever so nice. Adapted from French provincial antiques, the intention was to use it in small dining rooms, so it was scaled down and as a result is ideal for its purpose. The curving legs of the table are echoed by the front legs of the chairs.

The table has extension leaves at either end which snap into place when needed and which fit snugly under the top when not in use. Bright red glazed chintz with little field flowers makes a quaint covering for the chair seats, and plaited ruffles add to the effect. The price of this good looking little group is as low as a centipede.

This quaint little dining room group in maple was introduced first at the recent show at the American Furniture Mart. It is made by an eastern manufacturer and is sold in Chicago stores.

TOBY JUGS MAKE PLEASING ITEM FOR COLLECTORS

IF you've never experienced the fun of collecting anything, why not begin with Toby jugs? These quaint pieces of Staffordshire china were made to look like the mythical Toby Philpot, a notorious drinker. He always wore a three cornered hat, and one of the corners served as a spout on the pitcher. It was this amusing character who gave rise to the well known couplet:

"Old Toby Philpot, as thirsty a soul
As e're drank a bottle or fathomed a bowl."

It is growing exceedingly difficult to find genuine Toby jugs in this country, though one may be picked up occasionally at an antique dealers. But in England and in Canada the search is still fruitful. One authority says the first Toby jug was dated 1750 "and presents the short, corpulent figure of an elderly countryman wearing a black tri-cornered hat, each corner of which forms a convenient spout. He is dressed in a gay apple green coat, pale yellow breeches, white stockings, buckled shoes, a striped brown, blue and white waistcoat, and balances a brown and white jug on his knee."

A reproduction of an old Toby, found in Alberta, Canada, shows a seated figure, with a jolly red face, blue coat and white stockings. He has a jug in one hand and a mug in the other. Others show the old fellow with a pipe in one hand, a jug in the other, but all of them have a jug!

The genuine Toby was always soft in tone, with a brilliant glaze. One color was applied before the jug was fired, the result being that the color invariably fused with the glaze and overran its intended limits somewhere on the jug. The color glazing was applied with a brush and this often resulted in tiny spots being left unglazed. A genuine Toby can be told, too, by its innumerable little crackles. Fake types show crackles, but these can never be made so small as the ones on the original jugs and thus are readily recognized.

Besides the colored Tobys there were also the Rockingham Tobys, made chiefly from brown glazed earthenware, and also the Rockingham ones of porcelain. The earthenware Tobys are frequently found in New England in old houses and cottages where they still come to the table filled with milk or cream.

You'll grow to like Mr. Philpot if you once make his acquaintance.

Addition of Kitchen Wing Gives Old House Greater Efficiency and Comfort

Guest Room on First Floor a Feature

By WillElla de Campi.

SINCE the former kitchen in Mary Louise's home had been converted into a charming dining room, as described in last week's article, the next step toward rehabilitation was the addition of a kitchen wing at the back of the house.

It is a small room, to be sure, but gayly decorated and completely equipped for kitchen comfort. The floor is covered with inlaid linoleum in a black and white tile pattern. Wainscoting and built in cupboards are painted white with emerald green lines, and the inside of the cupboards is done in the same bright green. The upper wall is papered with washable material showing a scattering of green stars on a white ground. Sink, stove, refrigerator and a convenient work table are gleaming white, and two kitchen chairs are painted emerald green with black and white trim.

At one side of the kitchen is a door opening onto a screened porch which serves as a breakfast room. Informal meals are generally served here when the family is alone, and when there are guests the children are quite content to leave the main dining room to their elders while they enjoy their own dinner in this charming retreat.

Clinging vines have been trained to grow up the outside of the wire screen, forming a leafy curtain all around. The floor, a continuation of the dining room terrace, is of colored stone. Ladder-back chairs painted white with emerald green trim, an old drop leaf table and a pair of serving stands at each side of the kitchen door in white with touches of green furnish the porch most pleasantly. The chairs have black sateen seat pads piped with green.

A pair of pewter lamps with white shades banded in green is placed on the serving stands and an old pewter lantern is suspended above the dining table. Green and white linen, white china with an old fashioned green leaf border, and emerald green glassware are used here.

Two rooms, separated from the living and dining rooms by a small entrance hall with an inclosed stairway, complete the first floor plan. One of these is furnished and decorated as a restful little library, or "reading and writing room," as the children call it. The other, with an adjoining bath, makes an enchanting guest room

In the library the walls are paneled in pine where they are not lined with open shelves displaying a colorful collection of interesting books. Glass curtains at the windows are of blue theatrical gauze, hanging straight to the sills, and there are long straight draperies of flamingo red glazed chintz.

A big comfortable sofa is upholstered in dark blue denim and one huge wing chair is done in heavy linen with a floral pattern on a blue ground. Another armchair has a slip cover of red and blue plaid material.

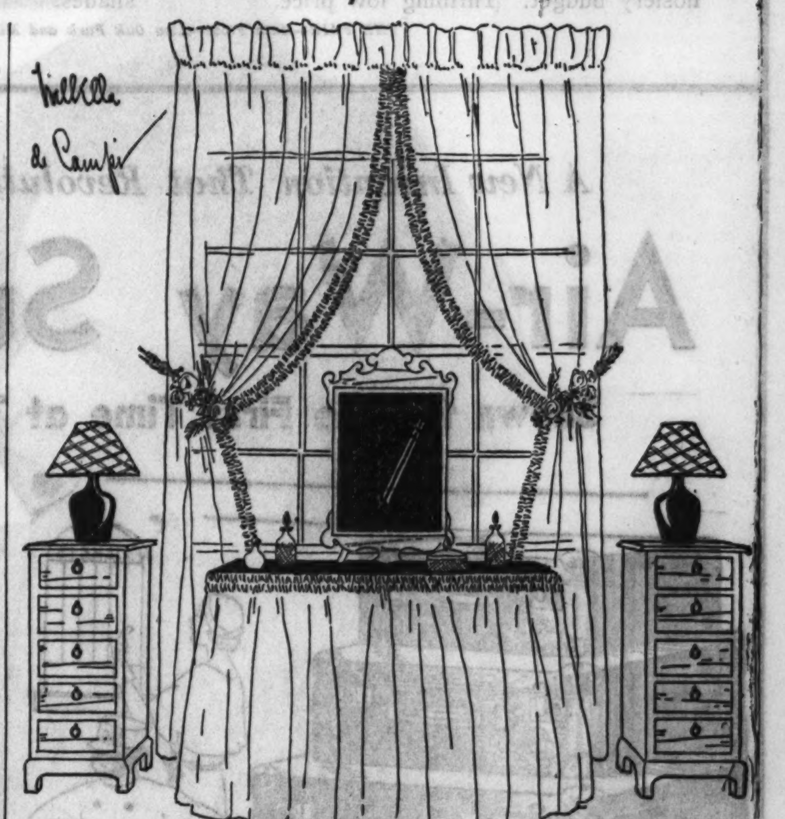
A flat topped pine desk, placed at right angle to one window, is accompanied by a slat back, rush bottom armchair, similar to one which is supposed to have belonged to William Penn. The desk is fitted with a red leather desk set, a blue blotting paper pad and a three branch pewter lamp with an accordion plaited shade made of the drapery chintz. Small tables, placed at strategic points about the room, hold reading lamps, smoking accessories, and current magazines. On the wide plank floor there is a blue and red plaid rug, made of durable fiber.

The guest room, with a door all its own opening onto a lovely garden, is a delightful haven of rest. The color scheme here and in the adjoining bathroom is blue, green, and white. Walls are done in a blue and white toile de Jouy paper and the woodwork is painted white. Curtains of crisply white Argentine cloth, edged with blue and green plaited glazed chintz, are made quite full, with high French headings. They are caught back by old fashioned clusters of field flowers—daisies, poppies, bachelor buttons, and spears of green wheat. [This joyous effect, incidentally, could easily be duplicated on almost any tieback curtains.]

Directly in front of one window, as shown in the accompanying illustration, is a draped dressing table with a petticoat of the white Argentine cloth over white muslin. It is trimmed with blue and green plaited glazed chintz. The table has a mirror top and a standing mirror in a maple frame. Decorative bottles and powder jar are of white glass. Quicksilver glass lamps with blue and white plaid paper shades are placed atop a pair of narrow maple chests which flank the dressing table. These chests, each with five drawers, afford ample storage space for cosmetics, creams, lotions, and all the numerous small things necessary for a complete and comfortable toilet.

Low post maple beds have pure white candlewick spreads. A white glass lamp on the table standing between the beds is fitted with a white shade, banded in blue and green. In one corner of the room stands a nicely proportioned arm chair, upholstered in plain blue glazed chintz piped with green. Beside it is a small drop leaf table, triangular when the leaves are down, circular when all three are lifted. A little maple desk completes the furnishings.

Three bedrooms and a bath, comprising the second floor plan, will be [illegible] week.



An interesting grouping before a window displays a flounced dressing table and a pair of narrow maple chests.

6,000 Voices Will Sing Handel's "The Messiah" at Music Fete

By Edward Moore.

SIX thousand singers putting all heart and soul into the measures of the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah" becomes one of the most inspiring experiences that any pair of ears has ever heard. For this reason THE TRIBUNE and associated newspapers of the middle west take pleasure in pointing out that the huge number will again be a feature of the Chicagoland Music Festival at Soldiers' field on Saturday night, Aug. 20.

When the first Chicagoland Music Festival was being organized it was realized by its sponsors that nothing brings people so closely together as to have them sing. It was no new discovery. Community singing directed by expert conductors had been practiced and enjoyed for years back. Taking that as a basis, the sponsors determined to find out whether some-

Ziegfeld a Great Producer but a Greater Press Agent

By John Chapman.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—After Florenz Ziegfeld died the obituary notices duly chronicled the passing of a master producer of extravaganza. Set in type during the last day or two of his illness, these biographies listed his accomplishments—his "Follies," his "Sally," his "Show Boat," his glorification of the American girl, his many stars—but they marked lightly if at all his very great ability as a press agent.

True, they all pointed out the jumping off place of his showman's career—the publicity managership of Sandow, the strong man. They credited him with Anna Held's milk bath stunt . . . and that was about all. But Ziegfeld, the press agent, kept pace with Ziegfeld the producer to the day he died. I almost believe he thought first of publicity and second of show business, and his genius for keeping in print was remarkable. He employed a succession of highly competent press agents and paid them well, yet he was never content to let them run their end of the business.

Wrote Many Items Himself.

Almost daily he dictated items to be mimeographed and sent to the dramatic editors. Sometimes they were foolish conceits which drew protests from his men, but out the items went, nevertheless. No other department in his organization was under such pressure from the office upstairs as was the publicity staff.

A tireless and expert reader of the dramatic pages, Ziegfeld checked up almost every edition of every New York newspaper as soon as it could be delivered to him. If a pet paragraph failed to find its way into a particular newspaper, or if something were printed that he did not like, he would telephone a managing editor at 3 a. m. or send one of his famous telegrams to a publisher or a critic. He used to the utmost every business advantage he could maneuver, and he got for his shows an amount of publicity that no other producer could hope to equal.

Started Restaurant Show.

The Ziegfeld obituaries mentioned all too briefly his development of another form of entertainment: the restaurant floor show. How this came about makes an interesting story.

It was 1914, I think, and the good, genteel pastime of ballroom dancing flourished. The Castles, Vernon and Irene, reigned. Maurice and Babette had come over from Belgium, and when Babette was fatally injured during a whirling acrobatic dance, Maurice and Florence Walton carried on. The Castles had seen one Leon Errol in burlesque. They noticed his funny walk and transformed it into a dance step which they called the Castle walk.

The seats of the New Amsterdam theater roof had been covered with a floor, and here one could go to dance for $1 a couple. Another such dancing place was the roof of the Shuberts' Forty-fourth Street theater. The Castles, under contract to Elisabeth Marbury, had been promised to Charles Dillingham for a show. No Dillingham show was forthcoming, however, and Ziegfeld wanted Vernon and Irene as exhibition performers atop the New Amsterdam.

There was some confusion, and Dillingham passed the Castles on to the Shuberts, who now billed their establishment on 44th street as "Castles in the Air." It was a great blow to the dance floor venture at the New Amsterdam. While Ziegfeld was wondering what to do, Gene Buck, author of many a "Follies," said: "Let's get a lot of women and cook up a little show."

So they got a lot of women, cooked up their little show, hired Reisenweber to do the catering at tables on the floor itself, called the entertainment the "Midnight Frolic," and thus revolutionized the café business. The great attractions of the first "Frolic" were the balloon costumes worn by the girls. Winers and diners could burst the balloons with their cigars as the girls danced past.

Ziegfeld's Monument.

One of the five remaining shows on an almost depopulated Broadway is Ziegfeld's monument, "Show Boat." One of the few revivals that have been hailed as even better than their originals, it may brave the weather—though it isn't the heat so much as it's the apathy here—for a few more weeks. It is being managed by one A. C. Blumenthal, financier, sometimes a show angel, sometimes a provider of private railroad cars for Mayor James J. Walker. This new boss of the glorified girls is married to a former "Follies" chorine, Peggy Fears.

"Show Boat" will be remembered—and, doubtless, revived—long after the letters spelling the name of Ziegfeld have been unscrewed from the façade of the gorgeous playhouse on 6th avenue. He left this show as a souvenir of the best he had done. Had he died a few months ago, when his fatal illness first came, he would have left the less successful, less Ziegfeldian "Hot-Cha!"

New Comedy Makes Bow.

Gently dropped in the midst of otherwise premiereless weeks came recently the presentation of a comedy called "The Chameleon." It had been modestly heralded as "adapted from the Hungarian" of Adam Gostony.

The morning before "The Chameleon" opened, dramatic editors received from Gostony carefully penned letters—in English, not in Hungarian, for it seems that Gostony hails from the middle west. The letters declared that the author disowned his play. "Coming to New York to see the play," he wrote [he had attended rehearsals], "I was shocked to find it produced in a manner that made it unrecognizable even to me, its father." He hoped that the critics would discern through the many changes in 'script the play that once was there.

The play was quite short, quite bad, and uncertainly acted. A movie star determines to capture a famous surgeon who thinks of nothing but his private hospital. When she enters the hospital outside of visiting hours

German Theaters Flooded with Operettas, but Drama by Hauptmann Scores Biggest Hit

By Sigrid Schultz.

BERLIN. — [Special.] — This year Germany's theatergoing public was deluged with operettas because theater directors were convinced it wanted jazz, Vienna waltzes, and frothy lightheartedness. Now, as theater after theater is closing for the summer holidays, the stage magnates realize that plays of literary value, alive with deep human emotion, won this year's laurels and took in the cash.

"Before Sundown," by the dean of German authors, Gerhard Hauptmann, scored victory after victory in Berlin and in all big German towns. In the German capital it was staged by Max Reinhardt as his last production before leaving Berlin. It proved a triumph for Hauptmann and made Berlin theater lovers weep at the idea that Berlin would no longer be Reinhardt's theatrical headquarters. Much of the success was due to the superb acting of Werner Krauss, who tore at the strings of Berlin's heart as the ageing man in conflict between two women.

In towns which boast of no Reinhardt and no Krauss the high standard of acting in the numerous local theaters drew vast crowds who were stirred by Hauptmann's play. It ran months on end in many towns, compelling theater directors to cancel the production of lighter fare they kept in readiness, believing in the operetta hunger of the public.

"Lilliom" Popular.

Because new good plays were scarce the hit of the 1931 season, Molnar's "Lilliom" played by Hans Albers, was revived frequently—in fact, whenever this popular actor could be freed from his movie contracts. At a day's or two days' notice Hans Albers' "Lilliom" would be announced at the Volksbuehne, and you had to dash wildly to secure a ticket if you wanted to see and hear blond Hans. London theater directors are trying their best to induce him to go over to London and play "Lilliom" there, being convinced he will stir the British public as deeply as he stirred men and women in Germany with his impersonation of Lilliom.

Where the plays failed to come up to literary requirements of theater experts the art of actors tried to convey depth or charm and vitality. The famous Fritzi Massary, who admittedly is close to fifty years of age and still holds Berlin spellbound when playing young, fascinating parts, lent her great art to "Nina" and drew full houses for weeks.

Nina is a great star who feels age coming and wants the security of the home offered by a rich suitor. A young chorus girl is suddenly skyrocketed to take her place; the young upstart and her crudeness lend a marvelous backbround to Nina, the truly great artist, and both parts combined are full of the most delicate nuances. Massary played the double rôle of Nina and the young upstart, dazzling Berlin with her supreme mastery at portraying two totally different women and conveying the feeling of these two totally different personalities.

An amusing point about "Nina" is that the play was written by Leonhard Frank, who in real life is the son-in-law of Fritzi Massary, and Berlin quipsters had a lot of fun with the mother-in-law line. Scarcely one of them failed to ask Fritzi how it felt to act in son-in-law's play, and everybody asked Frank whether he really believed his mother-in-law would do full justice to his double star. At the end of the run of the play both Fritzi and Leonhard Frank were still fond of each other. The in-law remarks failed to upset this family.

Many Operettas.

In the operetta field many sweet melodies were heard, many happy endings admired, but only a few operettas proved real successes. Gitta Alpar, a fiery blonde Hungarian, swept Berlin off its feet as Mme. du Barry.

Max Reinhardt early in the season tried to emulate Eric Charell of the "White Horse Inn" success and staged a giant revue with an operetta framework. Offenbach's "Beautiful Helen" had proved a great success when Reinhardt staged it in his small theater on Kurfeurstendamm. He readapted it to the big stage of the Grosse Schauspielhaus, the former circus, which years ago he had remodeled into the Theater of the Five Thousand, one of Berlin's most interesting theater buildings.

On this same stage Reinhardt produced "The Tales of Hoffmann" and gave a fairylike setting to this famous opera. Exquisite Jarmila Novotna, Russia's George Baklanoff, and scores of the most famous singers and dancers of central Europe have appeared on the revolving stage of the Grosse Schauspielhaus.

"Waterloo Bridge" Stopped.

Grete Mosheim, Germany's most popular ingénue, was told by Germany's critics that she was unforgettable as the heroine in "Waterloo Bridge," the English play which scored many a success in Germany only to be hooted down in Cassel, where Hitlerites suddenly claimed to have discovered that the play was dangerous to German morality.

The Opera in Germany has been most active, staging old operas in new settings or venturing forth with modern and supermodern productions. Kurt Weill's "Ball" gave the Charlottenburg Opera house in Berlin opportunity to stage a modernistic play. The new settings for "Rheingold" at the Berlin Opera house have delighted operagoers from all parts of the world.

Berlin's musical leaders this year again made marvelous use of the beautiful old halls in castles which formerly delighted only kings, emperors, and their friends. In Castle Monbijou old world music, played by famous artists, draws hundreds of music lovers every few weeks, who delight not only in the music but also in the charming setting, with the old halls shimmering in the light of thousands of candles as they did in he

OLDEST, GAYEST OF OLD SETTLERS EAGER FOR PICNIC

She'll Talk Chicago of '72 or Broadway in '32.

BY HERBERT VEDDER.

Meet "Gram" Clark, 7541 Peoria street, oldest of the old settlers—and perhaps the gayest.

MRS. C. C. CLARK.

She attended the first Old Settlers picnic, held in Oswald's grove at 52d and Halsted streets, and has been to most of the outings since then. Formally Mrs. C. C. Clark, she will be found at Riverview park tomorrow for the 58th Old Settlers picnic.

"Of course, I won't know any one," said the youthful thinking and acting little old lady, who was 96 years old last May. "All of the real old settlers I knew are gone now, but you couldn't hinder me from being there. I'll have a good time—I always do—and speak to a lot of people I don't know. I suppose some of them will look at me as if I were a fool—they usually do—but I don't care. I believe in being friendly. You know, it never hurts any one to speak to somebody and there ought to be more of that sort of thing."

MRS. JULIA SCHREIBER.

Soon after her birthday last May "Gram" set out for a lark in New York City. In the adjoining compartment was a nice looking man. She spoke to him and he responded. Her companion whispered in her ear, asking if she knew he was Newton D. Baker. "Gram" didn't, but she proceeded to converse with him on politics, before the national convention.

Looking every inch a very sweet old lady in black dress and bonnet, she expressed a desire to vote for him for President, but wanted to know his views on prohibition. Mr. Baker hesitated before telling "Gram" he was for repeal. Much was his surprise when she ejaculated: "Fine!"

Mrs. Clark is utterly opposed to the principle of prohibition and is an all around liberal and good sport. Among other things she enjoys smoking her cigaret.

Lunches Atop Empire State.

She had a good time visiting and "doing" New York, lunching atop the Empire State building and taking bus rides on Broadway among other things. Her motto is: "Never let anything interfere with happiness."

Two years ago she went to the Old Settlers picnic, but decided not to wait for her friends to drive her home. So she boarded a street car and arrived home entirely unaware of having done anything out of the way.

"I love to ride street cars," she explained. "They stop at every corner and you see more. Then, too, they shake you up a little when they stop. It's just like life."

"Gram" keeps busy most of the time, and wouldn't be happy otherwise. She has thriven on work all her life. She gets up to go to church at 6 o'clock Sunday morning—says in her gibing way anybody could get around by 10 o'clock. She does her own baking, likes to work in the garden, and is an artist at making hook rugs and quilts.

First Saw Chicago in 1838.

Although she was only 2 years old at the time and doesn't remember it, Mrs. Clark first saw Chicago in 1838 from a covered wagon in which her parents had come from near Sarnia, Ontario. They did not like Chicago because there were too many mosquitoes, and went on to the Sugar river bottoms near Beloit, Wis., where she grew up. She was married in 1859 and lived in Plattsburgh, N. Y., until after her husband's death in the civil war.

In 1872 she came to Chicago to raise her five children, all of whom she has outlived. "Gram" has resided here ever since and finds it a good place to be. She has seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren. She lives with Mr. and Mrs. Frank McGurk, her late granddaughter's husband and the latter's wife.

As Mrs. McGurk says:

"There surely aren't any flies on 'Gram.' She hasn't an infirmity either physical or mental."

Youngster of 78 to Go.

Another "regular" who expects to be at the picnic is Mrs. Julia Schreiber, one of those whom "Gram" considers as the younger generation of old settlers. Mrs. Schreiber will be 78 her next birthday, but has been going to the picnics for 50 years. She has made her home at 6227 Peoria street for 43 years and has resided in Chicago almost her entire life.

She first went to the picnics with her mother, and now her daughter, Mrs. Julia Herr, who lives with her, is her companion. Mrs. Schreiber was afraid, for a time, that she would not be able to make it this year because of a fall she had about Christmas time. Now she is able to get around on crutches, and though she doesn't think that crutches are the right things to take to a picnic is counting on a good time.

Though never interested in the prizes because she just goes to see her friends, Mrs. Schreiber last year won a medal for having the largest number of descendants living—44 in all. There is one more great-grandchild now than last year and the present count is 7 children, 19 grandchildren, and 19 great-grandchildren. All live in or near Chicago.

Mrs. Schreiber has been a reader of THE TRIBUNE for years and says she has come to look upon it as one of her Old Settler friends, too.

Her father was a civil war veteran and she is active in the Ladies of the G. A. R.

NEIGHBORS GROW PARTNERSHIP GARDEN

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 1.

Give every attention to eradicating insects attacking plants. Remember that the leaf eating insects must be killed by spraying them with a stomach poison; the sucking types with a contact poison, such as nicotine preparation. Know what insecticide you want, and get it.

Start a calla lily for early flowering indoors.

Unless already sown, try a few forget-me-not, pansies, and English daisies for next spring.

After hardy phlox flowers cut the stems to the ground and fertilize with a good commercial preparation. Divide old plants to rejuvenate them.

Tuesday, Aug. 2.

During the month make the final sowing of peas, spinach, radishes, lettuce and turnips.

Watch melon plants for blight. Bordeaux is a standard fungicide. The potato beetle attacks many kinds of the nightshade family, but a little arsenate of lead soon eliminates them.

Blanch early celery.

Keep the flower beds well edged.

Gather all everlasting flowers in the bud, tie them in bunches and hang in a dry place for curing.

Don't sow lawn seed too early; wait until about the middle or the end of the month.

Wednesday, Aug. 3.

August is the time to transplant iris. Divide the old clumps and transplant about 8 inches apart. Plant shallowly. The iris is a good plant to use in front of shrubs. Plan to plant a few new peonies. They should always be transplanted during autumn. Buy a soon as the nurseryman offers them. Do not plant peonies too close to shrub borders.

Arsenate of lead soon kills the cabbage worm.

Disbud dahlias to obtain large blooms. Tie the canes securely to prevent blowing over.

Now is the time to transplant the oriental poppy.

Thursday, Aug. 4.

Sow delphiniums now. Buy the best strain, for the best require no more attention than the poor sorts.

Early sown perennials should be ready for transplanting now. See that the young plants do not dry out.

See that the weeds on vacant lots are cut. Community efforts will soon permit grass to take the place of weeds. It is a good time to spade or plow weedy ground.

Friday, Aug. 5.

Start vegetables for indoor forcing. Take cuttings of the various plants to be sure of having sufficient stock. Keep the beds well watered. A mulch will aid greatly in keeping the ground cool and moist.

House plants that are infested with scales, or aphids, should be sprayed to have them clean when they are brought indoors.

Clean the spring bulbs that were dug late and stored away.

Breaking off pieces of portulaca and planting them in new beds is an easy way to obtain a fine display. Try selecting the various colors and segregating them in sections by themselves.

Saturday, Aug. 6.

Feed potted chrysanthemums. These plants are gross feeders and must be fed to obtain strong growth and large flowers. Keep the stems securely tied. Prepare for fall planting.

The three changes recommended to the members by the board of directors call for reduction of the membership fee from $25 to $15, a similar cut in the annual dues, and reduction of the assessment for welfare work from $20 to $10. William S. Hayden is president.

MUSIC FESTIVAL CROWD TO HEAR BAND PRELIMS

Hallelujah Chorus Entries to Open Today.

Early comers to the Chicagoland Music Festival at Soldiers' field the evening of Aug. 20 will find an entire program, albeit an informal one, staged for their entertainment before the formal opening of the festival at 7:30 o'clock.

WM. B. SEIFERT.

The adult and juvenile drum and bugle corps contests, which for the last two years have been held the morning of the festival day, have been put forward to the afternoon and early arrivals will see the crack musical bodies of the central states defile up and down the field in competition for a place on the evening program.

The juvenile competition will be at 2 o'clock and the adult organizations will meet at about 4 o'clock. The change in the contest hour is being made primarily to give out of town groups more time to reach the city on the festival day.

Corps which have not entered the contest due to the previous time of meeting and which wish to participate in the festival should get in touch immediately with the Musical Festival Editor, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago, Ill.

Two Rehearsals for Chorus.

In this section appears an entry blank for those wishing to join the "Hallelujah Chorus," which again will be directed by Noble Cain. Anyone who has ever sung "The Messiah" is eligible for membership in the chorus, which will include all contesting men, women and mixed choruses, and is expected to number 6,000. Two rehearsals will be held at the Drake hotel at dates to be announced later.

Details concerning the vocal contests for the south side of the city and the schedule for the competition are as follows:

All contests will be held at 7:30 o'clock in the roof garden ballroom of the Beach View club, 1726 East 53d street. THE TRIBUNE will furnish the piano accompanist. Sopranos and basses will try out on Thursday night, Aug. 11, and altos, tenors and baritones on Friday night, Aug. 12.

Rousing south side rehearsals are reported by A. L. Anderson, choral director of the Woodlawn Kiwanis club, who has been chosen by the All-Chicago Kiwanis group to lead its members in the song battle with the Lions club of the Chicago area at the festival.

Kiwanis Leader Praises Event.

William B. Seifert, president of the Hyde Park Kiwanis club, ventures a prophecy that his organization will get a great thrill out of the song battle.

"The annual Chicagoland Music Festival is in my opinion one of the greatest influences for building clean, patriotic, culturally minded citizens. It is an awe inspiring sight," he declared.

Speaking for the Lions, G. Oscar Challman, vice president of the Cook county council, says that at least 2,000 will be on hand to outsing the Kiwanians. Special arrangements are being made to seat wives of Kiwanians and Lions who may accompany their husbands to Soldiers' field in nearby seats.

With the girls in THE TRIBUNE dance pageant already in costume, rehearsals each Wednesday and Friday morning at the Trianon ballroom are taking on a professional aspect. Miss Ethel and Miss Gertrude Morgan are directing the 200 south siders who will join with 400 others from the north and west sides in a Grecian dance at the concert. The festival 100 piece band, conducted by Victor Grabel, will accompany them.

The following south side singers have entered the festival contests within a week.

PARKSIDE GROUP GAINS MEMBERS IN FACE OF HEAT

Heat is no deterrent to the Parkside Improvement association, which reports an increase of 8 per cent in its membership this month, bringing its total increase during the last two months to 20 per cent.

A committee now is being formed to meet personally with United States Senators Otis F. Glenn and James Hamilton Lewis and enlist their aid in the association's effort to obtain a postal sub-station in the neighborhood, it was announced last week by Frank A. Moore, secretary of the body. John E. Cunerty, chairman of the lighting committee, said that prospects are bright for obtaining the long sought stop and go light at the corner of 71st street and Dorchester avenue.

Mrs. Ida Mygal has been appointed chairman of the social committee.

A., which is entered in the women's choral contest of the Chicagoland Music Festival, sponsored by The Tribune, is one of the outstanding vocal groups in Chicagoland and has an abundance of good looks. THIRD DISTRICT CLUBS TO HOLD SIX INSTITUTES

Split Into Areas; Busy Drafting Programs.

Club institutes, those sessions at which leading club women turn teachers and others go to school to them to learn about the functioning of various club departments from experts, are being planned next season on an unprecedented scale for the Third district, Illinois Federation of Women's clubs.

Mrs. Fred Waterman, Third district president, announced last week that six institutes will be held in as many localities in the district during the coming year. These meetings will replace the single large district institute held last year. Clubs have been grouped for the institutes according to their size and location, so as to give them the greatest possible number of interests in common.

Small Clubs at Disadvantage in Single Institute.

"The single large institute proved rather unwieldy with so many clubs all trying to obtain solutions to their problems in a single session," Mrs. Waterman said. "Then, too, there was a tendency of the larger clubs to overshadow the smaller organizations, which often hesitated to lay their problems before the assembled clubs.

"We hit upon the idea of several small sessions held for clubs of approximately the same size. We believe they will prove much more useful than the single large gathering. Incidentally, ours is the first district to try out such a plan."

Outlining of programs for the institutes has been begun and will be completed within a fortnight, according to Mrs. Waterman.

Bryn Mawr Club to Have Silver Tea in Garden.

A silver tea in the form of a garden party will be the first event on the summer schedule of the Bryn Mawr Woman's club. The philanthropic department is sponsoring the affair at 3:30 next Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Lowell Holt, 6734 Bennett avenue.

A program of music and dancing will be presented and refreshments will be served by members of the junior auxiliary, among them Miss Anita Rose Reece, Miss Beulah Kendall, and Miss Virginia Stadenmund. Mrs. W. R. Studenmund philanthropic chairman, is in charge of arrangements, and Mrs. C. E. Foss, Mrs C. O. Melick, and Mrs. Wade Reece, president, will be among the assisting hostesses.

South Side Catholics to Play Cards Wednesday.

The South Side Catholic Woman's club will hold a card party at 2 o'clock Wednesday at Wieboldt's tearoom, 63d and Green streets. There will be door prizes and refreshments. Mrs. Joseph Gleason, 6617 Ingleside avenue, is chairman, and Mrs. B. J. Allender, 1255 North Shore avenue, treasurer.

SWIMMING PRODIGY AT 8

Just 8 years old, Patsy Fryar Mack is the new aquatic prodigy of the Hyde Park Y. W. C. A. So tiny that she can't stand in any part of the pool, which is four feet deep at the shallow end, this little mermaid is the youngest swimmer to win the 1,000 point award in the history of the pool. As a rule girls winning the award are at least 12 or 13 years old, and it happens that Patsy swims in a class with girls of that age.

Her accomplishments include passing the Red Cross life saving test of disrobing in the water—taking off middie, bloomers, and gym shoes, and then swimming two lengths of the pool. She can swim 100 yards using only her legs, bob 50 times, tread water a minute, and make a surface dive to pick rings off the bottom of the tank eight feet below.

A neat, little diver, Patsy can swim three strokes—the crawl, side, and back—and float, too. The only thing she passed up in the tests was distance swimming.

This gray-eyed, tousle-headed youngster is a daughter of Mrs. Normandie Hutchinson Mack and a granddaughter of Dr. Edward B. Hutchinson, 1351 East 56th street, a member of the first aid department of the American Red Cross. She is named after her uncle, Fryar Patrick Hutchinson, who was one of the youngest lads from the University of Chicago High school to be killed in the world war.

Patsy's teacher is Miss Harriet D. Moore, 1442 East 59th street, assistant health education director at the Hyde Park W. W. C. A.

The little mermaid never was in the water before last July, when she started her lessons. With no reason for fright and no wrong swimming habits to be broken, the youngster was at home from the first. Her mother gives high praise to Miss Moore.

"I can't swim," she said, "but I thought it a shame to have a daughter grow up that way. I think it's just marvelous."

Patsy is in the fourth grade at Kenwood school.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

YES, sir! Jean Pence, 2337 West 108th place, wishes she had cut down that cherry tree. Not so long ago she fell out of it and broke her arm, but we're glad to report she is home from the hospital now and quite okay.

Al Johnson, 6822 Paxton avenue, is now eating at home again, but his sweet missus is beginning to wonder if that vacation in Old St. Joe isn't going to be boomerang. You see, friends and relatives were so kind to papa that Mama Johnson believes she will have to do a lot of fancy cooking now to keep up, and Al just doesn't know where to start on the dinner invitations.

We learn that the Just Us club had a week-end outing at a cottage called the Cat's Meow. Ruth Olson, 8112 Muskegon avenue, one of the members, confesses it was just the right name. The club name, you know, comes from "just us girls."

One of Our Town's nicest, berry-like sun tan's belongs to Mary Stout, 7423 Coles avenue, and she will swear by Muskegon, Mich., as a perfect vacation spot. A slightly different case is that of Verne Nelson, 12206 Longwood drive. Verne is thankful that he could come back to work in the bank where he can stand up at his daily toil.

JIM NOLAN, south park office news hound, claims to be quite a fisherman, but we have a hunch he has been guilty of slight exaggeration. Before departing for Rhinelander, Wis., two weeks ago he promised to ship us a mess of pike—which we haven't seen yet. Furthermore, we intend to drop over to see him in a day or two and find out whether he even caught a mess for himself.

* *

We nominate charming blond Marion Youngquist for a place on Our Town's all-star commuting team. (Didn't know we had one, did you? This will serve as notice that applications for membership will be welcome.) Marion lives in Evanston, but is widely known in Hyde Park as the physical education mogul of the Y. W. C. A. She has put so many miles on the old bus driving back and forth every day that she doesn't want to see a steering wheel during her vacation.

Another members of the commuter all-stars is Joe Olson, 5129 Harper avenue, who recently turned to making the raily round trip to Oak Park for his daily bread.

When friend B. L. Jones, 7551 South Shore drive, goes after a job he draws no line at distance. He's now near Moscow, where he is to be at work with an engineering company for the next 12 months.

Reproduced on the cover of the current issue of a national review is Summer Bouquet, a still life in oils by one of our well known south side artists. The verbal bouquets go to Mrs. Earle Dodds Stevenson, 9411 Longwood drive, known professionally as Florence Ezzel Stevenson.

Did you know that Hyde Park has the 15th rating ping pong star in the international ratings. Hats off to Lee Scott Harrison, 5225 Blackstone avenue.

Basil Smith, manager of the South Chicago branch of the People's Gas, Light and Coke company, might not be on his Wisconsin vacation for all that the folks know who call in asking for "the manager." To all queries the simple reply is, "Sorry, the manager is not in."

Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Dickey, 1505 West 91st street, are proud possessors of a brand new chariot, and their Hyde Park friends are full of hopes that Harry and Grace will use their new bus to come visiting.

In case you've been wondering, it is our pleasure to chronicle that Miss Elizabeth Wolff, of 10254 Avenue H, teacher at Couth Deering, is vacationing all summer with her sister in Denver. And she postal cards having a g-r-r-r-a-a-and time?

Holy Cross Auxiliary.

The auxiliary of Holy Cross hospital will hold its monthly meeting at 1:30 o'clock Friday at the hospital, 2700 West 69th street. Mrs. Perry Lusk will preside.

WHO'S WHO ON SOUTH SIDE

George W. Busch, president of the 79th street and Ashland avenue Business Men's association, has been in business in that community for 18 years. He is owner of Busch Brothers Real Estate company, at 1125 West 79th street, which he founded in conjunction with a brother, later taking it over himself.

GEORGE W. BUSCH

Mr. Busch is a native south sider, having been born in Englewood 43 years ago. He went to Lewis-Champlin school and was graduated from Englewood High school. Before taking up real estate he was part owner of an oil business.

Golf and gardening are Mr. Busch's hobbies. He prides himself on the garden which he has developed around his home at 8246 South May street. It makes a fine playground for his son, Alvin, 11, a pupil at Cook school, and for Audrey, 5 years old. Demands of business have led to Mr. Busch's resignation from other organizations, but he has remained a director of the Englewood Y. M. C. A.

'Y' GIRLS MUST SWIM TO BE IN SWIM IN AUGUST

Program Is Announced for Aquatic Month.

August at the Hyde Park Y. W. C. A., 5231 Dorchester avenue, has been dubbed the month of swims. The pool will be frothing with activity, dips and classes being carded straight through from 11 o'clock in the morning to 7 o'clock in the evening Mondays to Fridays, inclusive, and from 11 o'clock to 3 o'clock in the afternoon on Saturdays except for lunch time.

A new wrinkle, a mothers' and daughters' dip period, has been announced by Miss Marion Youngquist, health education director. This will be playtime rather than a regular class, although an instructor will be on hand to give tips on various strokes and dives. This feature will be from 1:15 to 2:15 in the afternoon on Mondays through to Friday of each week.

Five Weeks' Lessons in Strokes.

Another new feature will be a five week term of lessons in various strokes, one night of each week being given over to a particular stroke. Beginning tomorrow, Monday will be side stroke evening. On Tuesday and Thursday it will be the crawl. Diving will have its inning each Wednesday, while Friday will be given over to breast stroke instruction. The classes will be from 6:30 to 7 o'clock in the evening.

Miss Harriet Moore will be in charge of the classes while Miss Youngquist is on her vacation.

One hour every day except Sunday has been reserved for a senior dip at 11 o'clock in the morning, with a junior dip scheduled between 2:15 and 3:15 o'clock Monday through Friday afternoons. The time between 3:30 and 5 o'clock is set aside for private lessons, while the seniors have another dip from 5 until 6:30 o'clock five afternoons a week.

New Classes Start Sept. 6.

All of this splashing will end on Sept. 3, and a special three day period of swimming classes will begin Sept. 6. A splash party Sept. 9 is being planned for all who join the free classes.

Registrations are being taken now for riding classes, although these will not begin until September.

The experiment of conducting a camp at home for Girl Reserves of the "Y" ended yesterday and was pronounced an unqualified success in its first year. The program was in charge of Mrs. L. S. Cottrell, and more than 50 girls were enrolled.

The varied activities designed to make staying at home like going to camp included overnight hikes, sight seeing tours, swimming and life saving, archery, tennis, golf, rowing, tap dancing, handicraft, first aid, and bridge.

TENNIS FOR GIRLS, HORSESHOES FOR BOYS AT PARKS

Feminine Swimmers of All Ages in Meet Saturday.

From girls' tennis to boys' horseshoes to girls' swimming is the varied south park playground calendar this week.

Probably the biggest events of the week will be the combined junior-intermediate-senior swimming meets for girls at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Sherman park pool. Entries close Thursday.

Just two events, the 80 foot free style and diving with a plain front and one optional, are carded for the juniors, who are under 14 years. The intermediates, under 17, have a 50 yard free style, 80 foot backstroke, and diving. The senior events are 50 and 100 yard free style, 80 foot backstroke, 50 yard breast stroke, and diving. The latter includes plain front, plain back and one optional.

Girls in Tennis Tourneys.

Girls younger than 15 will enter four elimination tennis tourneys at 2 o'clock Tuesday, four survivors in each to meet later in finals. Representatives of Sherman, Fuller, Gage, and McKinley parks will meet at Mark White square. Sherman park, in turn, will be the battleground for girls from Hardin, Mark White, Armour, and Cornell square. Ogden, Bessemer, Calumet, and Lyman Trumbull stars will gather at Palmer park. The other preliminary, at Ogden park, will bring together players from Russell square and Palmer, Grand Crossing, Hamilton, and Tuley parks. Entries close tomorrow.

The eight best horseshoe pitchers among park boys under 15 years will be selected in two preliminaries at 2 o'clock Thursday. The four winners in the north division tourney at Fuller park and the four best in the south division meet at Ogden park will compete in the finals. The youngsters will play 30 point games with pegs set 30 feet apart. Entries must be in by Wednesday.

A Round Robin Final.

Older and more skilled barnyard golfers, boys up to 18, will pitch it out in the intermediate sectional competition at 2 o'clock Saturday. Boys of north division parks will meet at Fuller park and south divison boys at Bessemer park. Two survivors in each tourney will meet in a round robin final. They play 50 point games at the standard 40 foot pitching distance. Entries close Thursday.

Tomorrow also ushers in a month of athletic tests for boys 10 to 15 years old. The events are high and broad jump, 75 yard dash, and a snap under the bar for distance. The idea is to measure the ability of the boys and give recognition, whether for specialized ability or general sturdiness in all events.

Shatters Girls' Record.

Genevieve Valvoda of Cornell square shattered to smithereens the south park record for the senior girls' high jump when she cleared the bar at 5 feet 2¾ inches, within an inch of a world record. The old park standard was 4 feet 9 inches. She added another first in the 100 yard dash to be high point winner of the meet.

With Sophie Minarcik, who won the broad jump and took second in the 50 yard dash, Miss Valvoda was largely responsible for Cornell's romping away with the senior meet, scoring 36 points. Josephine Lavery of Armour square, third star, took second to Miss Valvoda in the 100 yard dash and high jump, also beating the old mark in the latter with her effort of 4 feet 11 inches.

2 Other Records Set.

Two other records were set when Mamie Weise of Sherman park won the basketball throw with a distance of 80 feet 10 inches, just a foot better than the old mark, and when Ruth Cohn of Ogden park was clocked in :06.2 in the 50 yard dash. The Ogden relay team clipped a fifth of a second off the 440 yard relay time when it led Cornell, Armour, and Tuley to the tape in :57.2.

Second, third and fourth in the basketball throw went to Helen Obermeyer of Hardin, Mae Mannin of Trumbull, and Wanda Novak of Bessemer. Similar honors in the broad jump were taken by Catherine Nossem of Tuley, Margaret McCarthy of Fuller, and Clara Ciedlewicz of Cornell.

Ann Hennis of Cornell and Mary Fenstenmachen of Tuley were third and fourth in the 50 yard dash, while these places in the 100 yard event went to Gertrude Sullivan of Ogden and Sylvia Ratchovsky of Cornell. Back of Miss Valvoda and Miss Lavery in the high jump were Grace Ryan of Palmer and Gertrude McIneny of Armour.

Totals for Parks.

The point totals: Cornell, 36; Ogden, 17; Armour, 15; Tuley, 7; Sherman, 7; Hardin, 5; Fuller, 3; Trumbull, 3; Palmer, 2; Bessemer, 1.

Ogden park's victory in the relay gave it 20 points and first honors in the intermediate girls' meet. Cornell, which scored 16 points, could have tied Ogden by snatching the relay. Individual honors went to Cora Bergman of Ogden, the only intermediate to score more than once. She copped the 50 yard dash and tied for first in the broad jump. No new records were set.

Summaries:

50 YARD DASH—Won by Cora Bergman [Ogden]; Genevieve Sidelecki [Cornell], second; Lottie Patarini [Grand Crossing], third; Clara Nanduzzo [Calumet], fourth.

HIGH JUMP—Won by Polly Beganis [Davis]; Mary Alevink [Bessemer], second; Mary McChung [Palmer], third; Catherine Lynch [Fuller], fourth.

BROAD JUMP—Cora Bergman [Ogden] and Helen Kaprina [Cornell] tied for first; Marge Wainwright [Hamilton], third; Gertrude Konopka [Bessemer], fourth.

440 YARD RELAY—Won by Ogden; Cornell, second; Bessemer, third; Calumet, fourth.

POINT TOTALS—Ogden, 20; Cornell, 16; Bessemer, 9; Davis, 7; Palmer, 3; Grand Crossing, 3; Hamilton, 3; Calumet, 2; Fuller, 1.

Kathryn O'Brien of Grand Crossing won the intermediate girls' O'Leary tournament, with Lavretta Casper of Sherman second and Eileen Staley of Bessemer third. Two Gage park girls, Frances Kaplan and Allina Grella, won first and second in the junior tourney. Amelia Biniae of Trumbull was third and Lillian Finlon of Bessemer was fourth.

WOODLAWN B. M. A. IS OLDEST.

The Woodlawn Business Men's association lays claim to being the oldest organization of its kind in continuous service. Also it has a record of not missing a luncheon meeting, summer or winter, for 23 years.

PEACHES FOR THE FAIR

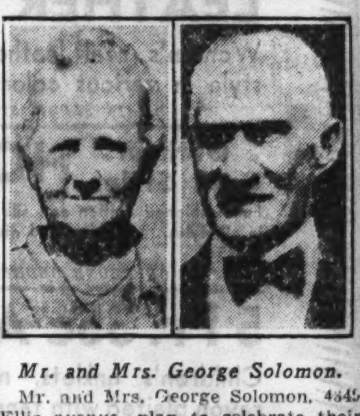
Their Golden Day



Mr. and Mrs. George Solomon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Solomon, 4845 Ellis avenue, plan to celebrate their golden wedding anniversary with a reception for relatives and friends between 7 and 11 o'clock this evening at the Plaisance hotel, 1541 East 60th street.

COUNCIL ORDERS I. C. TO DEPRESS S. SHORE TRACKS

Ask Start on Project by Jan. 1, 1933.

The ordinance calling on the Illinois Central railroad to depress its tracks from 67th street to 79th street was passed by the city council on Thursday afternoon, at the request of Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th], who had previously introduced it and speeded it through the council committee on local transportation, and a subcommittee headed by Ald. Terence F. Moran [16th].

Ald. Hodes defended the ordinance on the floor of the council, when several members seemed about to refer it to other committees, and obtained the unanimous consent of the council for the passage of the ordinance without further delay. It is the first track depression ordinance ever passed by the city council, and provides that the work of depressing the tracks shall begin not later than Jan. 1, 1933, and shall be finished on or before Jan. 1, 1935.

I. C. Takes Appeal.

Meanwhile, the Illinois Central has taken an appeal to the Illinois commerce commission, against the provisions of the ordinance, the completion of which is estimated to cost $10,000,000. The expense would be borne entirely by the railroad, according to the ordinance. The commerce commission has taken the appeal under advisement.

"The ordinance now awaits the railroad's acceptance," Ald. Hodes announced, following its passage by the council. "If the road accepts, work can be started this summer, and it will afford employment to hundreds of men. If the railroad fails to accept, we'll go before the commerce commission, the courts, or whatever is necessary to get action."

4 Track Route Planned.

Exactly 20 resolutions on the subject of track depression had been passed by the city council at Ald. Hodes' behest, previous to the passage of the ordinance.

"My chief campaign pledge was that I would pursue this matter of track depression to the end," Ald. Hodes said, "and thus far I have made good on my promise. I intend to stick to it until the job is finished."

The plan incorporated in the ordinance calls for the building of well ventilated, modern, underground stations to replace the present stations, and a four track route with all crossings at the normal street level passing over the tracks via bridges.

Following the passage of the ordinance; Ald. B. A. Cronson [4th] obtained the passage of a further resolution, stating that it was the consensus of the council that the track depression should not be accompanied by any increase of fares.

GIRLS TO WIN ON BEAUTY AT FAIR IF CANNING FAILS

Kids to Get Chance at County Show, Too.

Beauty is an asset of so many of the Chicago girls entering canned products at the Cook county fair that some of them are considering entering the beauty and popularity contest to be conducted at the fair.

Many girls are capitalizing on their high school domestic science training by entering fruits and vegetables in the canned goods exhibits. If they fail to win a blue ribbon in this department plenty of them are fully qualified by pulchritude to enter the Miss Cook County contest.

The beauties will parade through the flower show, lending an added touch of loveliness to gorgeous floral display.

High school students and housewives from all over the city are preparing jellies, pastries, cakes, pickles, cookies, jams and home made candies to vie with those being sent in from rural districts.

Fair Opens Aug. 5.

While the farm women have had more experience in competition of this sort, Chicago home makers have had the advantage of expert advice from cooking schools.

Food exhibits will not be the only features of competition open to women when the fair opens at North avenue and River road on Aug. 5 to run through Aug. 14. More than $500 in cash prizes are at stake in the domestic arts classes, which include French and eyelet embroidery, crocheting and knitting, basketry, oil cloth articles, quilts and rugs and oil painting.

Women also will participate in the flower show, horse show and dog show, all of which have prominent places on the program.

Chance for Children.

Children have an opportunity to make a little "pin money" on Aug. 13, when cash prizes will be awarded for individual child achievements.

Cash and other prizes will be given for exhibits by children from 5 to 12 years old, showing their abilities in the household arts, such as cooking, sewing and embroidery; for the best portrayal of a character from childhood literature, and for flower and vegetable exhibits.

LOOK TO R. F. C. FOR AID ON NEW RAILROAD YARDS

Far south side civic leaders now are trying to figure out their next move to hastening completion of the new Nickel Plate railroad yards south of 110th street which must be completed before the present Stony Island yards can be removed and streets opened through the right of way between 83d and 93d streets.

Joseph C. Tufo, president of the Chesterfield Improvement association, last week expressed the hope that funds might be available from the Reconstruction Finance corporation. This followed receipt of a letter from H. J. Klein, vice president of the railroad, dashing immediate hopes for beginning work.

"We want to go ahead as rapidly as possible," wrote Mr. Klein. "Necessarily the progress made will be entirely dependent on finances."

COL. LEMUEL Q. GETS OFF A FEW STOOPNAGLISMS

Gives 4 Mills Brothers a Hand, Too.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle, who chases gloom via W-G-N with Budd took time off between performances at the Chicago theater the other day to tap off a few paragraphs for us. Here's how he feels about things:

SYLVIA FROOS.

"Larry, I appreciate your kindness in letting me sort of guest-column the deuce out of you today. Our date in Chicago wasn't divulged to us until only a few hours before we left, so we had to fly out here from New York to get here in time. Well, we didn't exactly fly—we came on the train; but, anyway, we made fast time and paid an extra ten dollars for the privilege. The boss refunds the ten to us at the end of the week, but it's in our contract that we return it as soon as we get it. So you can see that a so-called comedy team has a great deal to do besides just be a scream at house parties. [Ed. note—Well, what else?]

"I hail from Buffalo, N. Y. That's a town at the eastern end of Lake Erie that gets the sewage from Chicago as it passes to go over Niagara falls. So you can see that Chicago seems like home to me—that selfsame fresh air that I breathed as a child in Buffalo. [Ed. note—That smell comes from Cleveland, Lemuel.]

"And while we're here we want Amos 'n' Andy to have the privilege of meeting us. You know how it is—there they are, all cooped up in a little studio with Bill Hay, and I'd like to see them get out once in a while and meet some real artists. We'll introduce them to the Mills brothers and Sylvia Froos at the Chicago.

"Our schedule for the week is filled, Larry, so I'm afraid we won't be available for all of the dinner dates you suggest. However, as I recall it without my little red book, we are open for engagements any day until next Thursday. Budd likes French fried potatoes and I like tenderloin steak, anchovies, peppermint sticks and four bottles of tomato juice named Joe Cook. You can get our telephone number from our manager, a Mr. Hesse, from Philadelphia, and we're almost always there. Am I a scream or am I not? [Ed. note—Like Ed Wynn, we'll answer that one next week.]

"COL. LEMUEL Q. STOOPNAGLE."

Recommended to knob twisters: Ted Weems' and Bernie Cummins' dance music.

DUSTY ROADES. [Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

Jane Froman's concerts at 3 Sunday afternoons.

Artells Dickson, the Singing Vagabond, at 9:15 a. m. on CBS.

KDKA morning ensemble.

Dusty Roades' version of "My Wild Irish Rose," also his many novelty songs.

Enric Madriguerra's dance rhythms.

East and Dumke's mimicry. (They're superb doing impersonations of Rudy Vallee, Russ Columbo, and Floyd Gibbons, who has followed them into the Palace.)

Having exhausted all the possibilities of Lanny Ross' collegiate track career his press agents have disclosed as the item of the week, that he was christened Lancelot, which a lot of folks suspected all along. . . . Radio City will be ready about this time next year to receive NBC, if building continues to progress at present rate. . . . Ben Bernie is off the air until sometime in September. . . . There really does seem to be in Bernie Cummins a certain resemblance to the late Rudy Valentino. . . . The name Ted di Corsia, known to few of you now, is likely to be well advertised by November. . . . He will play the rôle of President Hoover in the new March of Time broadcasts. . . . They're still looking for the ideal "ghost" for Roosevelt.

Mme. Schumann Heink and Gilda Gray were featured on the same vaudeville bill recently . . . There's something on the air called the Lily of the Valley Camp Meeting quartet. . . . Columbia has discovered that 293 of the 531 popular songs heard over the system in one week were heard only once. . . . That is certainly something to be thankful for. . . . Though "My Mom" wasn't one of them. . . . Gus Arnheim takes Wayne King's place on his Sunday commercial at 2 over NBC for the next four weeks.

Carl Moore said his last "That'll be all for a spell" (for a spell) over W-G-N Friday, and headed for the road with his band. . . . This genial wag won a host of friends on W-G-N the past season who are now insisting on seeing him in the flesh. . . . We wish Deacon Moore lots of luck and hope he comes back. . . . Phil Levant, late of W-G-N, yields to Don Pedro at the Plantation club, White Bear lake, and on CBS.

"MUSIC THAT SATISFIES" ON W-G-N

Alex Gray, one of the finest baritones on the air, who will be heard this week on W-G-N when the "Music That Satisfies" program, heard nightly at 9, moves to The Tribune station.

[Craine Photo.]

That soft voiced trio from New Orleans, the Boswell sisters, are to sing at 9 Monday and Thursday evenings over W-G-N henceforth. Top to bottom, Vet (short for Helvetia), Connie, and Martha.

Ruth Etting, star of the stage, screen, and radio, whose blues songs are to be heard regularly over W-G-N on the program that features also the Boswell sisters and Alex Gray.

[White Studio Photo.]

M'COY BRINGS VERSATILE BAND BACK TO W-G-N

Margie Hudson Sings with Orchestra.

Featuring Margie Hudson, a brunette blues chantress, Clyde McCoy and his orchestra last night moved into the summer garden of the Drake hotel, with W-G-N as a nightly outlet for their music. McCoy takes the evening periods occupied for nearly a year by Deacon Carl Moore.

McCoy and his lads feature music with plenty of rhythm and spirit. He has a versatile crew of musicians.

Brother in Orchestra.

Scotch Johnny Cameron, who plays a saxophone, is said to be an almost perfect double for Leslie Howard, the picture star. Bud Prentiss, another sax player, is dubbed Clark Gable by his buddies for his resemblance to the current movieland heart throb; Tommy Miller, the third and final sax blower, looks like Joe Sanders, they say.

Clayton Cash, an able trumpet player, has ambitions to be a tennis champion. "Shorty" Waller is another trumpeter.

Boasts Smallest Trumpet.

Ed Schaffer, trombonist, is the butt of many jokes in the McCoy aggregation; Augie Thielman, drummer, is a baseball and bridge addict. Pick Mansfield, guitarist, studied to be a physician and now takes care of all the minor ailments of the players. McCoy's outfit is said to have the youngest personnel of any name orchestra in the land.

McCoy brings with him "the world's smallest trumpet." It's only 6 inches long, but turns out hot notes when Clyde plays "Sugar Blues."

VARIETY MARKS SALERNO HOUR AT 9:30 TONIGHT

A song from grand opera, a love song, one of the old favorites and a popular new tune, made up the program for Lawrence Salerno on his half hour broadcast with the W-G-N Symphony orchestra at 9:30 tonight. The popular W-G-N baritone opens his program with "Prologue from Pagliacci." "Ma Mie" is his second offering while the third song on the program is "I Want to Go Home," one of the newest popular numbers. "Old Man River," that famous song from "Show Boat," is Salerno's fourth song, and he closes the program with "Chiribiribin." Besides furnishing the accompaniments, the Symphony orchestra offers "Habanera" and Valquero's song, "Caucasian Beauty," and "Carillion."

PRINCE OF WALES AND LEBRUN TO SPEAK ON W-G-N

When Albert Francois Lebrun, president of France, and the prince of Wales speak at the unveiling ceremonies of a new war memorial at Thiepval, France, tomorrow, their words will be heard in this country over W-G-N and the CBS network at 9:35 a. m. The ceremony, postponed from May 16 because of the sudden death of the late President Doumer, will open with a hymn and prayers of invocation, followed by the addresses of M. Lebrun and the prince of Wales.

RUBE APPLEBERRY TO MAKE PERSONAL APPEARANCE TOUR

Since "Big Leaguers and Bushers" went on the air a few weeks ago Rube Appleberry has received thousands of letters from boys and girls throughout Chicago and the middle west requesting his autograph and photographs of himself.

Now Rube has been persuaded to make a number of personal appearances during the coming week at various playgrounds and parks throughout the city. Definite announcements of the exact times and places will be made following broadcasts of the Big Leaguers and Bushers programs during the coming week. At these appearances Rube might be persuaded to pose for a picture or to autograph any articles desired.

In addition to his personal appearances Rube and Tommy and the rest of the Panthers are scheduled for a mighty busy week as they journey to Washington to play Walter Johnson's fast Senators.

Mother Moynihan

BESS FLYNN.

Bess Flynn, who plays the part of Mother Moynihan in the Painted Dreams sketch, heard from W-G-N at 11:35 every week day morning, has plenty of experiences in her own home to fit her for the part she portrays on the air. She is the mother of two boys and one girl. Her children are theatrical youngsters and impromptu plays in the back yard of the Flynn home are a common thing. Charles Flynn, who is 12, has taken many important parts in broadcasts on W-G-N and on the networks. John, 9, seems to be the business man of the family, however. Recently a carnival was held in the Flynn neighborhood and John decided to give a carnival of his own. He put on his show, but it ended rather disastrously when he cut his leg on a rusty spike. A few days later when John was getting along on his crutches big business again sounded its clarion call and again John responded. This time it was not a carnival, however. Mrs. Flynn discovered the enterprising John renting out his crutches for a penny "a walk."

OSCAR BLUEGE TO BE QUIZZED BY ELSON TODAY

Another parade of major league baseball players will appear before the W-G-N microphone from the playing field at Comiskey park, the home of the White Sox, this week. Bob Elson, W-G-N's baseball reporter, has announced a schedule of players which includes members of the White Sox, New York Yankees, and Washington Senators.

At 2:45 today, before he starts the broadcast of the Sox-Washington game, Elson will introduce Oscar Bluege, infielder of the Senators and a Chicago boy. Tomorrow Sam Rice of the Senators will speak before the broadcast of the game.

On Tuesday Elson plans to introduce Charlie Berry, the Sox catcher, while on Thursday the veteran pitcher, Urban [Red] Faber will be interviewed. Two of the New York Yankees will appear on Friday and Saturday. Friday Ben Chapman, the Yanks' brilliant outfielder, will speak, while Saturday Tony Lazzeri, infielder, will be interviewed.

LITTLE CHILDREN TO BE FAVORED BY ORCHESTRA

A special group of numbers have been selected by Director Delos Owen for the "Children's Concert" from W-G-N at 6:45 this evening. The program has been specially arranged for the entertainment of the younger children and includes: "Carnival March," "Antics of the Clowns," "The Peanut Vendor," and "Dancing Doll." Two special arrangements, a xylophone solo by Mr. Zipp with the orchestra, "Minute Waltz," and a flute and clarinet arrangement of "The Flight of the Bumblebee."

Kate Smith to Present Irish Program Wednesday

In response to requests Kate Smith will offer an all Irish program in her broadcast over W-G-N at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday.

SEVERAL W-G-N FEATURES ARE RESCHEDULED

Changes in the program times of several W-G-N features take effect this week. The W-G-N minstrel show, which previously has been presented on Monday nights, has been rescheduled for Tuesday nights at 8 o'clock. Troubadors, a program of the ballads featuring Lawrence Salerno, will be presented at 7 p. m. Tuesdays, while the Palmer house ensemble evening period on Tuesdays has been rescheduled for 7:45 p. m. On Monday nights from 8:45 to 9 o'clock a new program, "With the Masters," has been arranged. This program will be presented by a stringed quartet, the piano and reed instruments of the W-G-N Symphony orchestra, and will feature chamber music.

Singin' Sam to Present "Georgia on My Mind"

Singin' Sam starts the week with "Georgia on My Mind" during his recital over W-G-N and Columbia network from 7:15 to 7:30 p. m. tomorrow. His other contributions will be "Dream Sweetheart," "Old Fashioned Garden" and "On the Road to Mandalay."

Fred Meinken to Present Semi-Classical Program

At 5 next Thursday afternoon Fred Meinken, W-G-N pianist, will present a diversified program of semi-classical music. He will include selections from Kalman's "Countess Maritza," Dvorak's "Humoresque," "Canzonetta," by Victor Herbert, and "Country Gardens," by Percy Grainger.

BOSWELLS, GRAY, ETTING OPEN ON W-G-N TOMORROW

Shilkret and Brokenshire on Program, Too.

"Music That Satisfies," the program featuring Nat Shilkret and his 36 piece orchestra; Alex Gray, Ruth Etting, and the Boswell sisters, will move to W-G-N on a nightly, except Sunday, schedule from 9 to 9:15 p. m., beginning tomorrow evening.

With the program of Tuesday, Aug. 9, Arthur Tracy, better known as "The Street Singer," will be added to the cast, replacing Gray. The nightly talent line-up, from that date, will be: Monday, the Boswells; Tuesday, the Street Singer; Wednesday, Miss Etting; Thursday, the Boswells; Friday, "The Street Singer," and Saturday, Miss Etting. Shilkret and his orchestra will appear nightly, as will Norman Brokenshire, master of ceremonies.

The Boswells Lead Trios.

Selection of the Street Singer for this series climaxes a meteoric career which saw him begin as a trouping tenor on the operatic stage and rise, in the last year, a national favorite on the radio.

The Boswell sisters, Martha, Connie and Vet, who hail from New Orleans, are easily the most popular feminine harmony team on the air.

Ruth Etting, whose name has been famous on the stage and screen for almost a decade, has become an outstanding radio attraction during the last year through her blues singing.

The Rise of Shilkret.

Shilkret has a rich background of experience. Hailed as a child prodigy at the age of seven, when he was featured as a clarinet soloist with a boys' orchestra of 70 pieces, he went steadily up the musical ladder. At 16 he was playing with the Russian Symphony orchestra. Associated with him in this orchestra were such famous artists as Safanov, Elman, Heifetz, Lhevinne, and others.

Later he played with the New York Philharmonic orchestra under Safanov and Gustav Mahler.

At the age of 24 Shilkret became a musical director with the Victor company. It was then that he began his experiments in the method of orchestration which later became so well known in his recordings and radio broadcasts.

OUTDOOR SERIES TO BE PRESENTED ON MIDDAY HOUR

Four laymen will appear as guest speakers on the W-G-N midday services during the coming week. The talks arranged by Dr. John L. Dickson, director of the program, have as their subject, "In God's Out of Doors," and the series is to be a symposium on the spiritual and æsthetic values of outdoor life. This series is a sequel to the "Vacation Days" talks of last week. The speakers follow: Tomorrow, Roy James Battis, director of education of the Salvation Army; Tuesday, Dr. Walter E. Cole, member of the executive committee of the Boy Scouts of America; Wednesday, Oscar C. Hagen, layman of the Presbyterian church; Thursday, Roger F. Howe, chairman of the committee on management of the West Side Y. M. C. A.; Friday—Dr. Albert W. Palmer, president of the Chicago Theological seminary; Saturday, Dr. John L. Dickson, director of W-G-N midday services.

BUCK WILL PLAY 'MIDNIGHT BELLS' ON W-G-N TODAY

Four numbers will be featured by Verne Buck, the master violinist, on the masters program from 1 to 1:30 this afternoon. Verne has selected "Midnight Bells," "Serenade," "Carryonetta," and "Old Folks at Home" as his offerings. Allan Grant and Leonard Salvo, pianist and organist, who appear with Buck on the program, also have chosen featured numbers for their programs. Grant will play "Valse D'Amour," one of his own compositions, and themes from "Countess Maritza." Salvo's part of the program will include Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and "Ich Liebe Dich."

New Daughter Is Born to Abe Zippersteins

If the drums in the W-G-N Symphony orchestra seem to sound a bit louder, or that xylophone solo is played with more than the usual amount of pep, it's just Mr. Abe Zipperstein "strutting his stuff." Mr Zipp is a proud man these days. He has a new daughter, born last week at the Mount Sinai hospital. Weight 8 pounds.

W-G-N'S NEWEST SONGSTRESS

BEBE FRANKLYN.

[Mitchell Photo.]

ARMY OF SCOUTS TO WATCH SOX PLAY SENATORS

Warned to Bring Cards or Miss Game.

Next Tuesday bids fair to be the red letter day of the summer in scouting circles, sharing honors only with Aug. 11. Those are the dates which the White Sox management has selected for its baseball parties for Boy Scouts of the south side.

Ever since word went out that only troops accompanied by a scoutleader or an adult would be admitted to the park, the young fans have been busy hunting grownups to replace leaders who are busy in the daytime.

Besides the adult who must accompany each troop, the only other ticket for admission of a scout will be his registration card.

Expect 1,000 to 3,000.

Anywhere from 1,000 to 3,000 boys are expected to assemble at Palmer park, 35th street and Shields avenue, at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday, preparatory to marching to Sox park in a body.

The game starts at 3 o'clock and is arousing keen expectations among the boys, for the Sox are scheduled to meet the Washington Senators. On the 11th they will play the St. Louis Browns.

Scouts of the South Shore district were hosts to their families at a beach party Wednesday evening at Jackson park beach.

Music by the breadboard band of the South Shore Y. M. C. A. was one of the features of the program, in which Troops 500, 513, 522, 529, 553, 555, 560, 576, 578, 583, 585, 599, and 1,580 participated. Bill Krauss' ghost story was the final event of the evening.

Committee of Men in Charge.

Bonnell Allen, assistant district executive, was in charge of arrangements, assisted by the district summer recreation committee headed by Dr. J. W. Russell, and including Dr. John Hinckley, William Schoenberg, Bert Auerbach, Roland Rawson, J. J. Dooley, Tom Walsh, Jim Berrensen and Clarence Engberg.

Initiation of 27 Sea Scouts and three mates took place July 23 on the Santa Maria in Jackson park harbor with 11 Sea Scout ships of the South Shore district participating.

George Coleman, H. W. Johnson and Milton Hahn were made mates in the ritual at which A. A. Daniels, skipper of the Roosevelt, was master of ceremonies.

Torch Chantress

Meet Bebe Franklyn, W-G-N's newest songstress.

Miss Franklyn is a newcomer to radio. She is a former stage singer and although she has been on W-G-N's daytime program only a week, Bebe has attracted many listeners with her unusual voice. Miss Franklyn has a wide voice range, and in the songs on her program has exhibited an unusual style.

For eight years Bebe has been engaged in stage work and voice study. She had among her teachers Señor Adolfo de la Huerta, the former president of Mexico, who has been engaged in voice teaching in Los Angeles and Hollywood since his departure from Mexico. De La Huerta's pupils include some of the most famous stars of movieland.

Bebe has toured the country both on the Pantages and Keith-Orpheum vaudeville circuits. She headed her own acts during the last two years and prior to that worked with Joseph E. Howard and Harry Stanley. On the vaudeville stage she sang operatic numbers. Her répertoire includes more than 15 rôles in French, German and Italian operas.

Miss Franklyn appeared in one musical comedy during her time on the stage. That was "The Time, The Place and The Girl."

On her program on W-G-N Bebe has elected to sing those popular blues songs and torch numbers. She has an intimate, free style which has completely won her listeners. She is appearing in two programs each week, from 2:20 to 2:30 p. m., Mondays and Wednesdays.

Neighborhood Theaters

Both light and heavy entertainment are on the bill at the Avalon this week—both good! "Week-ends Only" forms interesting diversion. It's the story of a motherless girl raised in wealth, who finds herself penniless. Through the old time butler, now a night club proprietor, she becomes hostess. There she meets a wealthy man who regards her as a necessity to the success of his week-end parties. Then, enter smiling a struggling young artist. These leads, in the order named, are well played by cute little Joan Bennett, Halliwell Hobbes, John Halliday, and Ben Lyon. "Washington Masquerade," the other film, is great Lionel Barrymore, always reason for rejoicing, plays as a silver tongued lawyer from the west who wends his way to the United States senate—and gets surprises aplenty.

Country Boy in Hollywood.

For real knock-out amusement have a look at "Make Me a Star" which combines with "Is My Face Red?" at the Piccadilly. It's the story of "Merton of the Movies" and you'll find the Will Rogerslike Stuart Erwin just about perfect as the boy who gives up clerking at a country store to go to Hollywood. His heartbreaking trials are a riot—and pathetic. Joan Blondell's work as the movie wise girl who takes the boy under her wing is superb. Other star support comes from Charles Sellon, Sam Hardy, Zasu Pitts, and Ben Turpin. The piece is genuine, appealing, and has fine dialog.

"Is My Face Red?" is a well cast and entertaining picture of a columnist—Ricardo Cortez. Best support from Arline Judge, Jill Esmond, Robert Armstrong, Zasu Pitts, and Helen Twelvetrees.

Harlow Becomes a Red Head.

Behold! Her platinum locks have turned to titian! And, what's more, Jean Harlow is a whirlwind in "Red Headed Woman." Though the story is changed a bit from Katherine Brush's novel, the characterization of the red head remains—a dandy. Yes, the gal's clever. She marries her boss gets what she wants from men, and continues that way despite a false step or two. Support comes from Chester Morris, Lewis Stone, Una Merkel, and Lelia Hyams. See it at the Tivoli.

Lawyer and Columnist Films.

Two "cycle" pictures adorn the Jeffery and Grove screens through Tuesday. Ending the "lawyer" group is "Attorney for the Defense." It is distinguished by excellent acting, though the story lacks conviction. Lowell Sherman as a prosecutor, turned defense attorney after convicting an innocent man. Most dramatic moment: Lowe defending himself for murder he did not commit. Part of the columnist cycle is "Love Is a Racket." Columnist Doug Fairbanks Jr. finds himself given a run around by one girl and his conclusions furnish the title. You'll go for Ann Dvorak in a big way.

"New Morals for Old."

The Maryland bill is "Love Is a Racket," reviewed above, and "New Morals for Old." The latter films the old story of the growth of the wild, impatient, younger generation into the older generation, impatient with the pranks of the new younger body. Honors to Robert Young, Margaret Perry, Lewis Stone, and Laura Hope Crews. This picture also plays Wednesday and Thursday at the Jeffery and Grove.

Nerts to Jack Oakie.

Nerts! But not quite as funny as it might be is "Million Dollar Legs" now at the Tower with "Hell's House." Jack Oakie, an American, would win the fair daughter [Susan Fleming] of the king of a foreign country [W. C. Fields] and gets himself the idea of taking the land's star athletes to win the Olympics—which they do.

Anti-Soviet Rebuttal.

They got out an anti-Soviet rebuttal to Russian propaganda, and "Forgotten Commandment" is it. Woven into the film are parts from De Mille's "The Ten Commandments," which point out what happens to those who disregard—as the Stalins, Lenins, et al, are charged with doing. Starred are Sari Maritz, new Russian star; Irving Pichel, Gene Raymond, and Marguerite Churchill. It is paired with "Riders of the Purple Sage" today and tomorrow at the Harper.

COATES TO TAKE BATON TONIGHT ON STADIUM HOUR

Russian Music Slated on Lewisohn Concert.

Albert Coates, Anglo-Russian conductor, will present the first of a series of four all-Russian programs during the broadcast of the Lewisohn Stadium concert over W-G-N and the Columbia network, from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. tonight. Coates will direct the orchestra of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society in selections from the works of Borodin and Tschaikovsky.

The opening number will be the "Marche Polovetsienne" from Borodin's opera, "Prince Igor." The story has been termed the "King Arthur Legend of Russia."

Tschaikovsky's Symphony No. 6, the famous "Pathetique," will conclude the presentation. This symphony is the symbol of the despair and suffering of the Russian people under the Czars.

Coates has directed leading orchestras of England, America, Spain, Italy, Germany, Scandinavia, and numerous other countries, but his life has been associated primarily with the fortunes of Russian culture. Under the czar, during the revolution, and now under the soviet regime, Coates has been one of the outstanding figures in the Russian musical world. He was artistic director of the Imperial Russian Opera from 1910 to 1917.

He helped the theaters of Petrograd and Moscow survive the revolution and win the coöperation of the new government. Last month he was appointed general musical director of the Leningrad and Moscow Philharmonic Orchestras and conductor of the Bolshoi Opera of Moscow.

Six Thousand Voices to Sing "The Messiah"

Inspiring Hallelujah Chorus One Feature of the Chicagoland Music Festival.

By Edward Moore.

thing a bit more elaborate than ordinary community singing could not be put into form on the same basis.

They knew that up and down the length and breadth of this land from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore., from the Canadian border to the Rio Grande choral societies by hundreds, thousands, tens of thousands had been carrying on active careers for years back. They also knew that out of all the vast literature of choral singing "The Messiah" was by far the most popular, that almost every choral society revived it at least once a year and that many of them were in the habit of doing it several times during the season.

Most Beloved Music.

They considered, then, that anywhere in the country and particularly in the district known as Chicagoland thousands of singers knew it so well that they could sing the Hallelujah chorus by heart, without music, without so much as a rehearsal in case it became impossible to hold a rehearsal. They believed, also, that all who had ever sung it knew it was immortal music, that enthusiasm in its performance never died out, that the chorister who had sung it thirty years ago would get just as much of a thrill out of it by singing it today. Wherefore, they decided to organize as large a group as possible and make the Hallelujah chorus a special number on the festival program.

At first there were some practical matters to be settled. Noble Cain, the choral conductor of the Chicagoland Music Festivals, was called into consultation and asked whether an army of 6,000 singers could be led and controlled by a single baton. He expressed his belief that the idea was not only possible but entirely feasible.

The next point was the evident fact that so huge a chorus would demand an accompaniment in kind, at least in weight if not in numbers. Then came a consultation with Victor Grabel, general musical director of the festival, to determine whether the accompaniment of the Hallelujah chorus could be played by a band of 100 pieces instead of, as customary, an orchestra of forty or fifty. Here, too, the answer was in the affirmative.

So, an enormous body of singers sang the Hallelujah chorus under Mr. Cain's direction, and a new bit of musical history was made that year.

Invitations to All.

The work will be sung again this summer, and again THE TRIBUNE and associated newspapers extend invitations to all who would like to take part in the giant performance. No examination or voice test will be necessary. All that is asked is a knowledge of the piece and willingness to participate. Any one who has ever sung in "The Messiah" and would like to revive memories will be welcomed. A blank form will be found elsewhere in this issue of THE TRIBUNE. Fill it out, stating your voice, whether soprano, contralto, tenor, or bass, and mail it to the Music Festival Editor at this address. Its receipt will automatically register you as a member of the chorus. If you prefer to sing from the music, bring your own score on the night of Aug. 20. Further particulars as to place of assemblage and other details will be announced in these columns at a later date.

Of Mr. Cain's achievements as a choral director much has been said, and without exception in terms of praise. He is the organizer and director of the Chicago A Cappella chorus, whose singing has begun what would seem to be a new era in the field of choral work. He has recently returned from a trip to the west where to enthusiastic applause he conducted a huge chorus in the Mormon tabernacle in Salt Lake and another army of singers on the stage of the Hollywood bowl. He is a conductor of high ability and infused with the magnetism that transforms the able conductor into the great conductor.

Greater Than Ever.

There is excellent reason to believe that the chorus this summer will be greater than ever before. Every singer in Soldiers' field, both in organized groups and as volunteer single additions, will take part in the Hallelujah chorus. At present there are contest entries of sixteen men's, nine women's, and twelve mixed choruses. As these average about fifty singers each, there is a group of something over 1,800 choristers to begin.

Add to these 2,000 Negro singers who will appear in special groups of spirituals, a small army in themselves and ranking among the most enthusiastic of all the Hallelujah chorus singers. This brings the number up to 3,800. Additional entries are coming in daily, and individuals desirous of swelling the Hallelujah chorus have in the past been numbered by battalions and regiments.

Wherefore, all you singers who would like to take part in the most inspiring event of your lives, fill out your application blanks and join the rest of the enthusiasts.

The following is a summary of the choral organizations at present registered in the Chicagoland Music Festival of 1932:

Music Notes.

Emerging from his summer home in Wisconsin for a limited period, Frederick Stock is now on the way west with Hollywood as his objective. He is not being called by the films but by Hollywood bowl, where he will conduct a number of concerts in the series bearing the attractive name, "Symphony Under the Stars."

Among the week's musical activities will be a lecture-recital on Massenet's "Manon," by Rutheda L. Pretzel at her home, 1035 Bluff road, Glencoe, and assisted by Lolita Berling, soprano, and Ludlow White, baritone, tomorrow morning at 10:45 o'clock; a piano recital by Adelaide Anderson at the Punch and Judy theater Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock; a program of music for two and three pianos played by Lillian Boguslawski, Herman Shapiro, and Moissaye Boguslawski at Baldwin hall Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock, and a two-piano recital by Dorothy Crost and Berenice Jacobson at the Punch and Judy theater Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

Frank St. Leger, for a number of years a member of the Chicago Civic Opera company's conductor's staff, will be the conductor of the Houston, Texas, Symphony orchestra this season. He is at present recuperating from a serious illness suffered shortly after the close of the opera season, and will take up his new duties in October.

The musical library left by the late John Philip Sousa, divided by him through force of circumstances into two parts, will continue to be an active force in band music. One part has been presented to Victor Grabel, who, among his other duties, is general musical director of the Chicagoland Music Festival. The other has been sent to the University of Illinois, whose band activities are under the charge of Austin A. Harding. The university will make it a permanent exhibit and construct a fireproof room for its housing, but it will also be subject to reference and study by bandmasters and other musicians desirous of consulting it.

Albert Coates, now in New York for his fifth season with the Philharmonic orchestra's Stadium concerts, has been offered the post of general music director of all the symphony orchestras in Russia. He was head of the Russian opera during the imperial régime, but the present position involves even more activity. Among other details it means a tour twice a season to the orchestras at Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev, Kharkov, Odessa, Tiflis, Sverdlovsk, Stalingrad, Baku, and several other cities where orchestras are to be developed.

In addition he is to produce an opera in Moscow and another in Leningrad. His own opera, "Samuel Pepys," is also to be heard. It had its first performance in Munich two years ago.

AFTER a year's absence devoted to research among the European theaters, Eva Le Gallienne will reopen her Civic Repertory playhouse in New York next November. The contemplated list includes twenty plays of which at least three will be new. The first attraction will be Molnar's "Liliom," in which Miss Le Gallienne and Joseph Schildkraut will play the leading parts, just as they did when the Theater Guild brought out the production nearly ten years ago.

Director

Noble Cain, whose exploits in the field of choral music have been many and brilliant, continues this year as choral conductor of the Chicagoland Music Festival, to take place in Soldiers' field on Saturday night, Aug. 20. Mr. Cain will wield the baton over a huge singing assemblage of over 6,000 persons in a performance of the Hallelujah chorus from Handel's "The Messiah."

Summer Stock Flourishes in New England

New York State Also Has Its Quota of Celebrities in Vacation Repertoire

NEW YORK. — [Special.] — The number of summer stock companies in operation around the United States this year is far larger than would be imagined until they are all assembled in one column. If most of them happen to be in New York state and New England, economic conditions probably rule the distribution. The companies go where the largest groups of patrons happen to be taking their vacations.

But there they are in full operation, trying out new plays as future Broadway prospects, reviving old plays for the same reason or because it has happened to seem like a good idea at the time. Moreover, a host of well known actors find employment, a good thing all around for them, not only the employment itself in a lean year but because in a stock company the members appear in varied rôles, thereby learning all around whether they can really act or whether they have been cast to type.

The state of New York has ten of these companies, mostly in the neighborhood of the lower Hudson river and Long Island sound. Massachusetts has seven, Connecticut the same number, Maine three, New Hampshire two. Other states show a scattering representation over a considerable space, one each in Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Michigan, and as far west as Colorado and California.

They are saying that the indebtedness of the Florenz Ziegfeld corporation at the time of Mr. Ziegfeld's death amounted to $22,000. Most of this was represented by the production of "Hot-Cha," a sum said to run to $19,000. There was another item in the revival of "Show Boat," but that work was on the way to prosperity and had come within $3,000 of paying for itself. A. C. Blumenthal called a meeting of the company's creditors the other day, and, while he declined to give out official figures, he stated that the creditors had agreed not to press their claims but to take payment out of the profits of "Show Boat" as they may accrue.

The new season is starting. Two openings are booked for this week. One is "The Devil's Little Game," rated as a first play by Joseph Jay Ingerlid. It will be at the Provincetown playhouse, and Burr Caruth, Victor Morgan, and Ann Shearer will do some of its acting. The other is "Page Pygmalion," once called "The Goddess of Love," and from the pen of Carl Henkle. In the cast are the names of Robert Emmett Keane, Claire Whitney, Doris Eaton, Percy Helton, Thomas Coffin Cooke, Aline McDermott, Carleton Young, and June Clayworth, and they will be at the Bijou theater.

The Shuberts say that if they can come to diplomatic agreements with Equity regarding Sunday performances and with various unions regarding minimum scales, number of employés, and working conditions generally, all with the idea of increased intake and lowered costs, they will bring out three revues, five musical comedies, and several foreign plays.

The revues are "The Forgotten Man," which has a book by J. P. McEvoy; "The Passing Show of 1933," and a new edition of "The Greenwich Village Follies." The musical plays spoken of are "Cyrano de Bergerac," an adaptation of the play made by Charles Locke and with music by a Russian composer, Samuel Porkass; "Beau Brummel," another adaptation of a like named play made by Gladys Unger wherein Harry Tierney and Edward Eliscu are named as makers of tunes and lyrics; Lehar's "The Land of Smiles"; "Smiling Faces," Fred Stone's touring vehicle of last year, and "The Honey Mooners."

Among the foreign plays are Walter Hasenclever's "Napoleon Intervenes," a satirical comedy; "Business with America," a German comedy adapted by Arthur Wimperis and Rowland Leigh, and the London success, "Autumn Crocus." Several others are possibilities, among them another Wimperis adaptation of Alfred Savoir's "Sexes and Sevens" and Leo Perutz's "A Trip to Pressburg," which has been adapted by William A. Drake.

"High Noon," by Edward Roberts and Frank Morgan Cavett, has had its name changed to "There Was I." It is coming out in the Arthur Hopkins fold with Hope Williams at the head of the cast.

MEN'S FASHIONS AND WHY

How Did Trousers Come About? Well, Tweed Slacks Are Far Kinder to a Pair of Skinny Shanks than the Gaudiest of All Silk Shorts.

By Walling Ford

INASMUCH as nothing valuable has been contributed to the literature of men's fashions in the last century, it is my intention not only to increase that stock of knowledge, but the tendency of man to present himself in the most desirable attitudes.

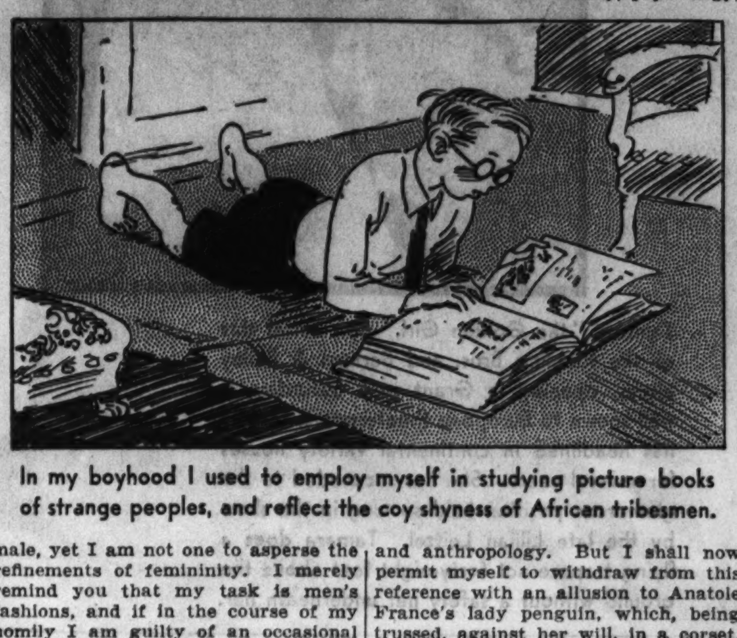
In pursuance of this determination I have in mind an item of itnerest illustrative of practicality. In my boyhood I used often to employ myself in studying picture books of strange peoples. And I would reflect righteously upon the coy shyness of African tribesmen in their homely and simple dress. Perhaps I sketch too hastily and too inaccurately when I say dress, for our occidental prudery may not sustain the figure of speech which I so boldly establish.

MARKS OF DISTINCTION.

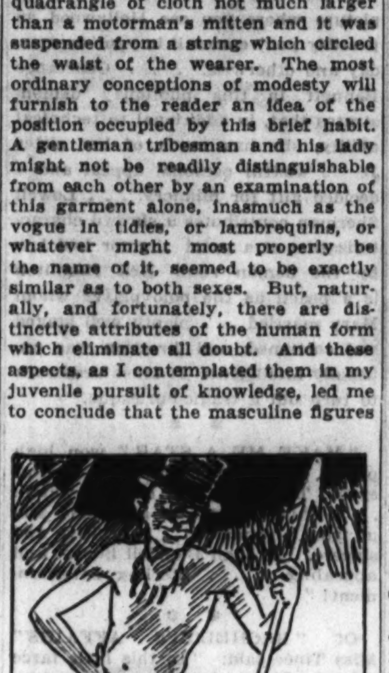
● The dress of which I speak was a quadrangle of cloth not much larger than a motorman's mitten and it was suspended from a string which circled the waist of the wearer. The most ordinary conceptions of modesty will furnish to the reader an idea of the position occupied by this brief habit. A gentleman tribesman and his lady might not be readily distinguishable from each other by an examination of this garment alone, inasmuch as the vogue in tidies, or lambrequins, or whatever might most properly be the name of it, seemed to be exactly similar as to both sexes. But, naturally, and fortunately, there are distinctive attributes of the human form which eliminate all doubt. And these aspects, as I contemplated them in my juvenile pursuit of knowledge, led me to conclude that the masculine figures I was observing were more in accord with my instinctive, or perhaps you will prefer that I say my group, consciousness of primary values in virtue than were the female.

The quadrangular garment I have described as being no more important in size than a medium porous plaster —and, dear me! not nearly so secretive in the event of an unexpected breeze —the garment, I repeat, did seem to me to convey the idea that reposing preciously somewhere in the character of the tribesman was the sturdy principle of modesty.

I do not seem able to restrain an impulse to applaud the modesty of the male, yet I am not one to asperse the refinements of femininity. I merely remind you that my task is men's fashions, and if in the course of my homily I am guilty of an occasional abruptness you will, of course, set it down as an inadvertence.



In my boyhood I used to employ myself in studying picture books of strange peoples, and reflect the coy shyness of African tribesmen.



The dress was not much larger than a motorman's mitten.

IN THE SOCRATIC MANNER.

● Now, as do so many of our better writers, I indicate a lapse of years. An old friend of mine has made a journey into the African jungle and has returned with an amazing store of anthropological information. I am fondly addicted to the Socratic habit of asking questions.

"I suppose it is very hot," said I. "Hot for the natives, of course."

"Hot?" said he. "O, quite."

The casual tone he used caused me to stare at him somewhat sharply.

"I gather," said I, "I gather from the pictures I have seen that the temperature must be sizzling when it reduces clothing to a gee string and a dab of cloth."

"O, yes," said he. "A dab of cloth."

"Which," I persisted, "in such heat is at least a contribution to decency and self-respect."

My friend plucked his nether lip. "Decency?" said he. "Not at all."

"Not modesty?" said I, reflecting upon the years I had spent in applauding the homely virtues of the primitive peoples.

"Not at all," he said again.

"Then why the little flaps of cloth?"

QUOTH THE LADY PENGUIN.

● "African ants," said he. "Even a tribesman must sit down now and again. They sit on the ground. African ants are very ferocious."

I have presented this slight cameo only as a remote proof of the utility of men's clothes. Some day I shall toss discretion to the winds and stalk out upon the field of women's draperies. The subject invites, nay, compels research in anatomy, psychology, and anthropology. But I shall now permit myself to withdraw from this reference with an allusion to Anatole France's lady penguin, which, being trussed, against her will, in a corset, ceases her protests and glances coyly at her tormentors with the simpering observation, "I can endure it quite a little tighter."

Modesty, then, has not been the inspiration for men's fashions. In olden times aristocratic gentlemen permitted themselves startling liberties both in the quality and in the variety of their habiliments. This was because, being of noble birth, they were obliged to offer some substantial and ocular testimony of their superiority over those who were of mean birth. Also the aristocratic community considered that greatness of position implied greater capacity in the only two other things desirable to mankind, namely, food and shelter.

It seemed that, inasmuch as divine protection had given them a blood of more important chemical properties than that of the common people, divinity obviously must have provided them with a greater capacity for the enjoyment of human pleasures. So they pleased themselves with amazing wardrobes, with enormous dinners and splendid palaces. The last two I may dismiss in a phrase or two as not pertinent to our discourse. The desire to eat more than the lower classes for no other reason than that they were able to provide themselves with more things to eat, led quite naturally, to indigestion and death. And the delightful palaces became targets for the missiles of the tax burdened lower classes, targets that one couldn't miss.

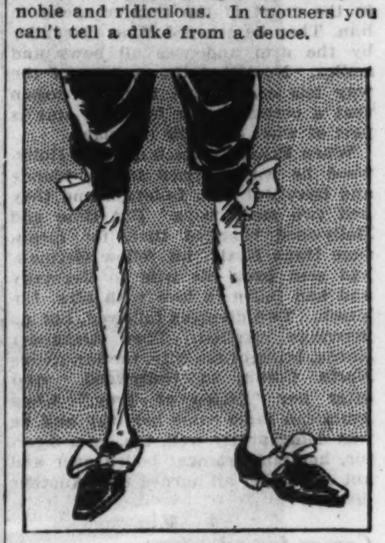
WHAT COULD BE NOBLER?

● But as to men's fashions. Palaces, as I have said, became incitements to revolt and food set up gastric disorders. Now, the garments of the male aristocrats were destined to become the very symbols of democracy.

We say trousers. In those days they were breeches, or shorts, or smallclothes, and most likely of silk. Let us pause for an instant upon silk breeches. The theory of nobility, of course, involved the idea of human perfection. A nobleman invited the presumption of a man who was noble; noble in refinement of blood, noble in manner, noble in thought, and, assuredly, noble in appearance. What could be nobler in the medieval conclusion than a lord, commanding in stature, clad in silk breeches, and exposing to the pleased stares of the common herd a pair of shapely calves?

There we are! Silk breeches must mean shapely legs. What a shock to a belted earl to discover that in addition to a poor digestion he had been tricked by divine right and dealt a pair of skinny legs!

It couldn't endure. A bony baron couldn't felicitate himself much in his silks when along would come a fish peddler with a pair of legs like a Trojan hero. It is said that the distracted French revolutionists invented trousers because they couldn't afford stockings. It doesn't seem reasonable. Trousers most probably were invented by the nobles with skinny legs. One can't be noble and ridiculous. In trousers you can't tell a duke from a deuce.



We say trousers. In those days they were breeches or shorts or smallclothes, usually of silk.

and makes flirtatious advances he sternly orders her out. After several desperate tries at getting his notice she feigns an appendicitis attack and bravely permits him to operate. He removes her appendix and finds it a beautiful, healthy specimen. It is so attractive an appendix that he, a master surgeon who knows a good innard when he sees it, falls in love with it. This affection slowly spreads to embrace the star herself, and she gets her man.

It didn't look as though the original could have been any better—but here is Gostony, another outraged author. From the earliest days actors or directors, or both, have been tampering with authors' 'scripts, with Shakespeare always a bleeding victim. Very frequently directors and actors take an author's faltering play and fashion it into a smashing success—entirely to the credit of the playwright, who gets more contracts, movie jobs, and fame. But if things go wrong it's the author, like the poor in the Cockney song, what tykes the blyme.

Burlesque Flourishes.

Burlesque continues its invasion of the theater zone. On 42d street Max Rudnick's burlesquers flourish at Al Woods' Eltinge theater, and the late Billy Minsky's strippers are at Abie's Irish Rose's Republic. On Broadway itself one of Billy's surviving brothers, Herbert, has rechristened the Central theater Minsky's Central. Another brother, Abe, has broken away from the family and has taken over another Broadway playhouse, the Gaiety, where "Minsky Burlesk" is spelled out in lights.

The theater will doze little longer. In Atlantic City the veteran William A. Brady is trying out a French play, "Domino," and a good many revues containing a good many stars are in rehearsal.

Helen Hayes Starts Each New Picture with Stage Fright

HOLLYWOOD—Helen Hayes was attempting to sit still for three minutes.

"I guess I can't do it." With that she stood up. "I wish this scene and the next dozen or two were over."

And then she admitted that during the first few days of the production of a picture she has "jitters," commonly known as stage fright.

HELEN HAYES.

Many players, no matter how experienced, have them—or it.

The symptoms, Miss Hayes explained reluctantly, include sudden perspiration on the brow, an inability to sit still for any length of time, a desire to pace rooms, pick up magazines, toss them away the next instant and fears that she will not give a good performance.

"I'd give anything to get the next week over with as quickly as possible —I'm that nervous," said the usually imperturbable Miss Hayes. "A million questions are popping in and out of my mind, all of them concerned with the character I happen to be playing.

"After I've seen some of the work I've done, I'm all right. But until I get that sedative, I'm anything but all right. I'm not even a good interviewee."

And with that she asked to be excused, her director having called. She apologized for leaving, explaining hastily that every scene puts her nearer her goal.

"I know," she said graciously, "if you come back in a week, I won't be concerned about jitters."

The golden hall of Castle Charlottenburg, the halls of Pergamon museum have echoed to beautiful music during the season this year, and for the first time the courts of the former kaiser's main palace in Berlin were used for concerts of Berlin's most famous brass bands.

Berlin also has her own foreign language theater, which at present devotes itself exclusively to the presentation of English and American plays —the English Playhouse, under the direction of Goesta Richter, a Swede. The star of the company is Florence Thiess, wife of the author Frank Thiess.

Richter runs the playhouse on the scheme of an American stock company, with season tickets and frequent changes of casts. His policy is to entertain the English and American colonies with a new play each month.

Noel Coward's "Private Lives," Milne's "Belinda," plays by Shaw, by Kaufmann and others are on his répertoire.

Amateurs also come into the field. One of the time honored institutions is the annual production of an American play by American students, given some time at the height of the season. The production this last season was Emerson and Loos' "The Whole Town's Talking."

WOMEN'S AID PLANS PLAY.

The Chicago Woman's Aid is sponsoring a presentation of the "Breadline Frolics" in the auditorium of the Medical and Dental Arts building, 185 North Wabash avenue, tomorrow afternoon. Men from the original cast of the show will furnish the program and the proceeds wil be given to them.

British Sloops Start Annual Job of Charting Seas

LONDON.—(AP)—In order to help make the seas safer for travelers, a fleet of British naval sloops has begun the annual task of charting the ocean highways.

This undertaking requires several months and costs more than $500,000.

The vessels engaged on the undertaking, equipped with many delicate instruments, will take tens of thousands of soundings and calculations, and the reports from them keep the hydrographic department of the admiralty busy for months.

New Cuban Dance Invades Pavilions Along the Riviera

NICE.—(AP)—Another new Cuban dance has invaded the Riviera dancing establishments. It is "El Son," the Cuban dance which resembles both the fox trot and the tango. It is chiefly interesting for the curious exotic music which accompanies it.

Special Cuban instruments have to be incorporated in the dance band. The music is as voluptuous and has as barbaric rhythms as that of the Rumba, the original Cuban dance, which has held unrivaled sway all over the Riviera since last winter.

Hollywood Ends Marriage for Foreign Stars

Chevaliers Latest to Join Long List of Headlined Incompatibles.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Maurice Chevalier's impending divorce points out to the interested gossips of filmland the fact that few headlined foreign couples remain married when Hollywood success comes to one or the other. Yvonne Vallee, the wife of Chevalier, spoke no English on her arrival in Hollywood, but drew a great many friends around her during her stay here.

YVONNE VALLEE.

It has been obvious for sometime that the pair were not hitting it off so well. One evening they entered a theater and sat together all through the show without speaking. When they left the theater Maurice strode well in advance of the petite madame and paid no attention to her whatsoever until a group of friends in the court of the theater spoke to him. Then he grasped Mme. Chevalier by the arm and was all bows and smiles. Now that the parting of the way has come there is much gossip that a certain other feminine star is part of what ailed the marriage.

When Ernst Lubitsch came to Hollywood he was married to the blonde and beautiful Mrs. Lubitsch and they had two small boys. But time and Hollywood changed that, for meantime Hans Kraly, his fellow German had sent back his wife to Germany and had fallen in love with Mrs. Lubitsch. Two divorces followed, but no marriage resulted. Then Alexander Korda, brought his wife, the beauteous Maria Cordia to Hollywood. And after her "Helen of Troy," when American fame came her way and he was doing pretty well, too, as a director, her temperament boiled over and got Alexander all burned up. Another divorce.

Career Impediments.

Dolores Del Rio sought a divorce and got it from Jaime Del Rio after her success in Hollywood made her husband a fifth wheel in her career.

DOLORES DEL RIO.

Michael Curtiz, another European director and his wife, Lucy Doraine, foreign film star, essayed the bright lights of Hollywood. Divorce ensued. Curtiz is now married to Bess Meredyth, American scenarist.

It only needed two successful motion pictures in America for Ronald Colman to feel that his career would go ahead better without his English wife, Thelma Raye. She lives abroad on an allowance, but there has been no divorce.

Montague Love, another Englishman who made good in America, found that his wife, the former Gertrude Fanny Love, did not fit into the picture. He won his divorce because Mrs. Love wouldn't join him on this side of the water, and then wed Marjorie Hollis, divorced English actress.

The devotion between Greta Garbo and Mauritz Stiller, now dead, was no secret when they came to Hollywood. But with her success in foreign hands, Stiller felt useless and broken and returned to his native Sweden where he died leaving Garbo to go on to great fame.

American, and especially Hollywood, ways of living are so different from anything to be found anywhere else in the world that foreign couples must be closely devoted to each other to weather the storms of success in the film capital.

Smart Hollywood Offices.

Something new in swank offices was opened recently by Mrs. Ben P. Schulberg and associates, who are operating an agency for writers, directors, and actors. Mrs. Schulberg, who for long has been a Hollywood social light, says, "I did so much of this same sort of work unofficially for friends while I was the wife of Mr. Schulberg that they urged me to undertake it in a business way for them now."

KAY FRANCIS.

The old office of Mrs. Schulberg is in the new mode, in white. The furniture is modernistic and enameled in white with panels of plate glass. The only color note is the flowers in the vases and the curtain drapes made of a green patterned landscape printed on white ground.

The day of the opening many Hollywood celebrities were present, including Kay Francis and her husband, Kenneth McKenna. Ken has a great gag. When he left for New York with his wife they planned to go to Europe, but never got out of New York due to work and illness. Ken outsmarted everybody by making a lot of goofy pictures of New York and pasting them in an album entitled: "My trip to Europe." He has a great monologue to go with the pictures.

A Circus Importation

Tamara, "the Golden Girl," new aerial star of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey circus, opening in Grant park Saturday, is well known to European theatergoers, for she has headlined in continental variety houses for several years. She has succeeded to the glamorous position held so long in the show by the late Lillian Leitzel. Tamara does a flying trapeze act forty-eight feet above the ground without a safety net underneath her.

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Reaction to Film Makeup.

Dear Miss Tinée: Honestly, now, cross your heart and hope to die, what do you think of the way some of these movie queens make up?

Look at Joan Crawford. Why does she overemphasize her eyes and her mouth? There are pictures of her as Flaemmchen, the little stenog in "Grand Hotel," that are positively horrid.

And now comes Garbo with her washerwoman's knot and her ears showing. I bet if she were married she couldn't get away with it—not at the breakfast table, anyway. Why does she draw that heavy black line on her upper eyelid, put on those bristly eyelashes, and wash her face of all expression until it looks like nothing but a death mask? One picture of her shows her all dressed up for "Grand Hotel" in a "gorgeous lounging costume" which looks like the Mother Hubbards we used to wear. She has her hair smeared back with a funny round comb in it as if she were all ready for the cold cream. And the caption asks: "Doesn't she look grand?" No, she does not, if you ask me. She looks like somebody who has just come over from the old country

And speaking of costumes—in Mata Hari—no, I won't start on that. I will control myself. I will! I WILL! @$%-c@$%-c@$-c.

The dead white faces of the screen with their black lips to which we have grown accustomed are unnatural enough. Why exaggerate them further? At this rate we shall soon have mummers, with no human resemblance whatever.

Look what they did to Loretta Young in "Hatchet Man"!

And Fredric March as Mr. Hyde! How inartistic! I'd have liked another glimpse of Miriam Hopkins. Saw her in "24 Hours" and "Smiling Lieutenant." Isn't she interesting and unaffected? Lovely, soft hair. And Madge Evans, Dorothy Jordan, Sylvia Sidney—all lovely, young, natural. They don't try to be dramatic.

I'm about fed up on some of these old girls who no longer have any spontaneous reactions, but who think they can fool us with their studied poses and the same old technique in picture after picture. Just stand and gaze.

Now if those who produce pictures think that we who sit in the dark are so dumb that we don't know good from bad, artistic from inartistic, they are quite mistaken. Some of the stuff they expect us to swallow chokes us, some of it makes us very sick, and some of it smells so bad that we won't even go near it.

Got to quit, the typewriter has jammed. Yours truly,

GRACE B. MEIER.

Editor's note: O! O!

It's a Roomy World for Critics.

Dear Miss Tinée: Your note at the bottom of our protest seemed to ask for an answer. Here it is: We see such submediocre movies as "Secret Service" to enjoy them BY picking them apart. If a drama of any kind is incapable of providing the normal kind of enjoyment expected, it should be picked apart to ascertain why.

Our highly commercialized talkies are becoming notorious for their asinine blunders. One of the worst of the year is found in "Frankenstein," where a hunchbacked assistant steals a human brain in a large jar of preservative, conspicuously marked "Abnormal," and takes it to his master, who is supposed to be an intelligent scientist. Yet, according to the film, the scientist uses the deficient brain in his artificially created monster without even glancing at the unusually large label!

In "Doctor Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," a reputedly 19th century drama, modern incandescent light bulbs and a grand piano could be seen. To say nothing of many, many more errors.

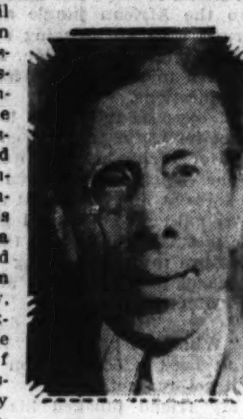
Thumbs Down on Joan.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have never written you before and have never criticized an actress, but after reading your column about Joan Crawford today I was moved to write and tell you I think she has actually made herself ridiculous looking. She has made her face over and must think it is beautiful whereas she's so artificial that I am not going to see her pictures any more. MRS. N. A.

Historiette

GEORGE ARLISS, the great English actor, was born on a Good Friday, April 10, 1868, in Bloomsbury, a district of London. He was christened George Augustus Andrews. His father, a printer and publisher in a small way, was nicknamed "the duke of Bloomsbury" by the neighbors. It's probably from his father that Mr. Arliss has acquired his distinguished appearance. After graduating from school, young George spent a year in his father's business, devoting himself in the evenings to amateur theatricals. He made his stage debut with the Elephant and Castle Stock company in London in a melodrama, "Saved from the Sea."



GEORGE ARLISS.

When 31 years old the star was married to Florence Montgomery, who was studying for the stage. He says he noticed her first because her arms were "nice." The two are devoted. They have no children.

Mr. Arliss is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 140 pounds. He reads in bed, walks an average of four miles a day, plays good contract bridge, and treasures some excellent etchings and a few antique watches. He and Mrs. Arliss are devoted to a parrot named Dinky-Bits-Hail-Columbia, which they have owned for years. They have been faithfully served for years by one Jenner, a valet, who report says once worked in a royal household.

On his large linked gold watch chain Mr. Arliss wears a little old gold pig which he picked up on his honeymoon on the way to the station. He is sure it has always brought him good luck.

Harris Theater Plans to Open on September 4

IT ought to rank in the by no means unimportant news that some of the Chicago theaters will one day reopen. There is word from New York that the Harris theater will turn up its lights on Sunday night, Sept. 4, for a piece called "Another Language," by Rose Franken. It is described as a comedy of New York life and was brought out in that city last April. The cast has not yet been selected, but the play is expected to go into rehearsal shortl. and to have a trial of three nights in Atlantic City before coming here.

From London comes a report that Charles Cochran is being worked upon to see the merits of coming to Chicago for the better part of a year to take charge of a series of theatrical, musical, and variety performances during the coming Century of Progress Exposition. For some little time there has been gossip hereabouts to the effect that it would be a smart thing to put together an entertainment which would be to this exposition what "America" at the Auditorium was to the 1893 World's Fair. Also, there has been continued hope in the east that Mr. Cochran would bring his London spectacle, "Helen," to these shores and the rumor is being seized upon with renewed avidity.

Vaudeville at the Palace theater includes the names of Floyd Gibbons, newspaper correspondent and radio star; the Million Dollar Fur Fashion revue; Grant Withers and Eddie Moran, movie star and comedian; Bud Harris and Tom Brookins, Negro comedians, singers, and steppers, and Amerique and Neville, heading a dancing and singing revue.

Polish day is being celebrated today at Riverview, also a picnic by the Hinckley & Schmitt Welfare association. The thirtieth annual old settlers' picnic will be held tomorrow, with prizes for the oldest couple, the oldest citizen, the youngest offspring of the oldest citizen, and many others. Si Perkins and his old fiddlers play at the ballroom Wednesday nights, and there are coasters and other attractions in large numbers.

Films Flourish Despite This Month's Heat

Torrid Days See These Productions Which Mae Tinee Selects from List.

By Anna Nangle.

breaker, a gay farce, South Sea adventure, comedy, sophistication—anything your heart desires—is to be had in the movie marts.

Here's what Mae Tinée, now gayly vacationing many miles away, thought of the half dozen selected as winners this month:

"WHAT PRICE HOLLYWOOD?" was described as follows: "Here's a picture where you see Hollywood as possibly you've seen it in your dreams, day and otherwise. . . . Constance Bennett in this photoplay demonstrates that, in additional to technical ability, she has much of her sister Joan's wistful personal appeal and a decided gift for mimicry. . . . Lowell Sherman contributes a shrewd characterization of a great director laid low by the demon rum. Neil Hamilton is a peach as the polo player whom Mary married . . . plenty well staged and costumed, and direction was unusually intelligent. It takes headwork to turn out a tragic-burlesque."

"MAKE ME A STAR" won high praise. "Laughing with tears in your eyes! That'll be you as you watch. . . . Stuart Erwin is a lovable and unusual personality . . . intuitive and sincere. . . . Joan Blondell honest and appealing. . . . Sterling entertainment!"

* *

Of "BACHELOR'S AFFAIRS" Miss Tinée said: "In this little farce Adolphe Menjou impersonates a gouty, asthmatic but immensely wealthy bachelor, whose money charms attract the eye, whet the desires, and arouse the determination of the gold digging elder sister of a little dumb dora, who looks so much like Jean Harlow that she might just as well be Jean Harlow. . . . While the story is the lightest sort of summer farce, it's crisply presented against charming backgrounds that have been gorgeously photographed. The acting is competent as refers to the elder members of the cast. Mr. Menjou is entertainingly in character throughout. Minna Gombel is pat as the designing sister. . . . The dialogue zips along revealing some real drollery here and there, and what you are about to scowl down as an anti-climax turns out to be a delightful surprise."

"THE WASHINGTON MASQUERADE" caused the critic to start off: "I—know—a—pict-ure—you're—going li-ike . . . !" The film's qualifications were listed as follows: "Lionel Barrymore's one. A timely story with an idea is another. Then come: Superfine direction. Brainy acting. Beautiful and appropriate sets. Dialogue that hews to the line and keeps your interest alert. A pat and courageous finale. Sounds good? IS good! . . . Lionel Barrymore has never done anything better than his characterization of the silver-tongued western senator. That sentence contains all possible encomium. . . . May you enjoy 'The Washington Masquerade' as I did!"

"SOUTH SEA ADVENTURES" . . . "a glorious, seafaring adventure in which Zane Grey plays hero. Here's a real life fishing picture to make your very pores cry for the woods and waters. . . . It depicts the fulfillment of a dream. . . . The film drops you off at various points along the way and introduces you to fascinating scenery, laughing natives, and odd customs. The photography throughout is magnificent and there are several views of racing waves . . . that are the loveliest things you ever saw!"

"NEW MORALS FOR OLD" presents the problems of children and parents. "Lewis Stone and Laura Hope Crewes are natural and believable as the harried father and mother . . . Other parts are nicely handled. . . . The finale carries a consoling note for brooding parents. If you've brought the kids up right, it soothes, don't let their callow peccadillos worry you. They'll eventually come out nice and white from life's washing machine."

Bits aBOUTem.

Here's good news for the numerous THOMAS MEIGHAN fans. That gentleman started for Hollywood recently to begin work in "Madison Square Garden" for Paramount. . . . MR. AND MRS. MARTIN JOHNSON, who recently completed "CONGORILLA" for Fox, will use airplanes as their mode of transportation in their next African safari, according to a news note. . . . MAURICE CHEVALIER'S next is to be "The Pied Piper of Paris." . . . ERNEST HEMINGWAY has had another novel purchased for picture production. "The Sun Also Rises" will be made by RKO-Radio. HELEN HAYES and GARY COOPER have been selected by Paramount for the leads in "Farewell to Arms." . . . Another modern novel, "The Painted Veil," by SOMERSET MAUGHAM, is to be produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. . . . According to PHOTOPLAY: "Clark Gable likes jade green—it serves as a sedative. Joan Crawford can't stand orchid. The sight of bright orange makes Ann Harding ill. Apple green is Norma Shearer's favorite color."

According to the FILM DAILY, a SILLY SYMPHONY, one of those delightfully animated and tuneful cartoons created by MICKEY MOUSE'S papa, WALT DISNEY, has been produced in color and will be released shortly under the title, "Flowers and Trees."

Lady Astor Loses Verbal Tilt with Brilliant but Tardy Guest

Story Is Told of the Victory of Italy's Late Ambassador to London, Baron Chiaramonte Bordonaro.

By Cousin Eve.

A STORY of that brilliant man, the late Italian ambassador to London, Baron Chiaramonte Bordonaro, who died lately. Just before they closed down Cliveden, their great and beautiful place on the Thames last fall, Lord and Lady Astor had a big Sunday luncheon. A friend of mine was there. It was not an extinguished, but a distinguished, party, and his excellency, the Italian ambassador, was late. He did not come, so they cocktailed and went in without him.

No name cards were used, and Lady Astor tried a tour de force attempting to seat her guests by inspiration. "Duchess, will you sit here? No, go around the table—and sit by Lord So and So. Dicky, will you go over near Lady Dash? Lady Violet, please sit there—no on second thought, on my husband's left." It was an utter hullabaloo, everybody more or less shunted about, regardless of title or estate.

The place at Lady Astor's right was left vacant for the missing Italian, and she ordered the chair removed to emphasize his lateness. Finally the handsome ambassador appeared. He had had a motor mishap. The hostess evidently decided to punish him for being late and what not, so after he had found his place she instantly and in her most brilliant and spectacular manner began to speak in a loud clear voice of Italy's foreign policy. It displeased her. On she sailed, whacking at this, walloping that, criticizing everything.

In Defense of His Country.

Baron Chiaramonte ate on unperturbed. Finally, when Lady Astor had finished her attack, which lasted many minutes—in fact, through several courses, the Italian, in a soft and courteous voice, began the defense of his country. One by one, in the order in which the critiques were made, the able diplomat took up the items, disposing of each concisely and with finished ease. With the most perfect politeness he defended his beautiful Italy and the Italian state in a supremely brilliant manner.

And when he had summed up and concluded the entire company but one burst into spontaneous applause. Lady Astor, vivid and temperamental, had thought to surprise and scatter Baron Chiaramonte's defenses, but instead of that she had given him a chance to show his extraordinary mentality and ability. On her own ground with all the honors and handicaps she was defeated by the one she had ambushed. Poor Chiaramonte is dead!

Spanish Organize Club.

The Spanish in Chicago, or to be exact, those who speak the soft, lisping language, have got themselves together into a club, yes, even in these thin times. Called La Sociedad Hispano-Americana de Chicago, it was organized over a year ago at the house of Col. Nathan MacChesney and Mrs. MacChesney in Hawthorne place. Mrs. MacChesney is a college woman and one of the most accomplished linguists in town. I think she was the child of a diplomat and brought up abroad. In any case, she speaks Spanish with ease.

The Sociedad Hispano-Americana grew out of a Spanish class and is formed further of Spanish speaking consuls and their families in Chicago. They go in for Spanish culture, folk songs, folk lore, drama, modern fiction, and history. You'd be surprised to know how many fine looking, dark skinned consuls we have — Chavarri from Peru, Delgado from Colombia, and the learned Prof. Brenes-Meser of Northwestern university [formerly minister of education in Honduras].

Officers of the club are Mrs. Nathan MacChesney, honorary president; president, J. Parker Van Zandt; vice president, Dona Ester Perez de King; treasurer, H. K. Rucavado, consul of Costa Rica. The secretary is Mrs. Lois Gilbert.

The most interested Spanish scholar in Chicago is certainly Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick. For the last four years she has had a daily lesson at 3 in the afternoon. And nothing diverted her—no luncheon, board or club meeting canceled the hour of Spanish. Her professor, a cultivated man kept the pupil au courant with the political situation in Spain and she is able to read the Spanish papers and speak with authority of men and ministries, cabbages and kings.

Somebody, I believe it was Charles Pike, asked Walter B. Wolf, who is by way of being a wit, what kind of car was the shining, splendorous craft drawn up at the curb. "Follies of 1929," was his swift reply. And that would have enchanted his interlocutor, who is a swift one at comeback himself.

Chicagoans at Bar Harbor.

Robert Hall McCormick left town before either of the conventions. Quite a few people flew forth knowing that things would be expected of them if they stayed. Mrs. McCormick went even earlier to Bar Harbor and opened her house there. Her three tall, splendid looking children, two daughters and a son, are with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Howard also left before the conventions, also for Bar Harbor, where it has been cold. In fact, it is cold all summer. The Howards have a white elephant inherited from their progenitors at Bar Harbor with nineteen bedrooms in it. And one would willingly wager that only one-fourth of those bedrooms and perhaps not that much have baths.

I was visiting once in a terribly grand house in England, in the country. It had a cupola on it and everything, and was built by Sir Christopher Wren. But this great architect left no space for closets or baths, and my room, which had a luxurious bath, saw a constant and amusing procession of women shimmying through, sort of bathroom hospitality, as it were, from other gorgeous suites in that wing.

But that wasn't what I started out to say, at all. What I was all set to write was about Robert Hall McCormick, who was at Bar Harbor with his sister, Mildred McCormick. He is about to sail for Europe and will be in Paris for some time. Miss Mildred McCormick's cottage at Bar Harbor recently took fourth prize in an architectural contest over all the country. Seems it was a made over house, one of those darling little ancient houses that our New England ancestors lived in two hundred years ago, with fan lights over the door and very prettily proportioned rooms, all white or gray, and resting snugly among the flowers. Inside they are done with quaint wallpapers, early American furniture and not much of that. Keynote is simplicity.

An Amusing Story.

Everybody is crazy about small houses nowadays. They don't cost

Lovely Mrs. John B. Small Vermont Village of Dorset Knows Its Politics

From the Coolidges, Kin to Cal, to Lincoln's Great-Grandson, They're Interested.

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

DORSET, Vt.—[Special.]—Up here in this tiny Vermont village we are seven miles from a railroad station, but nearer to Washington than we were this winter when we lived just ten minutes from the nation's capitol. Here everybody talks politics, from the Coolidges, kin to Cal, who farm it up the road a piece, to Abraham Lincoln's great-grandson, Lincoln Isham, whose hollyhocks wave a friendly greeting to our three terriers as they hike over the hills a-chasing woodchucks.

Down in the village "Snowstorm" Charlie Wade, one time state legislator, all time friend, tells us many a tale of the old days at the state capital when Senator Austin was "just a lad lawyer." Then he takes us into his home to show us the picture on tope the piano of the state legislature when he, Charlie, was a member. In the picture one figure attracts us, and bewilders. It is the figure of a man, tall and straight, but headless.

And Charlie tells the story. The headless man, we'll also keep him nameless, since he's the first cousin of a famous writer, went to the legislature for one term, loved its pomp and circumstance, ran again, was defeated.

Stayed in Montpelier.

But, like so many of our Washington statesmen who find it an anticlimax to return to Hickory Corners once they have tasted of life along the Potomac, this gentleman couldn't bear to go back to Peru mountain after the glamour of Montpelier. So he went up to Montpelier and stayed there the entire session, fussing around as busily and as futilely as Tom Heflin did in Washington after Alabama had decided to send somebody else to represent it.

The former colleagues at Montpelier were indulgent. They let him attend committee meetings, let him have the little perogatives that delight an office holder. But when it came to the last day of the session and the boys assembled on the capitol steps for the official picture, they balked at having an ex-member in the group.

But there he stood in the center, near a white marble pillar. When they sought to oust him he reminded them that the capitol stairway was public property; dared them to remove him. Several legislators went to the photographer, who was pretty distraught by this time, and told him they'd never pay for a picture "with that fellow's face in it."

The photographer went right ahead focusing his picture, pausing only long enough to assure everybody who came his way "that fellow's face" wouldn't be in the picture.

Nor was it. The frugal Vermont picture man carefully decapitated the ex-legislature and made such a neat job of it that the fellow's shoulders blend right into the marble pillar. Which is a lesson, it seems to me, for many a Washington official.

A Solitary Democrat.

Down the road by the pond is the home of Al Roberts, the J. P. who keeps honey bees. He's a Democrat, one of the few in the village, and was postmaster here in the Wilson administration. And so for him we brought along a copy of the Congressional Record, for the closing day of the session, containing the speech of Senator James Hamilton Lewis, oratorical fellow Democrat. It was that speech, you remember, which caused the galleries to break into such a burst of applause as to drown quite completely the rebuking taps of Vice President Curtis' Republican gavel.

Across the road from Al Roberts is Albert Cheney, 83 year old gentleman who's farmed it in Vermont, taught music in Boston, ridden horseback through the Black Hills, and came back here to live tranquilly among the tranquil pines of Cheney woods.

But when the winter snows come and it's difficult for him to make his way through the huge drifts across the meadow to Perry's store Mr. Cheney mourns for what he calls the "sociability" of the old Deadwood days out west.

And so it seemed to me there was a certain pathetic pertinency in his political analysis when he sat before our fire last night and talked of political conventions and campaigns. Especially when he said this: "Now, that fellow Al Smith. I don't know what sort of President he'd make, but he'd be a good neighbor; yes, indeed, a good, jolly neighbor."

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

much to run, and it isn't so easy to get maids as it was. So many have taken their savings and gone back to Sweden, Ireland, or wherever, which reminds me of a true story. A friend of my own had an excellent cook for years and years. Her wage was a salary. She cooked magnificently and the family entertained much. They also lived on the fat of the land. And the cook did all the ordering.

Last fall when the outlook was black my friend told the cook that she must cut her wages $3 a week. Not much, to be sure, but something, and no more parties, no elaborate food. The cook immediately revolted. Take a cut? Not she, so she gave notice.

Before leaving she asked for speech with her employer. The audience was granted. She said she was sailing for Europe to spend the winter in Paris, and came to inquire if the Ile de France or the Europa were the better boat. She purposed to sail by one of them.

She was advised that this was traveling de luxe. Whereupon the cook remarked that having just withdrawn the sum of $40,000 from the bank she felt entitled to travel de luxe. And she did.

Returns to Europe.

After several months spent in high life along the Riviera she returned to Chicago, put her money back in the same bank, and took a position as cook with another friend of mine. There she draws her former wage, and I recently observed that her employers are not as slender and sylphlike as they were once. However that cook accumulated $40,000 has been intriguing me greatly. Did she play the bull or the bear market, or did the purveyors of this wealthy family remember her on Christmas and birthdays?

But this will probably always remain one of life's unsolved mysteries.

Very sorry, all of Michel Lazareff's friends, that this popular man has gone back to Europe, to Paris. Coming here years ago after the upset in Russia, he was first of all a sort of supersecretary to Harold F. McCormick, who brought him over. His social progress was wild fire, and quite a time after he passed into the employ of the Potter Palmer family, who at that time had an entourage of prominent Russians. "Miche" was the head and leader of these. Formerly an officer of the imperial chevalier gardes, the swankiest of all the czar's troops [pictures of him taken then looked like Lohengrin], he played excellent bridge and had the most charming manners.

Lazareff's connections were interesting. He was a first cousin of that unsung hero, Prince Yousoupov, who plotted successfully against the monk Rasputin, who was murdered one winter night in the billiard room of the Yousoupov palace in what used to be Petrograd. His mother was a sister of Princess Yousoupov. A gallant old lady, she came here on a visit last June from Nice, where she lives. In her fourth score year she wore big, floppy hats and snappy clothes, and hers was a wonderful vivacity. Many were the parties given for her by her son's friends.

But the news was soon out that she regarded ladies' luncheons and ladies' teas as a waste of her good matrimonial chances. "Too much woman" was her criticism of our dove parties, and would have no more of them. Once, at a dinner dansant, sitting near Senator Lewis, she besought that engaging southern gentleman to dance the tango with her.

"No, madame," replied the courtly law maker, "that I will never do." But on a falling market Chicago was not as gay a place as Nice, and Mme Lazareff returned to her home there.

Last winter Mr. Lazareff engaged in the flower business and, with true Russian daring, opened up a flower store in Oak street at the very moment when everybody was cutting down on luxuries. This little shop is now closed and he is in Paris. He has two sisters there, one of whom is a mannekin chez Molyneux, which means that she must be a chic, stunning creature.

Visitor from Vienna.

Another visiting European, here recently, was Baron Tanty of Vienna. A mild, amiable young man, with large, blue eyes, he has all the ingratiating charm of the Austrian nobility. I met him first at a small dinner one hot night when he was under the wing of that engaging Hungarian, Baron Gabor Vezenegh. Baron Tanty came to Chicago with an idea. Here it is. The owner of a beautiful and ancient schloss outside of Vienna, [illegible] for scientists from all countries. Sounds very amusing, and a good theme for a light opera libretto.

The baron is a fast worker. I met him first on a Monday night, and by Thursday he had got all over the lot and met many important people. On Thursday I found him lunching at the Blackstone with a lady he had met the day before at a tea, a Californian and one of the few left in the world who still has her huge fortune.

Baron Vezenegh is most popular in Chicago. Very tall and dark and of a certain handsomeness of physique and feature, he spends several days of each week at a Trappist monastery. And the world at large thinks him a Trappist monk in spite of his weekends at delightful house parties and his meanderings in local society.

Trappists, I think, are monks who don't go in society, and who study and meditate. The baron being immensely erudite and a great linguist, lectures to the members of the order in their beautiful cloister at St. Charles. He is, in short, their professor. The monastery is the grand building given, I seem to remember, by that generous and big hearted man, Stuyvesant Peabody, at the moment of his conversion to the Catholic church. The gift was something under a million.

About Some Newlyweds.

Mrs. John Hayward introduced the Hungarian baron to exclusive Chicago circles and it was from him I had a picture of the former Mildred Blair's new husband. Mr. Hayward comes from Canton, Ohio, and was a bachelor lawyer. He's good looking, prosperous, with a quaint house on Cape Cod, at Centerville, and an apartment at the Hotel Plaza, New York. The newlyweds are now down on the Cape. They both belong to the same church, which makes it very nice, both being deeply religious. Indeed, I have seen the former Mildred Marshall Blair, who was straight, slender and by way of being lovely as a madonna, with a heavenly expression, lead quite a large gathering in prayer. She could also sermonize, which I consider a very great accomplishment in these times, and unusual.

An old favorite in society of other years came to town during the conventions, Mrs. George Ingalls. Now a widow, her late husband left Chicago for an executive job with a big eastern road. And to my everlasting astonishment, Katherine, the only daughter of the house, now Mrs George Sloan of Virginia, raced up to the platform and seconded the wet plank. Tall, thin with dark hair sans chapeau, wearing simple brown sports dress, she read her speech in ringing tones—while the great Democrats of the land—let me see who were they: McAdoo, Alfalfa Bill Murray, Al Smith, Gilbert Hitchcock, Walsh of Massachusetts, Jouett Shouse, sur- [illegible] circle.

Aquatic Sports Chief Activity at Harbor Point

Little Folk of the Resort Are Honored by Formal Parties of Their Own.

HARBOR POINT, Mich., July 30.—[Special.]—Chicago's members of the summer cottage colony here are taking to the water, as the weather remains warm and the water is the most tempting place of all. Mornings are given over largely to golf, but when the wind freshens on the lake the sailboats are hauled out and sailing is the sport of the hour. The Point colony is preparing for the late August sailing races. Several cottages also are entering racing boats in the August regatta.

Social life of the resort just now is centering at the Little Harbor club and the New Point Bathing club in the sand dunes just west of the clubhouse. Mary Jane Curtis, Jean Hyman, and Mrs. A. Hershey of Chicago have been prominent leaders assisting the little folk of the resort at their Little Harbor club parties. Among the formal parties was one honoring Miss Elizabeth Huntzinger, given by her mother, Mrs. Ada Thatcher Huntzinger. At another Mrs. H. B. Kroger entertained at luncheon on the marine deck of the club.

Arrivals from Chicago.

Coming to join the Chicago colony at Idylwilde up along the Bay shore bluffs are Miss Barbara Poole, Lake Forest, and K. Konfeld and M. D. Follensbee Jr., Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Allan H. Little, Chicago, are at Roaring Brook for the season, while at Ramona Park recent newcomers were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Coll and Mrs. Nancy King, Chicago.

Mrs. Brown Pierce joined her daughter, Miss Barbara, for the remainder of the season. Mr. and Mrs. Emil Garrick and daughter, Marnie, arrived aboard their yacht Jacinta, and from here went on to Sault Ste. Marie. The club reports the coming of Nelson Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, Miss Marion Smith, and Mrs. Marshall Haywood of Chicago, for the summer. At cottage 78 are Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Strong and their daughter Madeline of Chicago.

Busy Sports Program.

The annual tennis tournament, the season's weekly golf play, and the annual play offs, the horse show, and the swimming championships will find many Chicago entries.

The Walloon Lake Country club, center of social life of the large colony of cottagers on that lake, is the scene of many bridge and dinner parties. Among those seen there during the week were Mrs. Anna Bruce, Mrs. E. C. Cox, and Mrs. C. W. Kuhn, Chicago.

George Pierce, Chicago, tied with H. Perfect, Indianapolis, to win the Walloon Lake golf tournament, each with a net 67.

Miss Jessie Stone was chairman and Miss Ann Andrews the main speaker of the day for the Illinois program of the Bayview Women's council at Bayview. Two hundred women from the Illinois section of the summer colony attended.

Bar Harbor Colony Assumes Gala Air for Tennis Week

BAR HARBOR, Me., July 30.—[Special.]—With the coming of tennis week and all its attendant activities the Bar Harbor colony is assumig a festive air. The destroyers Goff, Tillman, and Bainbridge of the United States navy are in the harbor, as also are the British boats, Danae and Dragon. Their officers are competing on the courts of the Bar Harbor club in the eleventh annual international maritime tennis tournament. The tennis enthusiasts of the island are also to play in the club tournament, which begins on Monday, for the Mossley Hall cup, given by Mr. Harold A. Howard of Mossley hall, Bar Harbor, and Chicago, the Malvern trophy, and the various other prizes.

The navy ball, which is the climax of the various gayeties of tennis week, and which is always preceded by private dinners at summer residences, will take place at the Bar Harbor club next Thursday, when the visiting naval officers will be the guests of the board of governors at the club.

The putting contest was postponed last Monday afternoon because of the sudden death of J. Harry Ketterlinus, for many years president of the Kebo Valley Golf club. The series will be resumed next week, and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney and Mrs. George Batcheller will preside at the tea table. Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton, Miss Frances Coleman, and Mrs. John B. Thayer III. have donated silver cups as prizes for the contests.

The Waldron Bates Memorial cup will be played for by members of the Kebo Valley Golf club next Wednesday, it has been announced by the board of directors of the club. Mr. Charles B. Pike is one of the directors.

Miss Eleanor McCormick, the daughter of Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick, had a table for twelve at the buffet supper at the Bar Harbor club last Sunday evening. Mrs. McCormick sat at the members' table with six friends.

French President's Wife Favors Black and Pink

Astors Discover Directing Sons' Careers Not Easy

LONDON.—(AP)—Lord Astor and his Virginia born wife, Nancy, would like their two sons to become interested in British politics and be, so to speak, chips of the old blocks, but it hasn't been so easy.

"Bill Astor," Lord Astor commented, "that is the Hon. William Astor, is at present in Manchuria. David has announced that he is going off to Russia on his own this year—good enterprise for a boy of 20."

Lord and Lady Astor, however, have been able to help other young people get started on political careers.

"It has been our endeavor," Lord Astor said, "to encourage them by giving them a start with street corner speaking.

"When I look down the benches of the house of commons, and even the house of lords, I see there several coming legislators who came to Plymouth and learned the ABC of politics there in that way in Lady Astor's constituency.

"And we are going to keep trying the same with our eldest sons."

Summer Exhibitions of Painting and Photography Fill the Galleries at the Art Institute

The Three Shows Which Stand Out Are Those of a Survey of American Art; Prize Winning Work of Chicagoans, and Canvases of Agnes Potter Lowrie

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE summer exhibitions have been running at the Art institute for something over a week and doubtless many persons are already acquainted with what the museum saw fit to offer us this year. To be frank, the fare is rather thin. There are three exhibits which stand out, the first that of the survey of American art which brings into one room some of the finest canvases from the permanent collections of the institute; the second, that of paintings by Chicagoans who have won prizes in various institute exhibits [the excellent and moderate character of this is surprising]; and third, the delightful, cool, whimsical and imaginative paintings by Agnes Potter Lowrie.

There is a fourth exhibit, that of the International Photographic Salon under the auspices of the Chicago Camera club, which spreads over three rooms, that will interest many persons, particularly those who enjoy the working of a camera in their own hands. To others of us this deliberate giving over of so much space to a medium which is more or less mechanical and which, when all is said and done, is not a decorative art but an intimate art for the albums and the family table, the laboratory and the hospital, is an injustice against our painters and sculptors who, this year possibly more than before, are in dire need of encouragement.

The biggest flop in the history of the New York Museum of Modern Art was its photographic mural exhibit last spring. Our show does not run that bitter length, because as photographs go these are good, some are extremely fine. Yet we would be no worse off had the show been more limited in number and hung in one room. In fact, we would have been better off. A great many of the prints shown are distinctly commonplace and commercial in character. There are portraits of children that clamor for a silver frame on grandmother's table. There are arrangements that need advertising matter run alongside to clarify their place in the scale of things.

Too Great a Blessing.

There are, of course, many beautifully handled themes such as sheep, landscape, flowers and birds. But three rooms of photographs is too great a blessing. One room of selected pictures would have been adequate and left one more amazed and interested at the progress of the craft. One room would not have forced upon us the conclusion to which previous exhibits have led us, that this show ought to be down in the print galleries.

The east wing galleries should be kept inviolate for paintings and sculpture. It is not, as apparently some think, a lowering of the value of photography to place it on a level with etching. Rather is it a vast compliment. But to see clearly the best in photography one has to adjust one's mind to the same scale as when one reviews etchings. Both are small, complicated, dependent on manner and the individuality of the craftsman who provoked them, and both lose when seen at a distance. Photography is, like etching, an intimate art. The portfolio more than the wall is its rightful exhibiting ground.

Paintings by Manoir.

So far nothing has been said of the room devoted to the paintings by Irving K. Manoir, who is recently home from over four years of painting and travel in Europe. His exhibit is a little disappointing, perhaps because it is fragmentary and in it he tries to cover an immense amount of ground. The paintings are visible symbols of his wandering. They are disconnected notes on what must have been a marvelous sojourn.

The cathedral from the south of Spain is, on retrospect, his most beautiful and complete canvas. In it one feels him settled and satisfied. Most of the other pictures are a little hurried, or where more static give the impression of being keynotes to larger work contemplated in the future.

Agnes Potter Lowrie shares a gallery with Tressa Emerson Benson. Mrs. Lowrie's painting is delightful, her arrangements of fleeting deer and silver sails are charming. About her entire group of pictures there hangs an enchantment. They are cool, impersonal, fanciful and decorative.

Across from them Mrs. Benson's canvases loom large and realistic. A duller palette tempers our enthusiasm. This is conscientious work, but for hot days rather heavy fare.

Emotional Canvases.

Ruth Van Sickle Ford has a room to herself and in it she rushes about in a determined fashion. Her pictures are heavy with paint and fraught with emotion. The Stark Davis portrait remains one of the worst concoctions we have yet seen. The nude woman watering geraniums with a teapot [she was seen first in the Increase Robinson studio gallery flower painting show of June] remains an enigma. For the rest there is a conglomeration of street scenes, interiors, landscapes and figures which make very heavy going.

Fred Biesel and David McCosh share a gallery. Both incline to the modernist persuasion. Where Mr. Biesel toys with its tricks, however, Mr. McCosh leans heavily. Obviously he has been told that nothing is necessary to success but dogged grit. And he supplies bountiful grit. His lack of all quality, all craftsmanship, all beauty and sense of proportion sets one's teeth on edge. Grit—some may like it; others will seek sanctuary among the photographs.

J. Karl Rauschert is the other man who has been given a one man show. His offering is slight. In the entrance passage there hangs his group of water colors, drawings and monotypes. Most of these are of French parentage. His portrait of a Breton woman is noticeable.

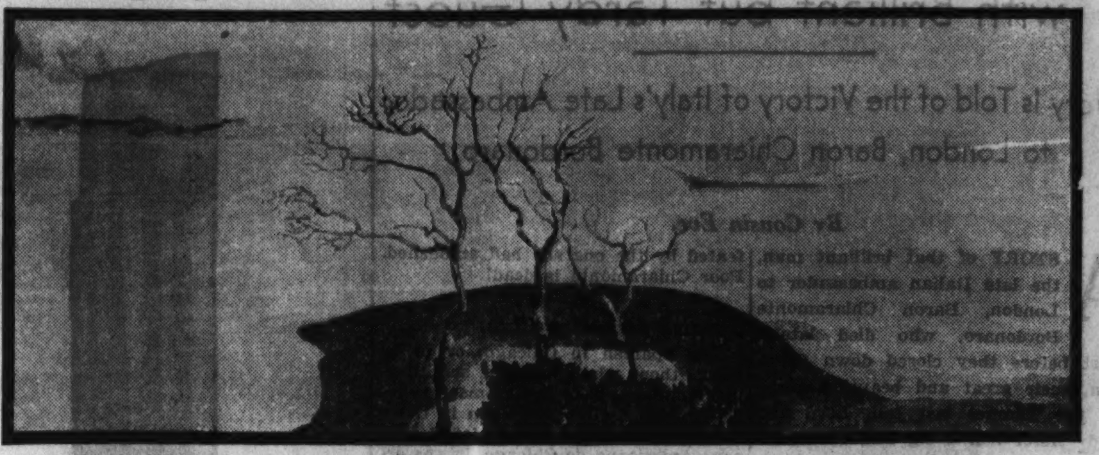
Worthwhile Collections.

This leaves us with the American Survey untouched and the prize winning Chicago artists scarcely mentioned. Both of these collections of works are worth while. If this array of summer shows is the weakest in the history of the Art institute, the Survey and prize winners do much towards pulling it out of the slough. We recognize with intense satisfaction that at some time in the course of American progress American artists could paint.

We welcome as an oasis the "North River Shad," by William Merritt Chase; the "London Hippodrome," by Everett Shinn; "On the Bank," by Frieseke; "The Toilet," by Mary Cassatt; "The Fisherman," by Bryson Burroughs, and "The Hills of Byron," by Daniel Garber.

Nearer to our day are the Chicago prize winners and here again we delight in recognizing that many contemporary painters are familiar with other than modernist precepts. The gallery as a whole is satisfying. The "Indian Composition," by H. C. Prusheck; "Dawn," by Gerald A. Frank, and various other canvases by various other painters give a definite assurance that the last word does not lie with Mr. McCosh.

These summer exhibitions will continue to Oct. 9.



"DOWN THE VINEYARD SOUND," by Agnes Potter Lowrie, one of the delightful, Japanesy effects from the one-man show of Mrs. Lowrie's work current in the east wing galleries of the Art institute. The exhibition will continue through the summer.

Tennis Matches Keep Notables Active in Paris

Interzone Finals and Davis Cup Contests Attended by Americans and French

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The tennis inter-zone final and the Davis cup series are proving a consolation to those who are kept in Paris without a vacation. Looking over the crowd seemed less like the capital in this holiday season than Deauville at an embassy June garden party.

While Americans are not numerous here just now they contrived to make a fair showing to see Ellsworth Vines Jr., play for the first time on French courts. But when it came to noisy approval of his plays there seemed to be scarcely a dozen Americans dotting the great throng, while the French joined the Germans in applauding vociferously for the players from across the Rhine.

Notables Present.

Many well known tennis and society figures were in front row seats. Helen Wills Moody, accompanied by her husband and mother, had places alongside Suzanne Lenglen and her mother. Ambassador Walter E. Edge, who returned from America too late for inter-zone games, but was represented by Norman Armour, chargé d'affairs, will occupy the diplomatic box with Mrs. Edge during the three Davis cup days.

Other notabilities were Mrs. James B. Duke, widow of the tobacco magnate, her daughter, Doris, and Gen. Comte de Chambrun and his wife, Clara Longworth Chambrun. Before leaving for Vichy Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt attended the first matches with Capt. Charles Raoul Duval and his wife, formerly Beatrice Tobin of California, and the former Maharajah of Indore with his American wife. Others were Anthony J. Drexel, Mrs. A. E. Niblack, the widow of the admiral, and Count Salm, whose divorced wife, the former Millicent Rogers, sat with her mother in an adjoining stand.

Seen in Paris.

Ruth van Sant, daughter of Mrs. Robert Hays van Sant, and her brother, Harvey, of Chicago were recent visitors here. They attended school in southern France near Pau and were voted the most popular and most useful students. They are now spending the summer at their villa in the Baleric islands. Ruth is planning to study art in Paris this winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Farrington Perkins now are traveling in Europe, first visiting London, where their daughter, Elizabeth, is in school, then going to Germany for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field, since arriving from America a few days ago, have been visitors here before going to London.

Lord Beatty, who recently lost his wife, the former Ethel Field, was here for a visit of a few days with his son, Lord Borodale, on the way to the south of France. The late Lady Beatty's son by a former marriage, Ronald Tree, also is here for a short visit.

Cape Ann Residents to Open Attractive Estates to Public

GLOUCESTER, Mass., July 30.—[Special.]—Opportunity to inspect several interesting houses at Cape Ann will be afforded the north shore colonists next Friday, when some of the attractive residences on Eastern Point in Gloucester will be open to the public under the auspices of the North Shore Arts association.

The committee in charge of this plan is made up of Mrs. Samuel Temple, an artist of "Harbor Lights," who is serving as chairman; Capt. Horace Bean of Boston, president of the association; Mrs. A. H. Atkins, a noted sculptor; Miss Margaret Fitzhugh Browne, an internationally known artist of New York, and Mrs. Julia Sulzer Griffith of Chicago.

The A. Piatt Andrews place, known as Red Roof, is one of the houses to be on view, and, with its terraced gardens, will prove alluring. The house and gardens of Miss Lucy Taggart of Indianapolis also will be open for inspection. Druimteac, the estate of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Leonard Jr., with its pool as a distinctive feature, will be open to visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pelham Curtis entertained at dinner at the Nahant club in honor of their daughter, the Princess Cantacuzene, who has recently come on for the season from Chicago.

During the hot weather that has prevailed for the last few weeks the pool at the Magnolia Beach club has proved a popular gathering place of the younger set. Among those who can be seen daily taking a sun bath on the sands or enjoying dips are Miss Barbara Wendell, Miss Florence Crane, Miss Catherine Noyes, Miss Barbara Mechem, Arthur Ellis, and John and Robert Mechem.

Keith Merrill has arrived at Avalon, Pride's Crossing, for a visit with his family.

Saratoga in the Spotlight of Racing Fans

First Days of August See Gathering of New York Notables at Famous Spa

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Tomorrow begins the midseason break, for with the first day of August comes the annual Saratoga month so eagerly looked forward to by all the equine loving members of society.

The best part of the Saratoga season, however, is that one doesn't have to be an ardent follower of king horse in order to enjoy oneself. While the atmosphere of racing and the track is undoubtedly preëminent, there is a quite distinct and separate social life that begins as soon as the day's racing is over and the lazy, somnolent streets of the ancient New York watering place become peopled with the amazing collection of characters that gather from all parts of the country for the meet.

Whitneys and Goelets, not to mention Phippses and Thaws, are not more apparent than the typical theatrical crowd and the quite as typical racing lot. This year the thespian members will not be as much in evidence as heretofore. Lean pocketbooks are the drama's lot, but the followers of racing and their ladies who travel about the country in the wake of the shifting racing schedule, will be found at night, poring over the day's results picking their choices for the next day's racing, and commenting, loudly and plaintively upon the money they would have made had not some stupid little " break " gone against them.

The Whitneys in Residence.

Up and down the wide streets, shaded by huge trees, go the smart motors of Gotham's notables. Already the famous owners of famous stables are in residence. The John Hay Whitneys have been in Saratoga several days now, making ready for the entertainment of the guests they will house all month. The Charles Minot Amorys have opened their camp at Lake Racquette and are soon to arrive at Saratoga, where Mrs. Amory's colors, as usual, will be represented in every day's racing.

The Earl E. T. Smiths are here as the guests of Mr. Smith's father, Sydney J. Smith and Mrs. Smith. Later on they will be joined by Mrs. Smith's sister, Mrs. Henry Delafield Phelps, and the latter's husband. Mr. and Mrs. William R. Hitt are coming from Washington, and others who will have cottages at the Spa include Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Livingston Gerry, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Sage, John Sanford, his daughter, Sarah Sanford, and his noted son, Stephen [Laddie] Sanford, the Sanfords having taken Mrs. R. Amscott Wilson's house for the season. Also present will be Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. C. V. Whitney, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark.

Wedding at West Point.

Society adores weddings in pretty settings, and no one can deny that the chapel at West Point comes under that heading. On the 10th Louise Irving McDowell, daughter of the George Irving McDowells, is to become the bride of Lieut. Henry Chestnutt Britt, U. S. A. Louise is a descendant of Thomas Willett, first mayor of New York, and a granddaughter of Melbourne McDowell. Lieut. Britt, who was graduated from the Point last June, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry H. Britt, is a grandson of the late Capt. Lemuel Chestnutt of the Confederate army, and a descendant of Cornelius Barentsenleight, one of the judges appointed by Peter Stuyvesant in 1663.

It has been surprisingly warm of late, all over the country, from what one gathers, but evidently not even extreme heat can keep the younger folk from elopements when they decide flitting is the thing to do. While Jean Whittemore Hamlin, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Hamlin, and Wells Newell, son of the William Newells, were known to be unofficially engaged, no announcement had been made and society was surprised to learn this week that the pair had dashed off on July 7th and availed themselves of the benefit of clergy.

Jean, who left Dana hall in 1929, is a descendant of Hannibal Hamlin, who was a member of President Lincoln's cabinet. She is a great niece of Dr. T. De Witt Talmage, and also a niece of George Whittemore. Her newly acquired husband is a brother of the attractive Betty Newell, who made her debut this last season. He is a descendant of the Theophilus Parsons who was chief justice of the Supreme court of Massachusetts. On his mother's side he is a descendant of Wilhemus Beeckman, intimate friend of George Washington. Young Newell left high school in 1930 and is a junior at Princeton now.

Dearth of Young Men.

Speaking generally, Newport, Southampton et all are suffering from a lack of young men to squire the debs about. It seems that the young men have had to work, so long is it from the good old days of the Friday to Monday week-end. The girls have nothing to do but swim and play bridge, backgammon or bagatelle.

Still, the invitation tennis tourneys are at hand, and that always means an influx of young men who can dance, so things are brightening this side of Point Judith and west of Montauk.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Nov. 11, 1880.

DEAR JULIA:

It is a pleasant Sunday afternoon. I came upstairs right after dinner, for I was dreadfully sleepy after a gay evening. Now, my nap finished, I shall sit down and write you about last night's festivity, for it was such an event. This great occasion was the annual game dinner given by John B. Drake at the Grand Pacific hotel.

You have probably heard of this event, to which we Chicagoans look forward every autumn. It is one of our most delightful functions, not only because of its unique quality—I suppose there are no viands anywhere such as Mr. Drake manages to get together—but also because all the old Chicago families are sure to be there, so it is an evening of friendly gossip.

I have attended all but three of the dinners since Mr. Drake began to invite the ladies about fifteen years ago. Will has missed only two. The dinner last night was the twenty-fifth, so it was of even more interest than usual, and Mr. Drake is so hospitable I am sure he was perfectly happy when he gathered his guests about his groaning board.

The number present was the largest ever there and Mr. Drake, reminiscing a bit for us, said the guests had kept in exact ratio with Chicago's growth. The first dinner given at the old Tremont house in 1855 was partaken of by 75 men. Chicago had then only 75,000 inhabitants. This year the guests numbered 500. Chicago's population is now about 500,000. So each guest represents a thousand of our population.

"Long John" Wentworth, who has missed few of them, says when the golden dinner is served it will be eaten by 1,500 guests, for by that time Chicago will have a million and a half people. The pièce de résistance of the feast, which served for decoration as well as an item on the menu, was a magnificent deer, cooked with hide and horns on. It stood at the entrance to the dining hall, a magnificent specimen from Wisconsin, weighing 210 pounds they told us. Near by was a raccoon, crouched on a mossy bank. A sand hill crane, a nest of prairie chickens, and other game pieces attracted much attention. One quite large piece showed "The Happy Family," a group of birds and animals as natural as life, picturesquely arranged in a grove.

From a game standpoint the bill of fare was probably the most elaborate that any company in the world was ever invited to discuss, Will says. He suggests I send you a menu, but I had already pasted it in my scrapbook, so I'll just copy the main items. Don't you think it is remarkable that all this game could have been assembled?

MENU.

Blue points in shell. Game soup. Venison broth.

ANIMALS.

Loin of buffalo. Saddle of blacktail deer. Saddle of mountain sheep. Red deer. Saddle of black bear. Saddle of antelope. Loin of moose. Coon. Woodchuck. Opossum. Red squirrel. Black squirrel. Jack rabbit. English hare. Mountain bison. Gray squirrel. Fox squirrel. Striped squirrel. American rabbit.

FOREST BIRDS.

Wild turkey. Cedar hen. Spruce grouse. Pheasant. Partridge. Prairie chicken. Quail. Blackbirds. Virginia partridge. Red winged starling. Pintail grouse. Ruffled grouse. Carolina dove.

MARSH BIRDS.

Jack snipe. Sand snipe. Yellow leg plover. Golden plover. Sand peep. Wilson snipe. Least sandpiper. Rice birds. Reed birds. Rail. Curlew. Sandhill crane.

WATER FOWL.

Wild goose. Canada goose. Laughing goose. Canvas back duck. Black and mallard ducks. Coot. Brant. Red neck grebe. Long tail duck. Green winged teal. Blue winged teal. Blue bill widgeon. Ring necked duck. Red head duck. Gadwald duck. Pintail duck. Cormorant duck. Shoveler duck. Scoop duck. Ruffleheaded duck. Butter ball duck. Dusky duck. Gray duck. Arctic goose.

Then there was stewed terrapin, green turtle steak, and frogs fried in crumbs. Do you wonder we are a stricken city today? I warrant there were inattentive listeners in many pews today.

Johnny Hand, who is indispensable at these gatherings, was there with his famous orchestra and played his sweetest music. The dinner was finished about 9 o'clock and dancing followed. A brilliant scene it was when the young people floated off [did I say "floated" after that dinner? Let me use the word "moved" instead], moved off in the waltz to the strains of "The Beautiful Blue Danube."

While the young people danced we older folk visited [visited is a verb, active, when old Chicagoans get together] and I did have such a good time. Near the center of the room at the host's table sat Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Washburne, Dr. and Mrs. R. N. Isham, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Medill, Miss Helen Snow, and Judge Tree. Mr. Medill is the editor of THE TRIBUNE, you know, and Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. McCormick are his daughters.

This picture of John B. Drake shows the famous host of the Tremont and the Grand Pacific as he looked when he gave the first of the game dinners which became such an institution in Chicago. The 25th annual dinner at the Grand Pacific hotel is described by Miss Clark in "When Chicago Was Young."

Others I saw were Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Barrett, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh, Mr. and Mrs. Harlow Higginbotham, Mr. and Mrs. William Penn Nixon, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Hughitt, and Gen. and Mrs. Philip Sheridan. Col. J. J. Wilson, western superintendent of the Western Union company, told me he had never missed one of the game dinners. Philip Wadsworth was one of the few present who had attended the first dinner.

A guest who attracted much attention was Lady Maud Ogilvie, a British visitor. She was simply dressed in a white muslin with a pink sash. Her hair was coiled at the back of her neck and she looked what she was—a real great lady. Those English! Without half trying they are impressive. Beside Lady Maud I felt overdressed, although I had been quite satisfied with my costume before.

But I did like my hair. It was done by a hairdresser whom I am now having once a week. I really need some one to do my hair every day, but since I can't afford that I am glad to be able to get the services of Hedda Mauer, who is an artist in her line. She washes the hair of our best families and I was flattered to have her accept me as a customer. She makes the hair look like silk, and I felt that my coil was as satisfactory as Lady Maud's own.

Will has just come in from a call at Capt. Averill's and says he learned there of a sale the captain has just made for Charles Tobey of the southeast corner of State and Jackson streets. It sold for $125,000 cash. I don't know who bought it. The price is considered a very handsome one, though it includes an elegant five story building with the land. This is in the downtown district, a very busy corner, with forty feet on State street and about 140 feet on Jackson, I think Will said. We are always interested in downtown sales, though Will no longer owns any land there. It shows Chicago's growth.

Now I must close.

Much love from

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

The "golden game dinner" anticipated by Mr. Wentworth never took place, for the Grand Pacific hotel was but a memory in 1905. But fond recollection presents these feasts to view and many readers have mentioned them. Who recalls the 1880 dinner or any other, at the Grand Pacific?

The lot at the southeast corner of State and Jackson streets, which sold in 1880 for $3,125 a front foot, is valued at $15,000 a front foot, according to latest available quotations.

Hedda Mauer, whom Martha boasted of having obtained as her hairdresser in 1880, is still a resident of Chicago, living at 2104 Hudson avenue. Mrs. Mauer celebrated her eightieth birthday yesterday.

Mary Hart Flanagan, 8200 Ellis avenue, writes: "I am an interested reader of 'When Chicago Was Young,' and have a pleasant memory of an incident of those bygone days. As a child I lived on the far west side, west of Douglas park, which was all prairie at the time of which I write. There had been a new drive made between Douglas and Garfield parks called Douglas boulevard. The Garfield park race course was located near the boulevard and the jockeys used to exercise their horses on it frequently.

"I happened to be walking on the boulevard one day—there were no sidewalks out there at the time—when a young man in a two wheeled rig, driving a beautiful horse, asked me if I would like a ride. I gladly accepted. When I alighted and thanked him for the lift he said: 'When you go home tell your father that you rode behind Maud S.' I do not know the date of this occurrence, but I can safely say it was nearly fifty years ago."

Mrs. M. B. Sherman, Fond du Lac, Wis., writes: "The following inscription I copied from a headstone in an old graveyard at Saybrook Point, Conn. Capitals, punctuation, and spelling are copied exactly from the original: 'Here lyeth the body of the Rev. Mr. Azariah Mather. Born in Saybrook, Febry. 11th, 1736. Aetatis 52. He was a faithful Minister a Generall Scholar an Eminent Christian a Very great sufferer. But now in Glory a triumpher.

"'His faith and patience twas to try
& Learn us how to Live & Die
Haveing the Wings of faith and love,
& Feathers of an holy Dove
He bids this Wretched World adieu
& swiftly up to Heaven flew.
Disturb not then his Precious Dust
With censors that are most unjust.'"

Frederick Werz, 6540 Yale avenue, forwards a briefer epitaph. He says: In an old Virginia cemetery there stands a weather beaten tombstone bearing the following inscription:

"I AWAIT MY HUSBAND.
May 26, 1840."

"HERE I AM.
Dec. 14, 1861."

"Some joker has added with a lead pencil: 'Late as usual.'"

M. C. McIntosh, Evanston, writes: "Many an hour when I should have been in school have I spent in the basement billiard room of the old Sherman house watching Fred Grant play billiards [four balls in those days] with W. T. Sherman and Phil Sheridan."

Sending Girl to College Is Not Expensive

Survey of Many Schools Disproves Idea of Extravagance.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, July 30.—[Special.]—Father is all wrong again. His lamentations over the expense of sending Eleanor to college are just a lot of midnight fudge. Lands sakes! Isn't Eleanor worth $1 to $2 a day for room, board, and care—not to speak of giving her a chance to catch a rich young man?

The average American college girl comes from a family whose income does not exceed $3,000 a year, and her simple, inexpensive living disproves the "lurid presentation of 'life in college' commonly given in fiction and the sensational press," according to Prof. Harriet Hayes of teachers' college, Columbia university.

Spending Isn't Necessary.

"While it's true that students often live in a more extravagant way while in college, they rarely do so in college-operated residence halls," Prof. Hayes says in a report prepared for the university student housing conference. "Spending a great deal of money in college isn't at all necessary. The heavy expenses that parents anticipate are almost all voluntary—buying clothes, amusements, keeping a car. The essentials are very reasonable."

Prof. Hayes has the facts at hand. She conducted a survey of 125 colleges and universities maintaining residence halls for women students and found that college residence is "vastly less costly than preparatory and boarding schools. Fifty-one colleges modified their rates this year, she revealed, while twenty-four raised their charges.

The 125 institutions, which included every type of college and university in every section of the country, reported room and board charges in women's residence halls ranged from $197 to $1,000 for the academic year.

Many Work Their Way.

"A high proportion of girl students are working their way through college, or at least partially supporting themselves," Prof. Hayes says. "The majority of students pay less than $1 a day for table board and only those in the more expensive private institutions pay as much as $1.50 a day for food.

"Prices for table board range from $180 to $400 for the academic year. Nearly half of these colleges charge less than $225 and only four charge over $300.

"Forty-three per cent of the institutions stated that their average room and board charges were from $300 to $400. Only two institutions, both state supported colleges for women, reported charges of $200 or less. Seventeen charged $500 or over and fifty-one $300 to $400.

"Fourteen of the colleges charging $500 or over are privately supported women's colleges. Rates in the publicly supported colleges and universities are distinctly lower. The coöperative residence halls appearing in women's colleges within recent years have resulted in a saving to students of from a fourth to a half of the cost of living in ordinary dormitories.

Co-operative Halls.

"Fourteen institutions report the operation of coöperative halls. Seven are large public universities, five are women's colleges. The basis of admission is usually financial need, good scholarship, good health and a coöperative spirit."

The duties of girl students in these halls, Prof. Hayes says, include the serving of meals, washing dishes, daily care of bedrooms and bathrooms and keeping halls clean. Eight colleges report that meals are prepared by the students.

Of the 99,480 women enrolled in the 125 colleges, only 38 per cent are cared for in college operated residence halls, Prof. Hayes found. Only 40 per cent of the co-ed institutions maintain dormitories for half or more of the women students, and only 2 per cent house nine-tenths or more.

American Heat Waves Novelty to the English

Young Night Club Folk Shed Shoes, Hose; Paddle in Wake of Sprinkler

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON.—[Special.]—An amusing thing for an American to experience is a heat wave in England. It sometimes does become warm enough to wear ordinary summer clothes—no wool. The meteorological office helps us to know the exact years —1877, 1895, 1921, and 1932!

On these occasions the Englishman deserts his beloved barometer, which hangs in every English hall, and studies with equal fervor the thermometer, which usually hangs outside the dining room window. The conscientious populace begins to conserve water for fear of rationing by the water board, and good ladies put bowls of water outside the garden wall so dogs and cats won't suffer. Lawns are allowed to wither while the trees above them are still the same luxurious green as always. Hyde Park, that beautiful breathing space running through the heart of London, becomes the Mecca of the West End, and, in the evening, to quote a world war officer, "It looks like a battle field."

When the borough of Westminster sprinkler passed up Regent street in the small hours one night, some of the bright young people, coming out of a night club, quickly shed their shoes and stockings and, like our own urchins, skirts knee high, paddled in its wake.

Midday in Piccadilly I saw a peer in morning suit driving his sports model in his shirt sleeves, but even the unaccustomed heat could not induce him to forego his top hat!

A West End caterer announced that 250,000 orange drinks were sold in one day. That is remarkable to an Englishman, but what is more remarkable to an American is that on the same day 400,000 cups of tea were sold.

It takes a lot to change an Englishman's habits.

Peers Like Simple Cooking.

"Eating like a lord" has for ages signified the best cuisine money could buy, but a review of the catering for the house of lords has brought to light the simple tastes of peers. The most popular order in the refreshment department of the house of lords is "sausages and mashed," the same thing that appears on every workingman's table several times a week. Next in popularity is "cottage pie," and for dessert plum tart has no rivals.

Peers prefer plain living, but some of them have certain idiosyncrasies. Two noble lords, for example, always sit at dinner with their hats on and are quite unconcerned about it. As for teas, the lords want to be served in the old fashioned way with plenty of cherry cake and Bath buns, no cream buns or sticky chocolate confections. And the tea must be strong, made with water that has just come to the boil, and in the latter case those who know will agree with them.

King George dined recently in the house of lords and it was the first time a king had done so in 400 years. The last royal guest was Henry VIII. King George's favorite dish, saddle of mutton, was served, and his favorite flowers, Malmaison carnations, were used as table decoration. The prince of Wales is like his father in his appreciation of good, plain English fare. And as for wines, "drinking like a lord" more often than not means barley water!

Hidden Architecture Revealed.

Strolling along the walk which flanks the north side of Henry VII.'s chapel at Westminster one day recently, I stopped to watch three workmen unrope some scaffolding from the railing and carry it away. There was nothing arresting in that, and the event might have passed unrecorded had not one of the workmen remarked that the removal of those poles was the end of a ten year job. In 1922 they were put up for the cleaning of the walls of this beautiful chapel.

And what a wonderful thing is the architecture, now revealed in all its beauty! The intricacy of sculpture has for more than a hundred years been concealed beneath the accumulated grime now removed from all thirteen of the buttresses. People who have passed by before the year 1932 have not really seen it.

Delicate English Oysters.

There are those in England who believe that the humble oyster will do something to bring prosperity back to the land. Oyster fishing is one of the oldest industries in England. No one knows when it first began at Whitstable, but it is on record that Julius Agricola exported oysters from the neighborhood in A. D. 80.

A weighty commission, studying the birth and death rates of oysters, tells us that every oyster produces about a million and a quarter oysters a year. Of these only two live, and these only if they are fortunate enough to fall into the right environment. And the North Sea isn't too friendly. With due ceremony a campaign has been launched to reduce the death rate of the baby oysters by a system of deep sea gardens on the bed of the ocean, "spat collectors," technically speaking. They won't know the results for seven years because the youngsters have to be that age before they are a marketable size.

But, nursery reared or growing wild, the English oyster is no favorite with Americans, who all complain that they have a coppery taste.

Scanning the new civil pensions list, I find the name of Arthur Llewellyn Jones Machen, who has been granted an annual pension of five hundred dollars for literary work. An essayist of sophisticated appeal, he has found more admirers in America than in England, although here he is the center of what might almost be called a clique.

His Saturday evenings are events to be remembered by those fortunate enough to be invited. He and Mrs. Machen and their son live in a little house in St. John's Wood, set behind a high wall, rather far back from the street. On this front garden one can play the old game Mr. Machen has made famous, Dog and Duck, and on Saturday evenings he treats his friends to a potent drink which only he knows how to prepare. It also is called Dog and Duck.

Goal of Autograph Seekers.

These evening are always times of talk and talk and more talk, and as the hours speed by, the talk gets better. When one finally tears oneself away, the busses have stopped and it is nicer to walk home and think about the flavor of the evening. Many Americans find their way to his house, usually with a volume under their arm which is gladly autographed by the author for his admirers.

Mr. Aylmer Maude is another one to receive a civil pension for his literary work, and particularly for his interpretation of the work of Tolstoi in this country. He also gets five hundred dollars yearly for life.

* *

One of the most popular forms of entertaining just now is the "scavenger" parties. One is invited to come to cocktails at the hostess' house and there the guests are paired so that each pair has a fast car, the faster the better. Then each couple is handed a list of the things they must search for and produce by a given time. Having collected all the things on the list or as many as possible, the guests meet again at the country home of another hostess, a riverside club, or a country inn, where the party continues with prizes, dancing, etc.

The variety of absurd things one must produce is part of the fun. Nowadays, in London, when a young man and a girl ring a door bell at midnight and ask for a mouse trap or an old suit of woolen underwear, no one rings for the police, but only tries to understand the sport of the people.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., July 30.—[Special.]—Mrs. William Felton Barrett of Rye, N. Kimball Salisbury of Chicago played on the Pittsfield team in a Berkshire interclub golf match at Stockbridge, in which thirteen clubs were represented. Stockbridge was first and Pittsfield second. Mr. Salisbury's score was 79, third from best.

George A. Holloway of Glencoe, Ill., who has joined the Stockbridge Golf and Tennis club for the summer, was on the winning Stockbridge tennis team in a match against Taconic club, Williamstown.

Mrs. Edward De Witt Shumway has returned to Lake Forest after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. W. Rockwood Gibbs at Rock Ridge farm in Richmond. Mrs. Gibbs, Mrs. Philip Weston, and Mrs. Charles W. Power of Pittsfield entertained for her.

Miss Helen Drake of Chicago has joined her sister, Mrs. Henry W. Farnum, at Marblehead. Mr. and Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice have joined the Saturday night subscribers at the Berkshire playhouse in Stockbridge, where John Van Druten's romantic comedy, "There's Always Juliet," is to be produced next week.

Mrs. David Shields Cook Jr. of Chicago is returning to Chicago on Monday after a two months' visit with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. James Ransom Walker, at Fair Acres, Stockbridge. She has abandoned plans for a trip abroad this summer and later will go to the Pacific coast.

Boasting About Inventions Is National Mania

Each Country Is Confident It Outdistances the Others in Ingenuity.

By Alex Small.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A long time ago, longer than I care to think about, I read in a textbook of the little red brick schoolhouse that the American people had produced more and greater inventors and inventions than all the others together, and that there was no limit to our ingenuity.

Trivial as it was, the event has always stuck in my memory. It was, I believe, my first contact with the notion of the relativity of truth; it provoked a mild astonishment which has remained with me ever since at the contemplation of all things human.

The puzzlement arose because I had just come from another schoolhouse—gray stone and ivy, this one—in another land far off [at least it was far off then], where I had read in another book practically the same statement. Only, as you can well imagine, the ingenious people this time were not Americans, but the others among whom I happened to be living.

Universal Claim.

Probably there is not a people, at any rate no great one, which does not make the same claim. I wonder if this innocuous form of chauvinism is not a product of the machine age. In simpler times each people probably contented itself with bragging that it was more courageous and virtuous than any other. The Romans even made it a point of pride, if we may judge by Virgil, to say that the Greeks were the clever fellows, but that their own job was to boss the whole world.

Somehow I had supposed that the French, who exhibit moderation and sound sense more than most other peoples [that is to say, not very much], would escape the contagion. The sad truth is that they have it, and in an acute form. On the average of once a month I strike an article in French journals or reviews proving or affirming that they, and not the Americans or the Germans, as superficial spirits might think, are the world's champion devisers of gadgets.

French Inventions.

In the latest screed of this nature which has come to me I read, for instance, that Réaumur and Martin, two Frenchmen, first devised and carried through a special process for the casting of steel, that "Vicat created the industry of hydraulic products" [sic], a certain De Chardonnet that of artificial silk, and Saint-Claire-Deville that of aluminum.

The list goes on. Photography was the joint invention or discovery, as you please, of Daguerre, Niepce, and the Lumière brothers, all Frenchmen. The latter are also generally given credit in France for the invention of the cinema. To a De Beaulieu is due the "rifled, breech loading cannon," to a De Reffye the machine gun, to a Vielle smokeless powder, to Dupuy de Lôme the armored cruiser, and to Zédé the submarine.

In more pacific fields I learn that the Frenchman Ader invented the airplane. I had supposed that the Wright brothers had something to do with that, but they do not come into this catalogue. And, surprise of surprises, who would have suspected that any one but an American devised a method of preserving foodstuffs by refrigeration? Not so, according to the information before me! It was a Frenchman, Charles Tellier. We can but bow our diminished heads.

An Impressive Story.

Still more impressive is the story of the invention of oxyacetylene welding. The first steps toward that were possible only after the discoveries of Lavoisier, Gay-Lussac, Regnault, and Dumas, all French scientists. Berthelot, greatest of all French chemists, discovered acetylene itself. Its cost, however, was far too high for practical purposes, some thousands of pre-war francs the cubic meter, but the price was reduced to a few hundreds by another Frenchman, Maquenne.

More strides toward industrial usage were made by Moissan, Villard, Claude, and Le Châtelier, all Frenchmen, and the thing was finally perfected by a certain Picart, also French. So we learn that "the oxyacetylene industry was created by the labors of 12 scientists [I seem to count 11, but no matter], all members of the Academy of Sciences"—of Paris, naturally.

This may be the true story, but I have a suspicion that in an American, British, or German publication it would be considerably different. In fact, I can imagine an account in which not a one of those 11 or 12 names would be mentioned. The thing actually happens for the internal combustion engine and the automobile, about which there seems to be endless controversy.

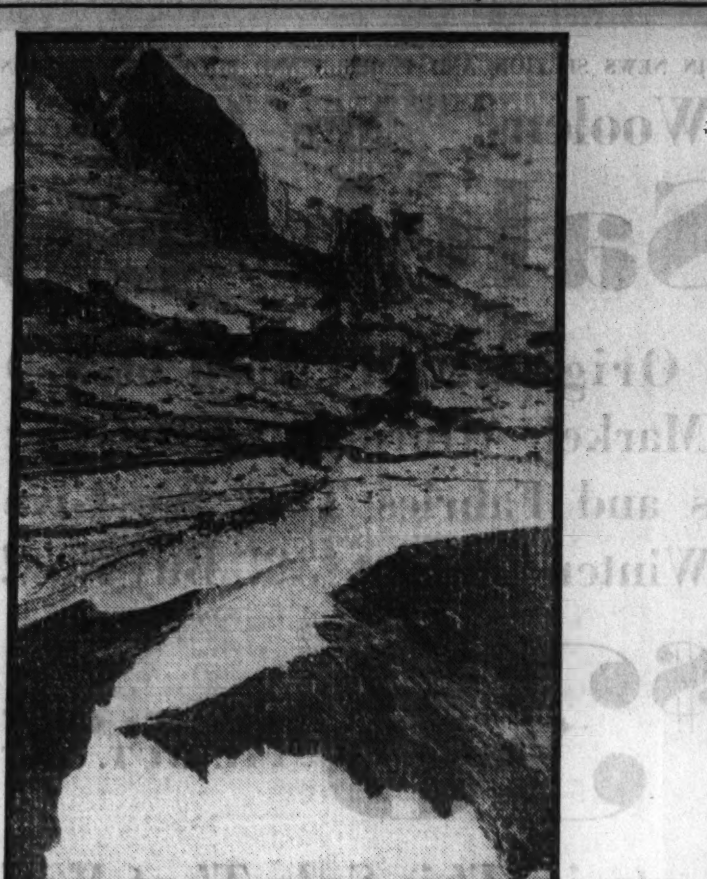
American Version.

A while ago I read a French account of that invention, which resembled closely the oxyacetylene story above, though one or two German names did come into it. Shortly thereafter I came on an American version, which gave no Frenchman any credit at all. It stated specifically, in fact, that "some Frenchmen lay claims to successive steps in the invention of the automobile, but their discoveries had no importance."

Whenever the pean to French inventiveness is raised, the author always has to forestall a possible objection which he can see rising in the reader's mind; how does it happen, if we French are such a clever people, that the others have so many gadgets and we so few? The answer to that is ever ready and ever the same. The ingenious Frenchman knows how to make discoveries and inventions, but he does not know how to exploit them. The practical, even if dull, Teuton or Anglo-Saxon seizes the invention and converts it into a going concern. There you are, sir; that explains why your daughter is deaf and dumb.

Well, if the French like that version, I for one have no objection. And suppose that it should be really true?

A Glacier Owned by a City



Arapahoe glacier, property of Boulder, Colo., is said to be the only municipally owned glacier in captivity. It serves as a source of Boulder's water supply and is used by students for the study of scientific phenomena.

Philippine Quinine Project Damaged by Locust Plague

MANILA.—(AP)—Attempts to produce quinine in the Phillippines have been set back by locusts. The pests damaged a grove of cinchona trees grown by the bureau of forestry on Mindanao island.

The plantation of several thousand trees was started in 1927 in the hope of setting up a local supply of the medicine, which is essential in the treatment of malaria.

The insular government at that time paid $2,000 for a tiny bottle containing cinchona seeds, buying them in Java. Attempts to get a larger supply were frustrated by the Dutch government.

The trees had thrived in the southern island, and millions of seedlings were ready for transplanting.

New Zealand Deficit Less.

AUCKLAND, N. Z.—(AP)—New Zealand's deficit for the fiscal year ending May 31 is understood to be around $8,000,000, which is about $2,000,000 less than Finance Minister Stewart expected.

Living Glacier Is Main Attraction at Boulder, Col.

THE university town of Boulder, Colo., which claims to be the only city in the world owning a living glacier, has developed an extraordinary variety of uses for this municipal icebox. Among these uses it lists:

Arapahoe glacier is the source of the city's water supply.

Science professors at the University of Colorado are taking classes in botany, glaciology, zoölogy, geology to the glacier for study during the summer extension school of the university.

College winter sports enthusiasts utilize the glacier for summer ski parties.

Mountain climbers visit it for ice climbing experience and nature study.

And the glacier is Boulder's major tourist attraction.

The city of Boulder, which leads all American cities in the amount of parks per acre of population, with two acres for every inhabitant, bought Arapahoe glacier from the federal government through a special act of congress. It paid $1.25 per acre, making the value of the glacier $4,600. Previously, however, it had purchased from the government the string of glacial lakes below—Silver, Island, Goose, and Triple lakes—paying $60,000 for them. Arapahoe glacier, twenty miles west of the town, moves 27 feet per year, and has all characteristics of the great Alaskan glaciers, including rock flour, annual rings, crevasses, and "red snow." The latter is a minute form of green algae which, when crushed under the foot, stains the ice with crimson.

Belgium Fosters Health.

BRUSSELS.—(AP)—M. Carton, minister of hygiene, told the International Medical congress here that Belgium's health improved 50 per cent in the first century of the country's independence, the deaths averaging 100,000 yearly right up to 1930, when the country had doubled the 4,000,000 population numbered in 1830.

Mexico Halts Radical Trend by State Curb

President Is Satisfied with Existing Relation of Capital to Labor.

MEXICO CITY.—(AP)—While other Latin-American governments have been talking about or experimenting with varying forms of socialistic laws, statements by Mexican officials have indicated that this republic is turning toward the right after fifteen years of testing leftist reforms.

Although declarations by President Oritz Rubio, members of his cabinet, and other leaders have not been definite as to the future, there have been plain statements that Mexico for the present would curb radical or semi-socialistic experiments.

The country has been proud of the fact that its "revolution of the people" led all others and that its plain spoken, somewhat radical constitution of 1917 was one of the first of that character.

But government officials now seem satisfied that a balance has been struck between capital and labor, riches and poverty, religion and the state. Future policies, therefore, are likely to be predicated upon that belief.

Highly significant was the president's recent circular to state governors. In it he told them to head off legislation "tending to interpret social situations by, or in the direction of, ideas foreign to the constitutional forms which govern us."

The circular contained a direct order not to permit passage of any more legislation like the Hidalgo and Vera Cruz expropriation laws which rendered all private property subject to confiscation for public purposes.

"This is ont the time," said the president, "to present to the nation or to the world a spectacle of disintegration in our system of government by acceding, with little judgment, not to general demands, which the federal government must satisfy, but to specific ones unrepresentative of the general need."

Alberto J. Pani, secretary of the treasury, followed this with a statement showing how harmful the Hidalgo and Vera Cruz laws were to the national credit. He said that their passage had been the direct cause of a drop in the peso from 3 to 1 to 4 to 1 against the dollar.

A real bombshell came from Gen. Abelardo Rodriguez, secretary of industry, commerce, and labor. He denounced may trades union policies as unpatriotic and harmful to the public, a doctrine which it would have been impossible to enunciate a year ago.

Spanish Farmers Ask to Be Freed of 800 A. D. Tax

MADRID.—(AP)—Thirteen humble farmers from Logrono province called on Premier Manuel Azana recently, and sent him delving into history books.

They asked merely to be relieved of a tax system imposed in 800 A. D. by the Visigoth king, Ramiro of Leon.

Their version was that the monarch divided their district among his thirteen sons, the peasants being compelled to bear arms in war and to pay annual taxes of four chickens, four pounds of wheat, and a cask of wine each in times of peace.

Administration of the property has descended from the princes to a board of assessors, which visits the farmers each spring, and this year threatened them with eviction when they argued that the new republic had wiped out monarchical institutions in Spain.

Brains, Not Brawn, Test of Policeman's Fitness in Victoria

MELBOURNE, Austrialia.—(AP)—Recruits for the police force in the state of Victoria now are selected for brains instead of brawn.

The height requirement has been lowered, but the intelligence standard has been increased.

Police Commissioner Blamey believes the day of muscle and strong-arm methods is gone, and that brains are needed to combat modern criminals.

"The old type of 'cop' might be able to manhandle half a dozen rowdies, but he comes to a confused standstill when confronted with the cunning crimes of the modern crook," he declares.

One of the newest recruits was a leading Shakespearean student and a member of the Poets' league.

Circus to Give Day's Funds to Infant Welfare

Receipts from Opening Performance Next Saturday Donated.

THE 25,000 babies and expectant mothers in the poorest sections of Chicago who look to the doctors and nurses provided by the Infant Welfare society of Chicago for care will benefit by two performances of a circus on Aug. 6.

The entire profits of the afternoon and evening performances of the Ringling Brothers & Barnum & Bailey's Combined show on its opening day in Grant park will be given by John Ringling to the Infant Welfare society, the society has announced.

Contributions Down.

Officers of the society pointed to the increased need of funds this year, and the fact that the society's income, 98 per cent of which is derived from voluntary contributions, has shrunk seriously. The funds received from the circus' benefit performances are expected to enable the society to continue its efforts in protecting underprivileged babies from sickness and death without abatement.

Many persons prominent in the social and business life of the city are patronesses of the benefit, including Mrs. P. A. Valentine, Mrs. Philip D. Armour, Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. P. A. Valentine Jr., Mrs. John F. Jelke Jr., Mrs. T. Philip Swift, Mrs. Donald B. Douglas, and Mrs. Lucius Teter.

Active for 21 Years.

For 21 years the Infant Welfare society has served the babies in Chicago's tenement areas. At present there are 20 stations operated by the society throughout the city's poor districts. This year the usual number of pleas for medical care have been increased greatly, families who never before appealed for aid now being forced to do so by unemployment.

The low infant death rate of only 10.7 per 1,000 babies was maintained by the Infant Welfare society in caring for 24,787 mothers and children in 1931. This was compared with the death rate of babies throughout Chicago, which was 56.5 per 1,000 for 1931. Pittsburgh's death rate was 71.6 and that of Cleveland, 53.2, one of the lowest among large cities.

Instructions Given.

The exceptional chance for life given babies in its care is provided by the society through regular, year round maintenance of stations. There the expectant mother comes for prenatal examination and care. When she brings her baby there, doctors examine the infant, instructions in child care are given her and nurses follow up the instructions by visits to the home to teach the mothers to carry out the suggestions.

The number of mothers and babies cared for in 1931 showed an increase of 52 per cent over the figure for 1930.

Philip D. Armour is president of the society.

Test Olive Oil for Motors.

ROME.—(AP)—Government engineers, representing the war, navy, and air ministries, are testing olive oil as a motor lubricant in the hope of finding a new use for one of Italy's leading products.

Charming Bag for Rare Occasions

THE charm of petit point never fades, even though the lovely mellowed colors seem to be faded. A bag of this charming stuff is a long cherished treasure, particularly if it has a jeweled clasp such as the one illustrated, an offering of one of Chicago's smart shops. Real bits of amethyst and rose quartz are cunningly set into the handwrought gold frame and clasp. You wear it on only the most festive occasions.

WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of parents of either the bride or bridegroom. Detroit Is Planning Attractions for Summer Visitors

TOURISTS to Detroit and the blue water playground of the Thumb of Michigan this summer will find an endless parade of colorful events and institutions that have become world famous. Some of the big conventions of the country are meeting in the Detroit area during the summer, bringing a flood of delegates and tourists from all over the nation.

A complete season of brilliant ceremony and celebration marks the opening of the tourist season in Detroit and special plans have been made to arrange tours for people visiting the city to see the famous Shrine of the Little Flower at Royal Oak, made nationally popular through the radio broadcasts of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor; Detroit's famous zoölogical park, the most unique in the world; Belle Isle, a beautiful island park in the middle of the Detroit river; the crossings to Canada by vehicular tunnel, the Ambassador bridge; the ferry boats, the steamships and the fairy playgrounds of the lakes.

Rum Runners Adopt Shakespearian Ruse to Smuggle Liquor

KALETY, Poland.—(AP)—Customs officers at this village on the German-Polish frontier were startled recently when they saw a hedge on the skyline begin to move.

It turned out that rum runners, emulating the Scots who moved Birnam Wood against Macbeth's castle, had decked themselves with leafy branches and were moving 25 gallons of spirits across the border.

The same gang last winter donned white sheets so as to "tone in" with a snowy landscape.

Breezes Cool Chicago While U. S. Swelters

Weather Bureau Figures Tell Story of City's Resort Climate.

USUALLY the period from July 10 to July 20 is the warmest of the year in the midwest. Cold figures, and hot ones, too, on temperatures during this period in 1932 prove Chicago's claim to summer resort standing.

Three cities were chosen at random for comparison, the intention being to show that the temperate breezes which frequently blow on Chicago from the broad cool stretches of Lake Michigan make summer life more pleasant here than elsewhere.

These cities are Minneapolis, well to the north; St. Louis, to the southwest, and Indianapolis, south.

Not Whole Story.

Comparisons show that the average daily maximum temperature for July 10 to July 19, inclusive, was 87.5 degrees in Chicago; 91.4 degrees in Minneapolis; 91.6 degrees in Indianapolis, and 95.6 degrees in St. Louis.

This is not the whole story. Comfort depends not so much on the presence or absence of high heat records as on the duration of hot spells. It does get hot in Chicago, but it does not stay that way long. Only four of the ten days in the city had maxima of more than 90.

In Minneapolis the mercury climbed to 90 or above it every day but two. In St. Louis there was one lone day of the ten when the thermometer failed to crawl above 90. Indianapolis had seven plus-ninety days.

Nights Are Cool.

There were five nights of the ten when Chicago's sleeping temperatures fell below 70. There were six in Minneapolis. There were two in Indianapolis. In scorching St. Louis there were none.

Not until July 18-19 did Chicago have two successive days when the maximum exceeded 90. And on the 18th, in the most blazing hours of the afternoon, a breeze drifted in from the lake and kept Chicagoans comfortable between 1 and 5 p. m.

It is an axiom that when it is hot in Chicago it is hot everywhere else in the middle west. And whenever the wind shifts to an easterly direction, which it frequently does, it is cool in Chicago while other cities swelter.

England's Royal Bulls Go Russian

SOUTHAMPTON, England.—(AP)—Two of King George's prize shorthorn bulls have gone soviet.

The king exhibited them at the Royal Agricultural show here. Russian livestock experts saw them, liked them, and bought them.

The animals, from the royal farm at Windsor, are on their way to Russia to help build up soviet herds.

Camel Foot Gives Clew for Vehicle to Travel Desert

CAIRO, Egypt.—(AP)—The feet of the camel may prove a clew in the development of a vehicle for crossing sand stretches in central Africa.

A 5,600 mile test motor trip, conducted by the general headquarters of the British troops in Egypt to determine the type of vehicle best suited to transportation of passengers and freight in this territory, revealed that crossing soft sand was one of the serious problems.

In a report on the survey it was suggested that manufacturers might learn a lesson from the camel, the feet of which bear an average weight of 12.58 pounds a square inch. In contrast, a light touring car with a tire pressure of 30 pounds was found to support a weight of 25 pounds a square inch on each wheel.

Duce Cuts Bonus Paid High-Salaried Italian Executives

ROME.—(AP)—High salaried executives frequently have cost more to discharge than to keep on the pay roll, so Italy has another law to regulate the situation.

The law accords a discharged employé a bonus of a month's pay for each year of service, with a limit of $250 a month for such a calculation.

Business conditions caused a multitude of firms to economize. Most evident of all reducible expenses were titled and social celebrities on boards of directors, often chiefly decorative. There were also many ageing employés, whose long service had transformed wages into comfortable salaries.

Seeking to replace the dead wood with young, low pay, adding machine clerks, corporations found that often it cost them from $5,000 to $50,000 to turn off certain employés. So Mussolini put through the new law limiting the basis of bonus computation to $3,000 a year.

Even with that limit it has cost some large banks and corporations $1,000,000 or more to cut their pay rolls.
